Simon is currently executive director of external affairs for the Charities Aid Foundation (CAF). The chair and chief executive will be joined by a board consisting of: Caryl Agard, David Baxter, Margaret Bolton, David Harbourne, Roger Singleton and Margaret Talbot. Work is also continuing on the location, shape and function of the agency. A programme board which comprises representation from central and local Government and the sector meets every six weeks to drive forward the establishment of the Capacity Builders Agency.

Closed Religious Orders

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what he expects the effect of the Charities Bill will be on the charitable status of closed religious orders; how many such orders qualify for charitable status; if he will place in the Library a list of those orders which qualify for charitable status; and if he will make a statement. [36697]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 12 December 2005]: Entirely closed religious orders are not now charitable. The Charities Bill, if enacted in its current form, will not change this position.

Countryside Alliance Protests (Parliament Square)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were arrested under the Prevention of Terrorism Acts during investigations of offences alleged to have been committed at, immediately after, or in connection with the Countryside Alliance protests in Parliament Square on 15 September 2004. [35714]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The police have advised that no-one has been arrested under the Terrorism Act 2000 as the result of investigations linked to the Countryside Alliance protest on 15 September 2004.

Cyclists

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many pedal cyclists have been convicted of offences relating to contravention of road traffic acts in each of the last five years. [37442]

Paul Goggins: Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform is given in the following table. It shows the number of offenders found guilty at the magistrates court for offences connected with pedal cycles, England and Wales, 2000–04. Court statistics for 2005 will be available in autumn 2006.

Departmental Estate

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total cost was of relocating the Home Office. [31796]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The relocation of the Home Office was carried out through a Private Finance Initiative (PFI) project the capital costs of which were met by Annes Gate Property plc. My Department pays a combined charge for the accommodation, facilities and other services provided under the PFI contract. For the financial year 2005–06 the amount is expected to be £32.7 million. In addition £12.6 million was spent between January 2002-April 2005 on technical assurance for the project, clearing the surplus buildings, relocating ICT equipment and associated activities.

Departmental Guidance (Evidence/Documentary Access)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is with regard to (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department giving evidence to the (i) Scottish Parliament, (ii) National Assembly for Wales and (iii) Northern Ireland Assembly committees; and to what categories of document he gives (A) full access, (B) restricted access and (C) no access to the (1) Scottish Parliament, (2) National Assembly for Wales, (3) Northern Ireland Assembly and (4) House of Commons select committees. [37382]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Requests for the attendance of Ministers or officials to give evidence to the devolved legislatures and for the provision of information to the assemblies, will be considered on a case-by-case basis. This consideration will reflect: the principles set out in the Cabinet Office guidance "Departmental Evidence and Responses to Select Committees" (July 2005); the policy outlined in the Department for Constitutional Affairs Devolution guidance note No. 12 "Attendance of UK Ministers and Officials at Committees of the devolved legislatures"; and the requirements of the Freedom of Information Act. The principles underlying the provision of information to House of Commons Select Committees are set out in the "Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees", particularly section 4B and 4C.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many publications were issued by his Department in each of the last five years. [33645]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The number of publications issued each year by the Home Office Communication Directorate and the Research, Development and Statistics Directorate, which is now part of the Communications and Development Unit, since 2001 are listed as follows:

Financial year (1 April to 31 March)	Total number of publications issued by CD and RDS
2002–03	584
2003–04	656
2004–05	[2]841
2004-To date (30 November 2005)	404

[1] No figure available from RDS for this year.

[2] The number increases during 2004–05 mainly as a result of a new working structure introduced in November 2004. At this time, to improve efficiency, the Home Office set up a new system of working with the Central Office of Information.

Notes:
Figures are provided for the period from 1 April 2001. All figures include Command Papers produced through Parliamentary Section.

This new system was publicised around the Home Office and many areas that had previously made their own arrangements for publications started to use the COI. This led to an increase in the number of recorded publications. Before this time, it would only be possible to identify all Home Office publications at a disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who the Director of Performance and Finance is in his Department; what specialist finance qualifications he or she holds; and what the details are of his or her career to date. [26311]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The position of director of performance and finance in the Home Office is currently filled on a temporary basis, pending appointment of a permanent successor to the previous director, who left in October. This post reports to the director-general, financial and commercial, Helen Kilpatrick, who is CCAB qualified and has more than 20 years experience of financial management.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff in his Department have been relocated into London and the South East in each of the last five years for which records are available. [31744]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There is no policy of inward relocation into London and the South East, and insofar as centralised records can be checked, no such relocation has in fact taken place over the past five years. Of the moves involving 10 or more staff, for HO Core and Immigration and Nationality Staff from 1 January 2000 to 2004 the majority are moves within the same city or area.

Aside from the move to the new headquarters building at Marsham Street which involved staff already in the London area there have been no major moves in 2005 within the core Home Office. Figures for relocations are not available for HMPS or the United Kingdom Passport Service.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff were employed by non-departmental public bodies and agencies for which he has responsibility in 2004–05 in (a) total and (b) each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK and (c) London. [35946]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The latest available centrally-held information is: Total Executive NDPB staff numbers by Department as at 31 March 2005 are recorded in Table two of Public Bodies 2005, a copy of which is in the House Libraries, and which is available online at: http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/the_future_of_the_civil_service/agencies_and_public_bodies/publications/pdf/public-bodies/publicbodies2005.pdf. The number of staff in individual executive agencies as at 1 April 2004, including a regional analysis, is available in Civil Service Statistics 2004 which was published in February 2005, a copy of which is in House Libraries. It is also available online at:http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_of_the_civil_service/statistics/contents_for_civil_service_statistics_2004_report/number_of_civil_servants/index.asp. However the NDPB data is not detailed by region and this could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Underspending

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department's underspend was in 2004–05 (a) in cash terms and (b) as a percentage of departmental budget. [19249]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The following table provides the information requested. Please note that (a) provisional outturn has been used as final accounts have not been completed and (b) near cash excludes non cash costs but makes no adjustment for timing differences.

	Resource	Capital

Driving (Drugs)

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in England and Wales have been convicted of driving under the influence of drugs in 2005. [35040]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 5 December 2005]: Court statistics for 2005 will be available autumn 2006.

Environmental Sustainability

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what he has identified as the most significant sustainable development impacts in relation to the operation of his Department's estate pursuant to the Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate. [16195]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Department's sustainable development impacts vary according to the nature of the business carried out by its constituent areas. The key impacts in relation to the main Home Office and its agencies have been identified as follows: energy consumption; water consumption; waste generation; vehicle emissions as a result of commuting (sites outside London only); procurement of goods and services; employment of staff; estates management and construction. Additionally, biodiversity is an impact for the National Offender Management Service estate and Immigration Removal Centres.

Iran

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he has given to the inclusion of the People's Mojahedin Organisation of

Iran in the list of proscribed organisations under the Terrorism Acts; whether this list will be reviewed regularly; and if he will make a statement. [34563]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We review continually organisations for proscription and deproscription. We do not however comment upon which groups are being considered.

Khat Use (Somali Community)

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Government will publish its report on khat use within the Somali community. [35314]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The Government published its report on khat use in the Somali community on 24 November 2005. It is available on the Home Office website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/notes/november_summaries.html. A summary of the Findings of the research is available at the same site in Somali translation.

Maladministration

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many payments for maladministration have been made by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies, (c) its non-departmental public bodies and (d) other bodies for which his Department has responsibility in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [32248]

Mr. Charles Clarke: It is the policy of the Home Department, its agencies, non-departmental public bodies and, where appropriate, its sponsored organisations to make financial redress in accordance with the guidance set out in Chapter 18.7 and Annexes 18.1 and 18.2 of Government Accounting. However, the information you requested is not held centrally by the Department and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

National Minimum Wage

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many employees in his Department were affected by the rise in the national minimum wage on 1 October. [28972]

Mr. Charles Clarke: None.

The minimum rates for the Department already exceeded the new national minimum wage on 1 October.

Organised Crime

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from police forces in the United Kingdom requesting that the European Union develops an EU-level strategy for tackling organised crime. [35096]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 5 December 2005]: We have not received any representations from UK police forces requesting that the European Union develop an EU wide strategy for tackling organised crime.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what (a) legal and (b) constitutional basis the European Commission is entitled to develop and implement a strategy on tackling organised crime at a European Union level. [35281]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The European Council of 4/5 November 2004 invited the Commission (and the Council) to contribute to developing a strategy on tackling organised crime at the EU level under the auspices of the Hague programme. This programme includes subject areas such as immigration policy which fall within Title IV of the treaty establishing the European Community and police and judicial co-operation which fall within Title VI of the treaty of European Union. The Council therefore has an interest in working together with the Commission to develop this strategy.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the European Commission's document Developing a Strategic Concept on Tackling Organised Crime would involve the formulation of criminal offences at an EU level. [35530]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 6 December 2005]: As my Explanatory Memorandum of 25 July sets out, the document is a Communication from the Commission to the Council and the European Parliament. While implementing some elements of the Commission's strategic concept will require negotiation, scrutiny and potentially legislation, for example the Framework Decision on Fight Against Organised Crime, the Communication itself does not.

Sexually Explicit Print Media

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the availability to children of newspapers and magazines in retail stores that contain sexually explicit material. [34795]

Paul Goggins: I am aware that there is concern about the placement of certain magazines and newspapers that contain sexually explicit material in retail stores and their possible availability to children.

A combination of legislative and self-regulatory measures exist to protect the public: the Obscene Publications Act 1959 and the Indecent Displays (Control) Act 1981 are designed to protect children and others from exposure to inappropriate material. In addition, a voluntary code of practice, issued by the National Federation of Retail Newsagents (NFRN) encourages retailers to display pornographic magazines on the top shelf and not to sell them to people under 18.

However, I have asked my officials to raise this matter with colleagues from other Departments, the NFRN and others to ensure that the interests of children are properly safeguarded in this respect.

Sick Leave

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of his Department's employees who are within one year of the official retirement age are on extended sick leave. [32597]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Staff who are 59 and above on extended sick leave are detailed in the table.

	Staff on extended sick leave
Home Office	22
Prison Service	82
FSS	0
UKPS	4

Note:
1. Adelphi sickness figures commencing 1 January to 8 December 2005.
2. For HMPS and HO greater then or equal to two calendar months.
3. For UKPS greater then or equal to 26 days.
4. FSS ceased to be HO Agency on 5 December 2005. Its included because status change postdates question. No staff in category reported.

Social Enterprises (Milton Keynes)

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much Government funding social enterprises in Milton Keynes have received in the last three financial years. [35269]

Alun Michael: I have been asked to reply.

An estimate of Government funding to social enterprises delivered via the South East of England Development Agency over the last three years in Milton Keynes is £112,000. On a broader level, such is the diverse nature of social enterprises that significantly more funds have been made available. A further £40,000 has been put into the Wolverton social enterprise project and Growth Areas Funding has been made available to social enterprises in Milton Keynes; for example £375,000 for refurbishment of Acorn House part of the Milton Keynes Community Foundation and £300,000 towards the Milton Keynes Economic and Learning Partnership's "Vision Building". Milton Keynes will receive a professionally trained adviser for social enterprises supplied via money from the Home Office. Other funding streams going into Milton Keynes may also be considered to benefit social enterprises either directly or indirectly.

Speed Cameras

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether there are plans to introduce a test for slip effect in respect of mobile speed guns. [33681]

Paul Goggins: There are no plans to introduce such a test. To ensure accuracy, all equipment already undergoes very rigorous laboratory and field testing prior to the grant of type approval. The code of practice for the Operational Use of Road Policing Enforcement Technology issued by the Association of Chief Police Officers includes guidance on the avoidance of any potential problems arising from slippage.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 328W, on speed cameras, how many (a) convictions and (b) fixed penalty notices there were for speeding offences in each year from 1994 to 2004. [37015]

Paul Goggins: Available information on court convictions and fixed penalty notices issued for the offence of speeding detected by camera from 1997 to 2003 (latest available) is given in the table. 2004 data will not be available until March 2006.

Convictions and fixed penalty data for speeding offences detected by cameras[1], England and Wales, 1997 to 2003

2000	32,000	599,200[4]
2001	40,800	877,500
2002	46,700	1,135,400
2003	61,900	1,657,000

[2] Includes cases where fixed penalty notices were originally issued but not paid and subsequently referred to court.
[3] Only covers tickets paid where there is no further action.
[4] Following publication of 2000 data, Northamptonshire police force revised their 2000 figures for the number of fixed penalty notices issued for speeding offences from 70,300 to 34,800 (a decrease of 35,500). In consequence, national data has been revised.

Victims of Rape

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance on dealing with victims of rape has been given to police forces in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [34802]

Paul Goggins: Guidance on investigating serious sexual offences was produced in 2005 on behalf of the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) by the National Centre for policing excellence. National police training on serious sexual offences is now being developed, based around the guidance. Furthermore national service guidelines for developing sexual assault referral centres (SARCs) were produced in October 2005, jointly developed by Department of Health and the Home Office.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Parliamentary Process (Initiatives)

Mr. Harper: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission if he will make a statement on the findings of user research commissioned by the Commission to inform future initiatives on involving citizens in the political process and informing them of the work of Parliament. [36779]

Nick Harvey: In December 2004 the House of Commons Commission asked the Group on Information for the Public to commission research into users' experiences of the parliamentary website. The findings of the qualitative research identified scope for improvement in several respects, and have closely informed the proposals for a radical redesign of the site.

In March 2005 the House of Commons Commission confirmed that it wished to fund the production and distribution of a guide on voting to be sent to all new voters on or around their eighteenth birthday. Officials commissioned qualitative research to inform the selection of material to appear in the guide. Research will be undertaken to ensure the effectiveness of the draft guide before its production and further research will be undertaken once the guide has been issued to assess its impact.

Further user research is currently under way to measure the potential interest in a new visitor centre, and to identify the expectations and requirements of those who might visit. The Parliamentary Education Unit has also recently commissioned research into users' experiences of its work.

The House partly funds some projects run by the Hansard Society. The "Connecting Communities" project completed in early 2005 aimed to build stronger links between Parliament and members of the public through a series of structured visits to Parliament supported by an educational pack. The findings of this project informed the planning of a number of House services, and were reflected in the Modernisation Committee's report on Connecting Parliament with the Public. The project also led to a booklet entitled "Your Parliament", a valuable addition to the House's publicly-available information sources. A second project, "Enhancing Engagement", built on this programme and developed practical proposals to bring Parliament closer to the public, especially those least engaged in the political process. Further research by the Hansard Society to inform future developments has recently been commissioned.

Public Gallery

Andrew Stunell: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what measures will be taken to remedy the loss of visibility from the Public Gallery of the southern portion of the Chamber as a result of the erection of the permanent screen; and if he will make a statement. [36881]

Nick Harvey: In July 2004 the House of Commons Commission agreed that a permanent screen should be installed in front of the front row of the Public Gallery. In the course of subsequent detailed planning for erection of the screen, it became clear that it would have to be located some 40 centimetres in front of the line of the existing gallery front panel so that it would be aligned with the stone window mullion and wall panelling on the side walls as well as being aligned with the ceiling decorative ribbing. This resulted in the need to install a horizontal timber shelf to connect the new glass screen to the front panel, thus reducing the proportion of Members' seats which are visible from the Public Gallery.

Following representations from the hon. Member, a wide-angle shot of the Chamber from the southern end will be shown on one of the three monitors already provided on each side of the Public Gallery. As a result, those in the Public Gallery will for the first time have a view of that portion of the Chamber hitherto outside their line of sight.

Serjeant at Arms' Residence

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission which company is used to clean the Serjeant at Arms' residence; and how many people are employed for this purpose. [37728]

Nick Harvey: Apart from the exterior of the windows, which are cleaned by MITIE as part of the cleaning contract for the Parliament Street block, the Serjeant at Arms makes his own arrangements for cleaning.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Anti-retroviral Drugs

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of the role of charities in the distribution of anti-retroviral drugs in developing countries. [37629]

Mr. Thomas: The role of charities in anti-retroviral treatment (ART) provision reflects the strength of charities in health services more generally, including as a health provider and in improving demand. DFID has funded two reviews recently, suggesting that charities and other civil society organisations make up a large proportion of the service provision in health in many countries. They are also often the provider of choice of the poor even if they have to pay. Charities have a particular role in fragile states or states emerging from conflict. Many charities working in the field of HIV and AIDS are able to reach marginalised groups that Governments do not, such as intravenous drug users. They have also shown ability in reducing the stigma and discrimination associated with AIDS.

DFID recognises that increased delivery of health services and drugs, including anti-retroviral treatment, needs to be matched by investments in poor and vulnerable people's ability to demand services and hold service providers to account. Charities and other civil society organisations have a role in promoting an open debate about treatment and care, and in increasing the accountability of Governments. DFID also recognise that these organisations have an important role to play in advocacy and in giving communities a greater voice in ensuring the delivery of quality services. They are also critical for communicating information about services to communities, which increase people's access, ensure people understand the requirements of treatment (treatment literacy) and the importance of adhering to drug regimes.

While recognising the primary role of Government in ensuring that health services are provided to people, DFID is exploring ways to better support charities and other civil society groups. In 2000, we supported the Christian Health Association of Nigeria (CHAN), an organisation focused on co-ordinating the network of Christian voluntary health services in the country, and giving people access to health care that was previously unobtainable. DFID supported CHAN to improve CHAN's organisational effectiveness, resulting in the establishment of CHAN Pharm to procure and distribute drugs including anti-retroviral treatment (ART).

In Malawi, where DFID is a major funder of the health sector, the Ministry of Health is developing contracts with mission hospitals and other charities to provide essential health services free at point of delivery. This will include the provision of HIV counselling and testing and the provision of anti-retroviral therapy. Already, the Government uses the Christian Health Association of Malawi (CHAM) facilities to provide ART free of charge.

Chronic Back Pain

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken in his Department to help civil servants with chronic back pain. [33873]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has an ongoing assessment process in place to identify the risk of musculoskeletal disorders and provides information, instruction and training to staff on workstation ergonomics and manual handling.

DFID offers staff a range of equipment including appropriate ergonomic seating, ergonomic keyboards and adjustable work stations and we work with our occupational health team to educate employees on good workstation ergonomics. The Department also provides on-site fitness and wellbeing centres and subsidised health club membership.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what work his Department has undertaken to increase the capacity of countries with an antenatal prevalence rate of HIV/AIDS of one per cent. or more to take full advantage of the flexibilities in the trade related aspects of intellectual property agreement; and if he will make a statement; [35694]

(2) what work the informal advisory group on access to medicine has undertaken to increase the capacity of countries with an antenatal prevalence rate of HIV/AIDS of one per cent. or more to take full advantage of the flexibilities in the trade related aspects of intellectual property agreement; and if he will make a statement. [35693]

Mr. Thomas: DFID's work on trade related intellectual property rights (TRIPS) to ensure increased access for countries with high prevalence rates of HIV/AIDS, is one pillar of a broader UK strategy to increase access to essential medicines to developing countries that includes direct assistance to developing countries; work with the private sector; and support of research and development efforts. DFID works with the Department for Trade and Industry (DTI), the Patent Office and other Departments, as appropriate, through the Cross Whitehall Working Group on access to medicines.

Developing countries and non-governmental organisations have expressed concerns that the World Trade Organisation TRIPS agreement, which provides wider international patent protection, would affect negatively the capacity of developing countries to procure cheap generic medicines.

DFID and other Whitehall departments have been working closely with the EU and the World Trade Organisation (WTO) member states to ensure that developing countries are given the necessary flexibilities in the WTO TRIPS agreement to safeguard their pressing public health needs. This has now been achieved with the recent agreement in the WTO to amend TRIPS to allow countries without manufacturing capacity to issue compulsory licenses to import generic copies of patented medicines, and the decision by the European Union to implement legislation transposing this agreement into European law.

We have been funding several programmes in developing countries, specifically around, or incorporating activities, related to TRIPS flexibilities. This is one of the main aims of the UK Government's global strategy to improve access to essential medicines, as outlined in the 2004 paper: "Increasing Access to Essential Medicines in the Developing World: Government Policy and Plan".

We have been providing support to the World Health Organisation's Commission on Intellectual Property Rights, Innovation and Public Health (CIPIH), with the secondment of an official to lead the secretariat of the Commission (three-year project: £240,000). The CIPIH has been appointed to produce an analysis of intellectual property rights, innovation, and public health, including analysis of TRIPS flexibilities. It will report in the first half of 2006.

We have been funding legal research and assistance on how to implement the flexibilities, with for instance the publication of the UNCTAD-International Centre for Trade and Sustainable Development's resource book on TRIPS and development (part of a three-year £1.2 million project), this year.

DFID also supports country-focused work on the issue. In Ghana, we support an access to medicines initiative (ATMI) through the Ghana National drugs programme that includes work on TRIPS flexibilities. DFID commissioned a series of studies that looked at access to medicines in under-served markets, including country case studies in Kenya and Malawi. A study on China and India investigates the effects of changing intellectual property legislation on the pharmaceutical industry in these countries, and in a recent update, the consequences of the alignment with TRIPS obligations in 2005.

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what role his Department plays in the UN AIDS programme. [36199]

Mr. Thomas: DFID is a strong supporter of the UN's HIV and AIDS programme working with the Joint United Nations Programme for HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS). The UNAIDS' mandate is "to be the advocate for global action on the HIV and AIDS epidemic".

UNAIDS is a co-sponsored programme comprising a Secretariat, the World Bank, the World Health Organisation (WHO), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Education, Scientific and Cultural Organisation (UNESCO), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the International Labour Organisation (ILO), the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR),the UN Office for Drugs and Crime (UNODC) and the World Food Programme (WFP).

The UK, led by DFID, is an active constituent member, with San Marino, Italy and Ireland, of the UNAIDS' Programme Co-ordinating Board (PCB). We currently occupy the board seat for our constituency, and have played a key role in important decisions taken at the PCB, including the adoption in June 2005 of the new policy paper "Intensifying HIV Prevention". DFID also has institutional partnerships, which includes core funding with all co-sponsors including the UNAIDS Secretariat, (except the UNODC).

Core funding to the UNAIDS Secretariat in this financial year is £16 million, to support the unified work plan involving all co-sponsors.

Media Monitoring

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much his Department has spent on media monitoring activities in each of the last eight financial years. [35631]

Mr. Thomas: Information on DFID's expenditure on media monitoring services is only available for the last two financial years.

The figures are as follows:

2003–04	125,800
2005–06 (to November 2005)	99,810

These figures are for press cuttings services for the entire department and annual subscriptions to the media monitoring unit.

South Asia Earthquake

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how his Department ensures that UK aid allocated to Kashmir after the recent earthquake is applied to the (a) people and (b) purposes intended. [36169]

Mr. Thomas: UK assistance for the Pakistan earthquake is divided between immediate humanitarian assistance and long-term reconstruction. My Department has pledged £58 million for humanitarian assistance and works with appropriate UN agencies, the Red Cross and a number of trusted non-governmental organisations to deliver much needed supplies and services quickly and efficiently to those most in need.

DFID has deployed humanitarian advisors to Pakistan to monitor our support and ensure it is used effectively. This supplements our standard accounting procedures that require all of DFID's partners to account for and report fully on programmes using DFID funds.

My department has pledged a further £70 million for long-term relief and reconstruction. The detail as to how this money will be spent is being worked on with the Government of Pakistan to ensure proper accountability, transparency and value for money.

Sugar Regime

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what bilateral assistance the Government will provide to those Caribbean nations most affected by the impact of the EU's proposed reforms of the sugar regime. [36492]

Mr. Thomas: DFID's £10.3 million annual bilateral programme to the Caribbean finances programmes in Guyana (£4.5 million a year) and Jamaica (£2.5 million a year), two of the most affected countries in the Caribbean, and support for regional objectives and institutions (£3.3 million a year), that benefits all six affected Caribbean Sugar Protocol countries.

Funding from the regional programme is being made available to assist all these countries prepare their sugar action plans to set out how they adjust to the fall in European sugar price. These plans will enable them to benefit from the European Commission's (EC) forthcoming Transitional Assistance and attract possible investors from the private sector.

In addition, Jamaica, Guyana and Belize benefit from UK financed debt relief. Under the UK bilateral Commonwealth Debt Initiative, Belize received £1.45 million and Jamaica £6.24 million in 2005. For Guyana, the UK will pay approximately $450,000 as its share (10 per cent.) of Guyana's debt service on loans from the World Bank's International Development Association (IDA) until all of its $260 million of IDA and International Monetary Fund debts are cancelled in 2006 under the recently agreed G8 proposal.

The UK provides approximately £8 million a year to the four most affected countries (Belize, Guyana, Jamaica and St Kitts) through its contributions to multilateral agencies such as the EC.

Tsunami

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what collaboration there has been between the Government and the Commonwealth in support of countries affected by the tsunami. [37674]

Mr. Thomas: The Commonwealth Secretariat has, on behalf of Commonwealth countries, sent a relief co-ordinator and specialist doctors to the Maldives, co-ordinating directly with the affected Governments.

The Commonwealth countries of Sri Lanka, India and the Maldives, which were affected by the tsunami, have received UK Government assistance.

DFID seeks to co-ordinate its activities with all donors, including Commonwealth countries, as the best way to ensure that there is no overlap and activities meet identified needs.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

MPs (Outside Appointments)

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Leader of the House if he will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by his Department, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [36688]

Mr. Hoon: None. The Office of the Leader of the House of Commons is not responsible for making appointments to any public bodies.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Arms Movement Certificates

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which body is responsible for the issuing of arms movement certificates; how many have been issued; and what criteria are applied in deciding whether such a certificate should be issued. [30784]

Mr. Woodward: The Independent International Commission on Decommissioning (IICD) issue "arms movement certificates", as described in the decommissioning scheme within the meaning of section 1 of the Northern Ireland Arms Decommissioning Act of 1997, in connection with the decommissioning process.

Until such time as the IICD are satisfied that their mandate has been fulfilled and, as their report of 26 September 2005 stated, the arms of loyalist paramilitary groups, as well as other paramilitary organisations, remain to be addressed, it would not be appropriate for them to release the numbers of arms movement certificates or any date involved during the decommissioning process. It would not therefore be appropriate to comment at this time.

Belfast Hospitals (Security)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the security firms employed at each hospital in Belfast. [37585]

Mr. Woodward: Each hospital in Belfast delivers security by means of in-house staff employed on Health and Personal Social Services (HPSS) contracts. Hospitals, which employ external security firms to undertake specific functions, are listed as follows:

Greenpark Hospital Trust engages G4S Cash Services (UK) Ltd (previously Securicor) for cash movement.

Ulster Community Hospital Trust engages J.M. Securities for wheel clamping.

Business Rates

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 372W on business rates, what consultation his Department carried out with (a) businesses in Northern Ireland and (b) Invest NI on the impact of the Government's Northern Ireland business rates proposals, prior to their announcement. [36523]

Angela E. Smith: The decision to phase out industrial derating, as part of the review of rating policy, was subject to a full and rigorous public consultation process initiated by the NI Executive in May 2002.

Four political parties, 13 district councils, three Assembly Committees and a range of business organisations responded to that consultation and most of these commented upon the issue of industrial derating. In addition two of the Assembly Committees, Finance and Personnel Committee and Enterprise, Trade and Investment, which were in favour of removing the exemption, took evidence on the issue and this was duly submitted.

Further consultations took place in 2003 on the Government's proposals and on the draft legislation, which included a regulatory impact assessment.

The Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment was involved from an early stage. Invest NI was consulted and submitted evidence.

Civil Service

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how the Northern Ireland Department of Finance and Personnel applied the public interest test to Derry City council's application under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 for release of the Equality Impact Assessment for the Northern Ireland Civil Service e-HR programme. [36175]

Angela E. Smith: In applying the public interest test, the Department decided in conformity with Section 22 of the Freedom of Information Act, not to disclose the EQIA because it intends to publish the EQIA, and expects to do so within the next three months in line with the arrangements set out in the Department's equality scheme. In addition, the draft EQIA remains a working document and to release it now would inhibit the development of the draft and the orderly administration of the process.

Community Relations Council

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the Northern Ireland Community Relations Council awarded in (a) core funding and (b) project funding to (i) the Irish School of Ecumenics, (ii) the Northern Ireland Inter Faith Forum, (iii) Roman Catholic groups and (iv) mainstream evangelical organisations in each of the last 15 years. [36213]

Angela E. Smith: The information requested for 1990–91 to 1997–98 is not available.

Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether a Minister in his Department is planned to be nominated to take responsibility for liaison with the Office for Disability Issues; and if he will make a statement. [37087]

Angela E. Smith: There are no plans to nominate a Minister in Northern Ireland to liaise with the Office for Disability Issues. Officials in the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister will liaise with ODI officials as appropriate. Ministers in Northern Ireland will be involved as necessary taking into account the work of the Interdepartmental Group on Promoting Social Inclusion for Disabled People in Northern Ireland.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the initial activity undertaken by his Department in response to those recommendations in the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit report "Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People" where lead responsibility was assigned to all Government Departments. [37088]

Angela E. Smith: The Prime Minister's Strategy Unit report "Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People" only applies to Government Departments in England, and to Wales and Scotland where the recommendation relates to reserved rather than devolved matters. However, in reporting progress against priorities, it will include progress in Northern Ireland in line with the objectives set in the "Improving the Life Chances" report.

While "Improving the Life Chances" is a GB strategy, work is being progressed in Northern Ireland by the Promoting Social Inclusion Inderdepartmental Working Group on Disability. In November 2004, the then Minister with responsibility for disability issues in Northern Ireland, established the Group. It is chaired by the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister (OFMDFM) and is made up of representatives from voluntary, community and statutory organisations alongside trade unions, the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland and all Northern Ireland Departments. The Minister asked the Group to produce recommendations on what Government can do to promote greater inclusion of people with disabilities in the economic and social life of Northern Ireland and is due to report during 2006.

This work in Northern Ireland will take account of "Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People". OFMDFM officials are liaising with officials in the recently formed Office for Disability Issues to ensure co-ordination of actions.

Free School Meals

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children (a) are entitled to and (b) receive free school meals in each education board in Northern Ireland. [37606]

Angela E. Smith: At October 2004, the number of schoolchildren entitled to, and in receipt of, free school meals in each Education and Library Board area was as follows:

Number

	Children entitled to free school meals	Children in receipt of free school meals
Belfast	15,280	12,533
Western	15,219	8,131
North Eastern	10,055	6,640
South Eastern	8,823	11,639
Southern	13,767	13,786
Northern Ireland total	63,144	52,729

Note:

1. Figures relate to year one to year seven pupils in primary schools and pupils at post-primary schools. Figures for pupils at special schools entitled to free school meals are not collected.

The Department continues, through the Education and Library Boards, to take steps to encourage eligible pupils to take up their entitlement.

Pensioner Households

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his latest estimate is of the number of pensioner households in Northern Ireland. [37609]

Mr. Hanson: There were 188,058 pensioner households based on the latest estimate in the 2001 census.

Playing Fields

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many schools in Northern Ireland have sold playing fields in each of the last 15 years, broken down by constituency. [36553]

Angela E. Smith: Only two playing fields have been sold in the last 15 years, both belonged to the Belfast Education and Library Board:

1991—Laburnum Playing Fields-East Belfast constituency and;

1995—The site of a former post-primary school, Forthbridge High School-North Belfast constituency.

Power Cuts

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many power cuts resulting from adverse weather conditions there were in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [36548]

Angela E. Smith: The number of power failures on Northern Ireland Electricity's network resulting from adverse weather conditions in each of the last 10 years is shown in the following table.

	Number of power failures
1996	485
1997	771
1998	4,671
1999	933
2000	874
2001	1,590
2002	1,180
2003	1,087
2004	853

Restorative Justice Schemes

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland why he did not consult the Northern Ireland Policing Board on the draft guidelines on community-based restorative justice schemes. [35854]

Mr. Hanson: The draft guidelines for community-based restorative justice schemes have been formulated by a working group comprising criminal justice agencies including the PSNI. I have now made the draft guidelines for community-based restorative justice schemes available publicly, and welcome the representations of the Policing Board as key stakeholders.

Roads Maintenance

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent by the Department for Regional Development Roads Service on roads maintenance in (a) Limavady and (b) Coleraine borough council area in the 2004–05 financial year. [37883]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 15 December 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding how much was spent by the Department for Regional Development Roads Service on roads maintenance in (a) Limavady and (b) Coleraine Borough Council areas in the 2004–05 financial year. I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service.

I can confirm that the roads maintenance expenditure in the Limavady Borough Council area during the 2004–05 financial year amounted to £3,156,000. In the Coleraine Borough Council area, the roads maintenance expenditure amounted to £3,960,000 for the same period.

I hope this information is useful.

Sales (Under-age Children)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland have been (a) prosecuted for and (b) convicted of selling tobacco to underage children in each of the last five years. [36337]

Mr. Hanson: The enforcement of the Children and Young Persons (Protection from Tobacco) (Northern Ireland) Order 1991 is the responsibility of district councils. Statistical information on prosecutions by district councils and other third parties is not held centrally. Information should however become available with the rollout of the next phase of the Causeway case management system, anticipated in early 2007.

Schools (Abuse Claims)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many complaints of (a) physical abuse and (b) sexual abuse against (i) teachers and (ii) priests were received by schools in the maintained sector in each year for which figures are available. [36313]

Angela E. Smith: The Department of Education does not collect this information from schools. However schools are required to keep a Record of Child Abuse Complaints and this must be made available to the Education and Training Inspectorate during an inspection.

Where a complaint is made about a member of staff and is pursued either as a formal referral to the investigating agencies or under the school's disciplinary procedures, a short summary must be entered by the Principal on a Record of Child Abuse Complaints. The summary must include:

The date and brief details of the nature of the complaints;

By whom and against whom the complaint is made;

If the complaint was formally referred, to whom it was referred and the date of referral; and

If the complaint was dealt with under the school's disciplinary procedure.

The school's Record of Child Abuse Complaints must be made available to the Board of Governors at least annually.

Secondary Teachers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many secondary school teachers in Northern Ireland (a) teach the subject they undertook a degree in and (b) teach a subject different from their degree qualification, broken down by subject. [36311]

Angela E. Smith: As the Department of Education is not the employer of teachers, the information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, following the establishment of the General Teaching Council for Northern Ireland information can be collated by the Council which will include teacher qualifications and posts held. It is expected that a detailed analysis of every teacher registered with the Council will be available by the end of 2006.

Sex Offenders

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what precautions are in place to ensure that someone who has been convicted of a sex offence in the Irish Republic and travels to Northern Ireland is immediately placed on the Sex Offenders' Register in (a) the Province and (b) Great Britain. [36494]

Mr. Hanson: The Sexual Offences Act 2004 provides the police with a power to apply for an order from the court which makes a convicted sex offender from another jurisdiction who travels to the United Kingdom subject to the notification requirements of the Act. This means that while convicted sex offenders are not automatically added to the sex offender register (as it is commonly referred to), they cannot escape the notification requirements of the Act should they come to reside in Northern Ireland or Great Britain.

As part of the work programme for the intergovernmental agreement on criminal justice cooperation agreed with the Republic of Ireland in the summer, a registered sex offenders' advisory group is being established to look at information exchange on sex offenders in both jurisdictions. This will further strengthen the exchange of information between the Police Service of Northern Ireland and An Garda Siochana.

Sexual Assaults

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many sexual assaults have been reported to the police in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years; and how many people have been prosecuted. [36558]

Mr. Hanson: I am committed to supporting victims of sexual assaults in ways which help cases to be brought to court and prosecutions of offenders secured. This includes special measures in the courts to facilitate the way in which victims and witnesses who might otherwise feel intimidated give evidence.

Table 1 provides the number of offences of rape, attempted rape and other sexual assaults recorded by the police. Data is provided for 1998–99 onwards. The reason for this is that the Home Office introduced revised counting rules for recording crime in April 1998 and figures produced since then belong to a different statistical series and are not comparable with those produced prior to April 1998.

The number of prosecutions for these offences are provided in Table 2 and cover the calendar years 1994 to 2003. Data beyond 2003 will become available in early 2006.

It should be noted that statistics in Table 1 are offence based whilst figures in Table 2 are based on the number of persons prosecuted.

Shared Future

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the first triennial action plan for Shared Future will be published; and if he will make a statement. [35322]

Angela E. Smith: The Triennial Action Plan will be published before March 2006. This will give further impetus to A Shared Future, the policy and strategic framework for good relations in Northern Ireland.

Sinn Fein (Assembly Expenses)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff Sinn Fein claim for under Northern Ireland Assembly expenses. [36533]

Mr. Hain: Taking account of MLA allowances and support provided under the Financial Assistance to Political Parties scheme, in the financial year 2004–05, Sinn Fein received support for 25 staff.

Sports Council

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the response of 17 October 2005, Official Report, column 750W, on the Sports Council, how many individuals have received funding from the Sports Council in each of the last five years. [36357]

Mr. Hanson: Under the Recreation and Youth Service (Northern Ireland Order) 1986 the Sports Council for Northern Ireland (SCNI) is statutorily responsible for the development of sport in NI including the distribution of public funding to individual sports.

Under the talented athlete programme they make funding available to individuals for talent development. The following table provides details of how many individuals have received funding under this programme in each of the last five years:

Terrorism

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of whether there is a Republican Christmas terror threat in London. [36500]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I have been asked to reply.

Northern Ireland related terrorism continues to pose a threat and dissident republican groups who have rejected the Good Friday agreement of April 1998 still aspire to mount attacks in Great Britain. The Government will never hesitate to issue a warning if it is the best way to protect any community or venue facing a specific and credible threat. Advice would be issued immediately if the public needed to take specific action. Public safety is our absolute priority.

Tourism

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) joint ventures, (b) discussions and (c) liaison there has been between the Northern Ireland Tourist Board and the Scottish Tourist Board in targeting visitors from the United States of America. [36488]

Angela E. Smith: Many informal links exist but the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) has no plans to have a formalised structure with VisitScotland. However, officials from the NITB meet on a regular basis throughout the year with a number of other UK tourism officials and this would involve colleagues from VisitScotland.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to promote the annual 12th of July demonstrations as a tourist attraction. [36542]

Angela E. Smith: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) recognises the value of celebrations and festivals as drivers for tourism. Research confirms that events are an effective tool for changing perceptions and attracting visitors.

NITB featured the 12th of July festivities in its 2005 calendar of events for visitors, and has recently met the Orange Order on a number of occasions to identify what actions are required to enable the festivities to be promoted to tourists.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to promote the River Bann as a tourist attraction. [36545]

Angela E. Smith: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board has supported the local authorities of Ards, Armagh, Banbridge, Craigavon, Newry and Mourne, Down and North Down to establish a regional tourism partnership. This public/private sector partnership has produced a tourism strategy and action plan for the region which looks at regional development, marketing and visitor servicing priorities. The plan identifies activity tourism and natural assets as key regional strengths and the partnership includes details of the River Bann in its promotional materials. In addition the NITB website acts as an information point and electronic sign post to relevant information. The River Bann features on www.discovernorthernireland.com on three separate pages in the angling section. Each reference provides angling details for the Upper Bann and relevant contact details.

The Department for Culture, Arts and Leisure which owns the fishing rights on a stretch of the Upper Bann promotes the Public Angling Estate through its angling guides and angling website at www.dcal-fishingni.gov.uk Provided for the public in general this website targets tourist anglers providing them with travel and accommodation provider links. It enables tourist anglers to plan and arrange a fishing break in Northern Ireland from the comfort of their own home.

The Department also promotes the Public Angling Estate and angling in general within Northern Ireland by attending major angling game fairs and exhibitions throughout the island of Ireland, England and Europe.

US Visa Applications

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what advice the Northern Ireland Office gave to the US consulate in Belfast in connection with the visa application for Rita O'Hare; [36534]

(2) how many US visa applications the United States consulate in Belfast has asked him about in each of the last 10 years. [36566]

Mr. Hain: My Department has not given any advice to the United States consulate in respect of a visa application for Rita O'Hare. Decisions on applications for visas are solely a matter for the US Administration.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Costs

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the (a) salary bill was and (b) administrative costs were for his Department in (i) Scotland and (ii) London in 2004–05. [35880]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office does not separately identify the administration costs arising in Scotland and London. However, the total administration costs of the Scotland Office in 2004–05 were £4,028,412, of which £2,201,361 related to salary costs.

High-speed Rail Link

Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will support the proposals for a high-speed rail link between Edinburgh and Glasgow. [38180]

David Cairns: Development of the railway infrastructure in Scotland is the responsibility of Scottish Executive Ministers.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General what guidance he issues to members of the public wishing to make a complaint about the Crown Prosecution Service; and if he will make a statement. [37373]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) publishes a complaints leaflet, which sets out how members of the public can make a complaint about the service. The leaflet is published on the CPS website (www.cps.gov.uk) and hard copies are also available on request. I have placed a copy of the leaflet in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General how many staff employed by the Crown Prosecution Service were suspended from duty in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire and (d) the Metropolitan police area of London, broken down by grade in each of the last 15 years for which figures are available; and what the reasons were in each case in which proceedings are complete. [37375]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service has figures of staff suspensions available from June 2000 to date. Prior to this date, details of suspensions were not recorded centrally. The following numbers of staff were suspended from duty during this period.

		Number
(b) Essex	Grade 7 equivalent	1
(c) Hertfordshire	HEO equivalent	1
(d) Metropolitan Police area of London	C2 Prosecutor level	2
	Legal Trainee	1
	EO equivalent	1
	AO equivalents	4
	AA equivalents	2

The key issue in all suspension decisions is whether the continued presence of the member of staff concerned would:

be contrary to the public or departmental interest;

prejudice any investigation, for example, where there is a possibility of someone destroying evidence; have an adverse effect on the work of the office, for example, where harassment of colleagues is alleged and may intensify once an investigation is started.

In each of the 12 cases, the decision to suspend would have been based on one or more of the above criteria.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General what the procedure is for complaining about the (a) actions and (b) decisions of the Crown Prosecution Service; and if he will make a statement. [37376]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) operates a three tiered approach to the management of complaints. This approach is designed to enable complaints to be resolved at a local level wherever possible but it also provides complainants with the option of raising concerns with the Director of Public Prosecutions's Private Office, if they remain dissatisfied with the responses received from their local Chief Crown Prosecutor.

This procedure is outlined in the CPS complaints leaflet; I have placed a copy of the leaflet in the House of Commons Library and it also available on the CPS website (www.cps.gov.uk).

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General what the rates of pay are of (a) lawyers and (b) other staff employed by the Crown Prosecution Service, broken down by grade in (i) Southend, (ii) Essex, (iii) the Metropolitan Police area of London and (iv) England and Wales. [37509]

The Solicitor-General: The rates of pay of lawyers is listed, and other staff employed by the Crown Prosecution Service, broken down by grade in (i) Southend, (ii) Essex, (ii) the Metropolitan Police area of London and (iv) England and Wales.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Business Start-ups

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to increase the number of business start-ups in the (a) Hartlepool constituency and (b) Tees Valley sub-region. [37170]

Alun Michael: The Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) aims to create the best possible environment for business success in the UK. Each year the Department invests over £400 million nationally in grants, loans and subsidised consultancy to assist business growth and stimulate business start-ups. The Department is committed to reducing burdens on business, and to this end has recently published a draft plan for cutting red tape in DTI policy areas, the DTI draft simplification plan. The DTI is also involved in establishing the Task Force on Women's Enterprise, which will be launched in spring 2006.

Specific responsibility for economic development in the North East of England falls to Regional Development Agency ONE NorthEast. The agency administers a number of business support schemes on behalf of the DTI, and is responsible for the extensive business support services available through the regional Business Link network. ONE NorthEast is working with regional partners to create a single regional business support network that is easy to access and easy to use. The agency is also developing and delivering a significant programme aimed at bringing about a lasting cultural change in attitudes towards entrepreneurial activity in the North East of England, including raising aspirations of the region's young people, and under-represented groups.

Public funding is also being used to establish of business incubator units, business start-up advice and tailored local business support measures.

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many business start-ups took place in (a) Hartlepool, (b) the Tees Valley sub-region and (c) the North East region in the last 12 months. [37171]

Alun Michael: In 2004 (the latest year for which figures are available) there were 120 new VAT registrations in Hartlepool, 910 in Tees Valley and 4290 in North East England. Full statistical information on VAT registrations, broken down to local authority area, is available from the Small Business Service website at www.sbs.gov.uk.

Carbon Sequestration

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his plans to promote the use of carbon sequestration technology. [37698]

Malcolm Wicks: "The Carbon Abatement Technologies Strategy for Fossil Fuel Use" which I announced on 14 June this year sets out the Government's policy and views for the future support for carbon sequestration technologies. Copies of the strategy are available in the House of Commons Library and at:

http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/coal/cfft/cct/pub/catreportlinked.pdf.

In addition to the strategy I also announced £25 million for a demonstration of Carbon Abatement Technologies, which could include carbon sequestration. In his pre-budget statement this month, the Chancellor announced a further £10 million for this demonstration scheme, bringing the total for Government funding to £35 million.

Coal Mining

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much (a) deep mined and (b) opencast coal was produced in the UK in (i) the most recent 12 months for which figures are available and (ii) 1995; and what forecast he has made of production in 2015. [37865]

Malcolm Wicks: Over the 12-month period to September 2005 UK deep mined coal production was 9.6 million tonnes and UK surface mined coal production was 11.3 million tonnes.

In 1995, UK deep mined coal production was 35.2 million tonnes and UK surface mined coal production was 16.4 million tonnes.

This Department does not produce regular forecasts for UK coal production. A study commissioned by DTI in 2004 as part of its work on the large combustion plant directive entitled "UK Coal Production Outlook: 2004–16". The report projected that the UK's total coal production could be sustained within a band of 21–29 million tonnes in 2010 and 15–21 million tonnes in 2016.

The outturn figures for the 12 months to September 2005 suggest that the lower figures in these projections may be between 2 and 3 million tonnes too high.

Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) whether a Minister in his Department is planned to be nominated to take responsibility for liaison with the office for disability issues; and if he will make a statement; [37061]

(2) if he will make a statement on the initial activity undertaken by his Department in response to those recommendations in the Prime Minister's strategy unit report, improving the life chances of disabled people, where lead responsibility was assigned to all Government Departments. [37062]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I am the DTFs representative on the cross-departmental ministerial group charged with taking forward the recommendations of the strategy unit report "improving the life chances of disabled people", and accordingly have responsibility for liaison with the office for disability issues.

DTI is also represented on the cross-departmental senior officials' group, which contributes to the work on establishment of the office for disability issues and oversees the other workstreams that are taking forward the improving life chances agenda.

The DTI supports the recommendations in the strategy unit report and the aims of the office for disability issues; and contributes to implementing recommendations within its area of responsibility. The establishment of the office for disability issues is an important step towards achieving equality for disabled people and its work will complement that taken forward by proposed Commission for Equality and Human Rights, for which DTI has the lead.

Energy

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the UK's priorities were for the EU-OPEC ministerial meeting of 2 December. [34933]

Malcolm Wicks: At the EU-OPEC energy dialogue meeting on 2 December the UK was acting in its capacity as president of the EU Council of Ministers.

The EU sees this dialogue as part of a broader approach to developing the EU's relationship with major energy suppliers. This approach was one of the conclusions reached at the informal EU Heads of State meeting at Hampton Court on 27 of October that looked at the challenges of globalisation.

The overall aim of the dialogue is to promote oil market stability and improve mutual understanding. At the 2 December meeting we agreed that the dialogue would be taken forward in a number of specific areas. There will be:

A joint study on the refining sector in EU and OPEC countries;

Joint research and a workshop on the impact of financial markets;

An experts meeting on energy technologies with a focus on carbon capture and storage, and possible the establishment of an EU-OPEC technology centre;

An experts meeting on the impact of energy policies on both demand and supply.

The next EU-OPEC ministerial meeting will be held in June in Brussels.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the latest estimates are for the percentage of electricity used in the UK produced from (a) coal, (b) nuclear power, (c) gas and (d) each other source; and what forecasts he has made for the percentages in (i) 10 and (ii) 20 years' time. [37862]

Malcolm Wicks: The available information on electricity supplied in the UK is shown in the following table. It is based on information published in the Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics 2005 and energy projections published in November 2004.

Percentage

	2004	2010	2020
Gas	40	41	58
Coal	33	25½	16½
Nuclear	19	18½	7
Imports	2½	2½	2
Oil	1	½	½

Percentage

	2004	2010	2020
Hydro	1	1½	1
Other Renewables	2½	10	14
Other Fuels	1	½	1

Other renewables include biofuels, wind, wave, solar photovoltaics and non-biodegradable wastes. Other fuels include coke oven gas, blast furnace gas and waste products from chemical processes.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the supply of resources needed to provide the amount of electricity required in the UK over the next 10 years. [37863]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government's assessment of the adequacy of generating capacity and the availability of supplies of electricity and fuels used for electricity generation in the medium term is set out in the Report of the Joint Energy Security of Supply working group, available on the DTI website at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/jess/jessreport5.pdf and in the Secretary of State's report to Parliament, available from the DTI website at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/publications/policy/sec_supply_first_report.pdf

Both reports draw heavily on National Grid's Seven Year Statement, available from the National Grid website at http://wwwnationalgrid.com/uk/library/documents/sys05/default.asp.

Gas Prices

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the availability of gas supplies (a) in the UK and (b) from abroad; and if he will make a statement on the impact on British industry of the recent increases in prices for gas. [37864]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government's assessment of the availability of gas supplies from UK sources is set out in the Secretary of State's report to Parliament which is published on the Department's website at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/publications/policy/sec_supply_first_report.pdf—see chapter 4, page 14.

The Government are committed to working with others to provide an appropriate framework for international trade in gas, and to developing partnerships with gas producing and transit countries. Decisions as to the amount of gas to be imported, from which sources and through which supply routes and import points, are for individual market participants.

There is a general concern that changes in other governments' national rules are potentially diverting cargoes of liquefied natural gas away from Great Britain, and that gas supplies via the interconnector from continental Europe have not fully responded to recent strong price signals; Ofgem and the Government are pursuing these issues urgently with the European Commission, including through a letter from my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and the Chancellor of the Exchequer to Commissioner Kroes. The Government's Energy Review, due to report in 2006, will look at the reliability of energy supplies in the medium and long term.

I, as well as DTI and Ofgem officials, have met representatives of industry on numerous occasions to discuss the impact of gas price rises and ways of mitigating that.

New Businesses

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the rate of new business development per 10,000 population (a) was in 2004–05 and (b) is in 2005–06 in (i) England, (ii) the West Midlands and (iii) Stoke-on-Trent. [37718]

Alun Michael: According to Barclays Bank's latest survey of business creation, which includes non-VAT registered firms, there were 425,100 business start-ups in England in 2004, representing 105 new businesses per 10,000 resident adults[1]. A further 277,500 businesses started up in England in the first nine months of 2005.

Barclays data show that there were 36,100 business start-ups in the West Midlands Government Office Region in 2004, representing 85 new businesses per 10,000 resident adults[1]. A further 24,300 businesses started up in the first nine months of 2005. Barclays data show there were 1,100 business start-ups in Stoke-on-Trent unitary authority in 2004, representing 57 new businesses per 10,000 resident adults[1]. A further 700 businesses started up in the first nine months of 2005.

DTI figures based solely on VAT registrations for England, West Midlands Government Office Region and Stoke-on-Trent unitary authority are shown in the following table for 2004. Data for 2005 will be available in Autumn 2006.

[1] Based on mid-year 2004 population estimates published by the Office for National Statistics.

VAT registrations, number and rate

	VAT registrations 2004	VAT registrations per 10,000 resident adults[1], 2004
England	158,535	39
West Midlands	14,855	35
Stoke-on-Trent	535	28

Business Start-ups and Closures: VAT Registrations and De-registrations 1994–2004, Small Business Service, available at http://www.sbs.gov.uk/vats

VAT registrations do not capture all start-up activity. Businesses are unlikely to be registered if they fall below the compulsory VAT threshold. Only 1.8 million out of 4.3 million enterprises were registered for VAT at the start of 2004.

Nuclear Power

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research has been undertaken by his Department on the cost-effectiveness of nuclear power in reducing carbon dioxide emissions compared with other measures; and if he will make a statement. [37693]

Malcolm Wicks: The 2003 Energy White Paper published the results of extensive modelling of the costs of different options for reducing carbon dioxide emissions over the period to 2050. The analysis is available at:

http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/whitepaper/phase2.pdf.

The Department is also aware of other recent studies providing estimates of the costs of nuclear energy, notably those by the Royal Academy of Engineering, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the University of Chicago.

In November 2005 my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced that there would be a review of energy policy which would report in summer 2006. This will involve further analysis of the costs of different options, including nuclear energy, for meeting the Government's long-term targets for reducing carbon dioxide emissions.

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research his Department has commissioned on the cost-effectiveness of nuclear power in reducing carbon dioxide emissions compared with other measures; and if he will make a statement. [37700]

Malcolm Wicks: The 2003 Energy White Paper published the results of extensive modelling of the costs of different options for reducing carbon dioxide emissions over the period to 2050. The analysis is available at:

http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/whitepaper/phase2.pdf.

The Department is also aware of other recent studies providing estimates of the costs of nuclear energy, notably those by the Royal Academy of Engineering, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the University of Chicago.

In November 2005 my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced that there would be a review of energy policy which would report in summer 2006. This will involve further analysis of the costs of different options, including nuclear energy, for meeting the Government's long-term targets for reducing carbon dioxide emissions.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals have been made by the Nuclear Decommissioning Agency for the demolition of nuclear power stations; when he received the proposals; what the anticipated costs were; and when he will make a decision on the proposals. [37712]

Malcolm Wicks: The Nuclear Decommissioning Authority has set out in its draft Strategy proposals for the decommissioning and clean-up of its sites. The draft Strategy sets out the scope, schedule, and cost of work at each site over its lifetime—and includes proposals for its fleet of Magnox power stations. The draft Strategy is available at: www.nda.gov.uk I expect to receive the NDA's proposed Strategy before Christmas. It will go to the Scottish Ministers at the same time. The Scottish Ministers and I will then have until 31 March 2006 to consider and approve the NDA's proposed Strategy.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions have taken place in the Joint Research/Atomic Questions Working Party of the EU in respect of the draft council decision concerning the approval of the accession of the European Atomic Energy Community to a framework agreement for International Collaboration on research and development of generation IV nuclear energy systems (GIF); what decisions have been taken; and what financial commitment has been made by the United Kingdom in support of the GIF. [35653]

Malcolm Wicks: In 2005 EURATOM's accession to GIF has been discussed in the Joint Research/Atomic Questions Working party on the following dates:

25 May 2005—under the Luxembourg presidency

13 June 2005—under the Luxembourg presidency

26 September2005—under the UK presidency

At the September 2005meeting the presidency stated that as there was a clear qualified majority in favour of EURATOM's accession to the GIF it would be sent as an "I" point to Coreper and an "A" point to a future Council (i.e. to be agreed without discussion).

Council Secretariat has subsequently sent the finalised version of the draft Council Decision to all delegations to give them the opportunity to register any opposition.

DTI has allocated £10 million, £5 million in 2006–07 and £5 million in 2007–08, to support UK involvement in international research on advanced nuclear energy systems. Much of this is expected to fund UK research on Generation IV systems for potential international deployment from around 2030; the exact amount will depend on the mix of research proposals that are submitted. The initiative will support UK skills needed to keep open the nuclear energy option and our capability to keep abreast of international developments and inform UK policy development.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions have taken place between the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate and the Environment Agency on the licensing of newly-built nuclear power stations. [36809]

Malcolm Wicks: HSEfs Nuclear Installations Inspectorate and the Environment Agency maintain a regular dialogue on various matters of mutual interest. Since the 2003 Energy White Paper, Nil and the EA have not engaged in any formal discussions about licensing new nuclear power stations. Recently, Nil and EA have had informal and very preliminary discussions about the regulatory strategy that might be appropriate for the licensing and authorization of new nuclear power stations, in the event of any applications to build new stations. Nil and EA share the view that a coordinated regulatory approach to any potential new nuclear build would be essential.

Post Offices

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many rural post offices have closed in the last 12 months. [37630]

Barry Gardiner: I am advised by Post Office Ltd. that total net rural post office closures for the financial year 2004–05 were 144. Of these closures, 97 were in England, 22 in Scotland, 18 in Wales and 7 in Northern Ireland.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1555W, on post offices, what the timetable is for submitting formal notification to the European Commission for subsidies to support the rural post office network for the five years after March 2008; and if he will make a statement. [37493]

Barry Gardiner: Decisions concerning the future of the rural post office network have yet to be taken. Only when Government have had time to consider (a) the findings of the Post Office Ltd report on their trials of new, innovative and cost-effective ways of delivering post office services to rural communities and (b) ongoing analysis of the needs of stakeholders and the public, will it be possible to take well-informed decisions about the future of the rural network. If required, a state aid notification will be made at that time.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1555W, on post offices, whether the Government will be publishing the Post Office Ltd.'s report of their pilot programme, trialling new and innovative ways of delivering postal services to rural communities; and if he will make a statement. [37494]

Barry Gardiner: The Report is due to be presented to Government by the end of December 2005. Consideration will be given to its findings which will help inform the future options for the network on which a public consultation will be held in the new year. A decision on publication will be taken in due course.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much in energy a producer will receive for 1 Megawatt-hour (MWh) of power under the trading of Renewable Energy Certificates (REC). [35263]

Malcolm Wicks: I assume the hon. Member is referring to Renewable Obligation Certificates (ROCs).

For each megawatt hour of eligible renewable energy generated, Ofgem issues a tradable certificate called a ROC to the accredited generating station. The generator can then sell their ROCs to suppliers with, or without, the electricity. This enables renewable generators to receive a premium price for their electricity. The market determines the price of a ROC.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the Renewable Energy Certificate programme is on target to meet the 2010 goals set for it. [35264]

Malcolm Wicks: I assume the hon. Member is referring to Renewable Obligation Certificates.

The Government have a target of 10 per cent. of electricity from Renewable Obligation eligible sources of renewable energy. In 2004, 3.1 per cent. of the UK's electricity supply came from Renewable Obligation eligible sources of renewable energy. This rises to 3.6 per cent. from all sources of renewable energy.

The Government recognise that the renewables target is ambitious, but we are doing all we can to get as close as we can to it.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to encourage energy providers to take advantage of the Renewable Energy Certificates programme to help provide renewable energy. [35265]

Malcolm Wicks: I assume the hon. Member is referring to Renewable Obligation Certificates.

The Government recently consulted on the review of the Renewables Obligation, which considered a number of limited amendments to improve the effectiveness of the Obligation. The consultation period closed on 9 December, with most changes likely to come into force on 1 April 2006.

The large majority of respondents considered that the Obligation has provided a positive stimulus for investment in renewable technologies, particularly lower cost technologies, such as onshore wind and landfill gas. Most considered that the Obligation is largely working as anticipated and would deliver a significant expansion in renewable energy generation over the coming years.

Wheel Clamping

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the conduct of private wheel clamping firms in England and Wales. [30659]

Paul Goggins: I have been asked to reply.

Since the legal requirement date of 3 May 2005 for vehicle immobiliser (wheel-clampers) operatives to obtain an SIA licence, the Home Office has not commissioned any research on the conduct of private wheel clamping firms in England and Wales.

In July 2002, the Home Office carried out a limited consultation exercise on the specific issue of the practice of towing away vehicles from private land and charging a release fee. The consultation asked three main questions: the scale of any problems currently posed by the towing away of vehicles; the extent to which the practice might grow as an alternative to wheel-clamping when SIA regulation came into force; and how the problem should be addressed.

The responses confirmed anecdotal evidence that there were problems arising out of the practice of towing away, giving rise to widespread public complaint. It was predicted that these problems would increase as operators sought to evade the licensing requirements attached to vehicle immobilising. It was recommended that the problem should be dealt with by extending the licensing remit of the SIA to include this form of activity. This was completed earlier this year.

TRANSPORT

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Walsall North sent on 2 November 2005 to the Department for the Environment, Food and

Rural Affairs and transferred to the Department for Trade and Industry on 11 November and to his Department on 6 December. [37861]

Dr. Ladyman: I wrote to the hon. Member on Tuesday 13 December.

Integrated Kent Franchise

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to change services on the Bexhill to London Victoria line following the award of the Integrated Kent Franchise. [36902]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 13 December 2005]: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of Tuesday 6 December 2005, Official Report, column 1119W.

Railways

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he plans to make of the performance of Arriva Trains Wales on the Wales and Borders network in advance of the performance review due in 2008. [36897]

Derek Twigg: The Arriva Trains Wales Franchise Agreement sets out targets for performance. The agreement includes annual milestones which are monitored to determine whether Arriva Trains Wales will achieve their targets. Both are discussed at monthly and quarterly meetings between the Department and the train operator, and are the subject of correspondence with them throughout the year.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 6 December 2005, Official Report, column 1117W, on Buckshaw Village (railway station), when work will begin on the new railway station at Buckshaw Village; how long the project is estimated to take; and when the station will be ready to be opened. [37506]

Derek Twigg: This is a project that is being led by Lancashire county council with Network Rail. The Council has yet to finalise the detailed project plan which would provide dates for key milestones, but they have told the Department that the station is expected to be operational by 2008 providing the funding is in place.

Renewable Transport Fuel Obligation

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with Cabinet colleagues on the merits of a carbon and sustainability assurance scheme as part of the renewable transport fuel obligation; and if he will make a statement. [37699]

Dr. Ladyman: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport and I meet our ministerial colleagues, to discuss a range of departmental policies, regularly.

The renewable transport fuel obligation will be designed to encourage the production and use of biofuels with the best carbon savings and from the most sustainable sources.

This issue was explored at some length in the feasibility study which we published on 10 November. A copy of the study is available in the House Library and on the Department's website at http://www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_roads/documents/divisionhomepage/610328.hcsp.

We will be consulting stakeholders shortly on how we might best incorporate carbon and sustainability criteria into the obligation, as well as on other detailed design issues.

Speed Cameras

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many prosecutions for motor speeding offences caught by speed cameras have been discontinued due to a lack of sufficient evidence to provide a realistic prospect of conviction since 2003. [33685]

Paul Goggins: I have been asked to reply.

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the Transport Commissioners' ability to carry out their role within their existing regulatory powers; and what plans his Department has to amend these powers. [37868]

Dr. Ladyman: We are about to publish a consultation paper on proposals for modernising and streamlining the operator licensing system and I plan to make a statement shortly.

TREASURY

0870 Numbers

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2005, Official Report, column 1902W, on 0870 numbers, what contractual arrangements Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs has for the provision of the non-profit making 0870 lines. [37639]

John Healey: HMRC has contracts with two companies covering the provision of non-geographic (0870) numbers.

The former Inland Revenue currently have a contract in place with Cable and Wireless Ltd. for the provision of 0870 numbers.

In the former HM Customs and Excise, the contract for the provision of 0870 numbers is with Fujitsu Services.

Administrative Savings

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what administrative savings have been made by his Department in each of the last eight years. [34952]

John Healey: The Treasury's underspends against its administration costs limits are set out in table 4 of the Public Expenditure Outturn White Paper for each of the relevant years, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House. (PEOWPs for the years 2001–02 to 2004–05 are also available at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/economic_data_and_tools/finance_spending_statistics/pes_publications/pespub_index.cfm).

The Treasury's targets for efficiency gains as part of Spending Review 2004 are set out in the department's efficiency technical note, available at http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/media/F8E/39/F8E390F4-BCDC-D4B3-1C4802BDA23FF16F.pdf. Progress against those targets was reported in Annex C of the 2005 departmental report http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/media/99E/44/deptreport2005.pdf and will be updated in the 2005 autumn performance report, due to be published on the Treasury's website later this month.

Average Wage

Joan Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average wage in (a) England, (b) the West Midlands and (c) Stoke-on-Trent was in the latest year for which figures are available. [37740]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 15 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question what the average wage in (a) England (b) the West Midlands and (c) Stoke on Trent was in the last year for which figures are available. (37740)

Currently average earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE), and are provided for full time employees on adult rates whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence. This is the standard definition used for ASHE. The ASHE does not collect data on the self employed and people who do unpaid work.

The attached table shows the Average Gross Weekly Earnings for full time employees by local authority by place of work for England, West Midlands and Stoke on Trent for 2005. These statistics are also available on the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk = 13101.

The ASHE, carried out in April of each year, is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom. It is a one per cent sample of all employees who are members of pay-as-you-earn (PAYE) schemes.

Biofuels (Tax Revenue)

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the tax revenue from the sale of (a) liquefied petroleum gas, (b) bioethanol/petrol blends, (c) biodiesel blended from straight vegetable oil and (d) standard unleaded petrol has been in each of the last five years. [37854]

John Healey: Historical duty revenue figures by fuel type can be found on page 3 of the HM Revenue and Customs Hydrocarbon Oils Bulletin, a copy of which can be found on the HMRC website at: http://www.uktradeinfo.com/index.cfm?task = statbulltwo

Full year revenue figures for liquefied petroleum gas are not available for any of the last five years. Also, duty revenue figures by type of biodiesel blend are not available.

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the revenue which will be generated annually as a result of the increase in excise duty on straight vegetable oil; [37855]

(2) what criteria biodiesel produced from straight vegetable oil does not satisfy in the amended Hydrocarbon Oil Duties Act 1979. [37856]

John Healey: There has been no increase in excise duty on road fuels, including biofuels, since October 2003. Fuel produced from vegetable oil is eligible for the rate of duty for biodiesel (currently 27.10 pence per litre) if it meets the legal definition of biodiesel for tax purposes set out in section 2AA of the Hydrocarbon Oil Duties Act 1979. In other cases it is liable to duty at 47.10 pence per litre, as has been the case since Royal Assent to the Finance Act 2002.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he plans to reduce the biofuels duty levy. [37939]

John Healey: The Chancellor announces changes to taxation policy in the context of the Budget.

Budget Reports

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 517W, if he will publish the implied business investment deflator and the implied gross domestic product deflator, for each quarter and for each year since quarter 1, 1980. [37504]

John Healey: The relevant figures are provided in the following tables.

Building/Refurbishment Projects

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) building and (b) refurbishment projects are planned by his Department in (i) 2005–06 and (ii) 2006–07; and what the expected costs are of each project. [37403]

John Healey: The Treasury has no building or refurbishment projects planned.

Catering/Entertainment Contracts

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total value is of (a) catering and (b) entertainment contracts let by his Department; and what value of such contracts has been let in each nation and region of the UK, including London. [37461]

John Healey: The Treasury did not let any catering or entertainment contracts during 2004–05.

Consumer Debt

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average level of consumer debt was in (a) Staffordshire and (b) England in the last period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [37831]

John Healey: Figures from the Bank of England showed that the level of unsecured consumer debt in the UK in October 2005 was £191,406 million, of which £56,334 million is credit card debt and £135,072 million other. Official regional and average data are not available. The growth in unsecured lending is now at its lowest in over 10 years.

Contracts

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the value was of (a) public opinion research and (b) public relations contracts awarded by his Department in 2004–05 in (i) each (A) nation and (B) region of the UK and (ii) London. [35894]

John Healey: The Treasury awarded contracts for public opinion research with a total value of £30,000 in 2004–05. The expenditure was for the whole of the UK. No public relations contracts were awarded in 2004–05.

Cooking Oil (Duty)

John Hemming: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reason Inland Revenue decided to charge fuel duty on recovered cooking oil. [38196]

John Healey: Fuel produced from vegetable oil is eligible for the rate of duty for biodiesel (currently 27.10 pence per litre) if it meets the legal definition of biodiesel for tax purposes set out in section 2AA of the Hydrocarbon Oil Duties Act 1979. In other cases it is liable to duty at 47.10 pence per litre, as has been the case since Royal Assent to the Finance Act 2002. Before that date biodiesel was liable to the same rate of duty as ultra-low sulphur diesel.

Correspondence/Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) letters from hon. Members, (b) letters from members of the public and (c) parliamentary questions from (i) hon. Members and (ii) Lords were dealt with by his Department in each year since 1995; in respect of what percentage his Department took (A) more than one month and (B) more than three months to provide a substantive answer; and if he will make a statement. [37404]

John Healey: The Cabinet Office publishes a report to Parliament each year on the performance of departments in replying to correspondence from Members of both Houses of Parliament. The report for 2004 was published on 6 April 2005, Official Report, columns 137–140WS. The reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House.

Since 1999, the Treasury has dealt with the following number of letters from members of the public (figures for earlier years are not available):

	Letters	Answered within 15-day target
1999	8,650	37
2000	7,400	36
2001	9,600	74
2002	7,850	79
2003	6,120	70
2004	5,900	80

The breakdown requested of the length of time taken to reply to correspondence is not available.

The number of written parliamentary questions answered by Treasury Ministers in both Houses since the 1995–96 session is given in the following table:

Session	House of Commons	House of Lords
1995–96	1,851	Not available
1996–97	657	29
1997–98	4,554	282
1998–99	2,097	156
1999–00	2,857	274
2000–01	5,888	293
2001–02	3,693	239
2002–03	3,099	248
2003–04	1,377	106
2004–05 (As at 15 December 2005)	2,307	116

Information relating to the number of questions which took longer than one month and three months to answer is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, Treasury Ministers attach importance to answering parliamentary questions promptly wherever possible. In the 2004–05 session, 83 per cent. of House of Commons questions were answered substantively by the accepted deadlines, as were 96 per cent. of House of Lords questions.

Death Statistics

Angela Browning: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of people died (a) in hospital, (b) in a hospice, (c) at home and (d) in residential or nursing care in each of the last five years. [37973]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 15 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking what percentage of people died (a) in hospital, (b) in a hospice, (c) at home and (d) in residential or nursing care in each of the last five years. (37973)

The most recent year for which information on deaths is available is 2004. Figures are given in the table below for all deaths from 2000 to 2004.

Percentage of all deaths by place of death in England and Wales, 2000 to 2004[1]

	Place of death	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004

(b)	Hospice[3]	4	4	4	4	5
(c)	Own home	19	19	18	18	18
(d)	Residential or nursing Home[4]	18	18	17	17	16
	Other places	5	4	4	4	4
	All places	100	100	100	100	100

[1] Figures are for deaths occurring in each calendar year.
[2] NHS and non-NHS general hospitals.
[3] NHS and non-NHS hospices.
[4] NHS nursing home, Non-NHS nursing home, private residential home and local authority residential home.

Department Staff

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, how many staff are employed by his Department in each (a) region and (b) nation of the UK; and if he will make a statement. [35926]

John Healey: The information requested is published in Table D of the Civil Service Statistics. These are available in the Library, and online at: http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_of_the_civil_service/statistics/civil_service_statistics/index.asp

Departmental Consultants

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civil servants in each grade have left his Department in each of the last three years to join consultancy firms; and which firm each joined. [37365]

John Healey: The Treasury does not collect information from staff on prospective new employers when they leave the department. Therefore, data on the number of civil servants in each grade that have left the Treasury to join consultancy firms is not available.

Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether a Minister in his Department is planned to be nominated to take responsibility for liaison with the office for disability issues; and if he will make a statement. [37071]

John Healey: The Minister for disabled people has overall responsibility for the office for disability issues (ODI) and lead responsibility, in collaboration with colleagues across Government, for advancing the Government's 20-year strategy to improve outcomes for disabled people. Treasury Ministers will continue to engage with the Minister for disabled people on disability issues.

Domestic Central Heating

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of households that will be provided with (a) central heating and (b) insulation in each year of his plans as announced in the Pre-Budget Report. [37055]

John Healey: The Government announced an additional £300 million to provide free central heating installations to pensioner households on pension credit who do not already have such systems. These funds will be delivered through the warm front programme and funding will be available from this current financial year. Warm front has assisted over one million homes and already installed over 50,000 central heating systems. This additional funding will help deliver a significant number of more central heating systems to pensioners on pension credit who do not have them.

Insulation for pensioner households on pension credit will be provided by energy suppliers as part of their obligations under the Energy Efficiency Commitment. Under the current structure of EEC, suppliers are required to achieve energy savings targets and for this phase of the EEC (2005–08) of the EEC 130 TWh of savings have to be achieved. The suppliers have indicated that they will be able to provide insulation to any pensioners on pension credit.

Excise Duties (Receipts)

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the receipts from (a) vehicle excise duty, (b) air passenger duty, (c) fuel duty and (d) VAT on fuel as a percentage of gross domestic product in each year since 1996–97; and if he will estimate future receipts consistent with the forecasts in the Pre-Budget Report. [37117]

John Healey: Projected UK gross domestic product, and receipts from vehicle excise, air passenger and fuel duties, were set out in the financial statement and Budget Report and in the Pre-Budget Report, every year since 1997. Copies of these can be found in the Library of the House. The latest estimates were published in the 2005 Pre-Budget Report. These estimates will be updated when the 2006 financial statement and Budget Report is published.

HM Revenue and Customs do not collect VAT receipts on the basis of individual goods so no estimate of VAT on fuel as a percentage of gross domestic product is available.

Gifts

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the gifts received by (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department in each of the last two years for which information is available; what the approximate value of each was; and how many were (i) accepted and (ii) returned. [37407]

John Healey: Guidance for Ministers on the acceptance of gifts is set out in the ministerial code. An annual list of gifts received by Ministers valued at more than £140 is published. The annual list provides details of the gift received, its value, the donor and whether the gift was retained by the department, purchased by the Minister or marked for disposal. Information for June 2001-March 2005 is in the Libraries of the House. Information for 2005–06 will be published as soon as it is available after the end of the financial year.

For officials, the Treasury's gifts' policy states that officials should refuse or return gifts worth more than £25, if such a course of action does not harm good working relations. Gifts valued at over £25 should be handed over to the department for disposal or the recipient can purchase them.

Illegal Meat Imports

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many seizures of illegal meat imports were made in the last month for which records are available. [37633]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs made 2,496 seizures of products of animal origin in September 2005. Of these seizures, 1,333 contained meat.

Legal Aid

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library the reply given to the Law Society's letter to him of 31 August about the future of legal aid. [37427]

Mr. Des Browne: I have done so.

Local Authority Grants

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the Government's total grants to local authorities as a percentage of gross domestic product in each financial year since 1978–79. [37054]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 15 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question requesting an estimate of the Government's total grants to local authorities as a percentage of gross domestic product in each financial year since 1978–79. (37054)

I have provided some estimates from the National Accounts for non-financial transfers between central government and local government. The economic sectors of the National Accounts have a broad definition, for example central government is broader than the Government, and local government includes entities such as schools, police authorities etc as well as local councils. The National Accounts are compiled on an accruals basis and include imputed amounts, so should not be confused with cash payments.

The transactions can be sub-divided into current transfers and capital transfers.

Current Transfers

These include:

Revenue Support Grant;

redistribution of national non-domestic rates which is classified as a central government tax; specific grants such as those for mandatory student awards and rent allowances; and an imputed payment in respect of the cost of pension increase payments.

Capital Transfers

These mainly consist of grants paid by central government to local government to finance capital expenditure. They also include payments from development corporations and some one-off payments, such as commutation grants and amounts for repayment of over-hanging debt following Large Scale Voluntary Transfers of housing. As with the current transfers, the National Accounts include some imputed payments

The table below shows the separate current and capital transfer series and the total. It also shows total GDP and the total transfers as a percentage of GDP. All these data are at market prices and are not seasonally adjusted.

In 1978/79 total transfers from central government to local government were equivalent to 6.1 per cent. of GDP. In 2004/05 this percentage was 8.7 per cent.

National Insurance

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the surplus or deficit in the National Insurance Fund is; what proportion of UK gross domestic product that figure represents; and what the projected figures are in each case for (a) 2010, (b) 2020, (c) 2030, (d) 2040 and (e) 2050. [34864]

Dawn Primarolo: The latest information on the excess of receipts over payments and closing balance can be found on page 10 of the National Insurance Fund Account 2003–04 (published 10 January 2005). The National Insurance Fund covers Great Britain only.

Similar information for Northern Ireland can be found on page 10 of the Northern Ireland National Fund Account 2003–04 (published 9 February 2005).

UK Gross Domestic Product figures up to 2010–11 can be obtained from the HM Treasury website: http://www.hmtreasury.gov.uk./economic_data_and_tools/gdp_deflators/data_gdp_fig.cfm

Projections of the excess of receipts over payments to 2060 for Great Britain can be found in tables 15.1 and 15.7 of the Government Actuary's Quinquennial Review of the National Insurance Fund. The Quinquennial Review is on the Government Actuary's Department's website: http://www.gad.gov.uk/Publications/docs/QR5-FullReport.pdf

As stated in the review, these results should be regarded as giving only a broad indication of the possible future progression of the fund balance, bearing in mind the significant uncertainties involved in such a projection.

Similar information on long-term projections for Northern Ireland is not available.

Official Travel Costs

Peter Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 345W, what the cost of the travel of the two officials from his Department who accompanied him on his return from Israel was. [34580]

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Mid-Worcestershire (Peter Luff) of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 345W, on official travel costs, for what reasons two officials from his Department accompanied him on his return from his trip to Israel; and if he will make a statement. [36057]

John Healey: The officials accompanied the Chancellor to conduct Treasury business at a total cost of £3,015.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all official overseas visits undertaken by officials in his Department, broken down by Directorate, in each year since May 2001; what the cost in cash and real terms was; how many official engagements and meetings were underaken on each visit; how many officials took part in each visit, broken down by grades; and if he will make a statement. [37408]

John Healey: The Treasury's total spending on overseas travel and subsistence (including ministerial travel costs) in 2004–05 was £1,657,000. In relation to the earlier years, I refer to the answer given on 24 January 2005 by the then Financial Secretary (Mr. Timms) to the hon. member for Tatton (Mr. Osborne), 24 January 2005, Official Report, column 156W. Non-financial data on officials' visits are not recorded centrally so the further analysis requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the "ministerial code", the "civil service management code" and the "code of conduct for special advisers".

PILOT

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the joint task force with the UK offshore oil and gas industry (PILOT) has discussed issues of taxation. [37431]

John Healey: The joint Government and oil and gas industry task force (PILOT), chaired by Minister of State for Energy, Malcolm Wicks, does not discuss the quantum or structure of taxation. PILOT recognises that taxation is a matter for the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Red Diesel

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer why duty on red diesel was not frozen in the recent pre-Budget report. [37809]

John Healey: The Chancellor increased duty on rebated gas oil in the pre-Budget report in order to help reduce the incentives for oils fraud.

Regional Aid

Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much regional aid he plans to make available to Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly from 2007 to 2013; and through what funding streams funds will be disbursed. [38026]

Mr. Des Browne: The Government set out in the 2004 Spending Review its spending plans for the years up to 2007–08, including on regional development. The Comprehensive Spending Review will decide spending plans for 2008–09 till 2010–11.

Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the likely effects on the economy of Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly of his proposal to repatriate regional convergence funding from the European Union. [38027]

Mr. Des Browne: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer the Economic Secretary to the Treasury gave to the hon. Member for Truro and St. Austell on 8 December 2005, Official Report, column 984.

The Government are presently in discussions with its EU partners and the Commission on the future of structural funds in the 2007–13 financial perspective. It is not possible to say how particular regions will be affected by a final outcome of the negotiations.

Southend

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken to promote the long-term economy of Southend; and if he will make a statement. [37406]

John Healey: The Government are committed to promoting the long-term economic performance of all areas of the UK. In England the Government have taken steps to promote economic growth at the national, regional and local level. At the local level, schemes such as the local authority business growth incentives and business improvement districts make resources available for areas such as Southend to promote economic growth in their locality. In addition, the East of England Development Agency (EEDA) and Thames Gateway Funding are contributing to the long-term economic development of Southend. For instance, EEDA is contributing £2 million to the renaissance of industrial estates in Southend.

Sustainability Symposia (Harlow)

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the representatives from his Department and public bodies for which his Department is responsible who attended the Harlow North Sustainability Symposia on 6 June. [37445]

John Healey: No representatives of HM Treasury attended this event.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many applications for tax credits were received via the internet in each of the last five years; [25249]

(2) how many claims for tax credit were made over the e-portal in (a) 2003–04, (b) 2004–05 and (c) 2005–06 to date; and if he will make a statement. [35698]

Dawn Primarolo: The option of using the internet for submitting tax credits claims only became available during August 2002. The following table provides figures for claims submitted since then.

	Numbers of claims
12 August 2002 to 5 April 2003	427,000
6 April 2003 to 5 April 2004	545,000
6 April 2004 to 5 April 2005	547,000
6 April 2005 to 30 October 2005	438,000

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer why the new limits on the in-year recovery of tax credit overpayments cannot be introduced earlier than November 2006. [36838]

Dawn Primarolo: November 2006 is the earliest date that the new limits on the in-year recovery of tax credit overpayments can be introduced, due to the analysis and testing required to achieve the IT change.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases of fraud have been detected in Coventry South in relation to tax credit claims in each of the last five years. [37052]

Dawn Primarolo: Disaggregated information by Parliamentary constituency is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 19 July 2005, Official Report, column 1699W, on tax credits, which problems the Government recognises as being faced by carers moving into work; and if he will (a) list the interested parties whom Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs has consulted on the practicalities of extending tax credit support to this group and (b) summarise the representations they have made. [37326]

Dawn Primarolo: We recognise that informal carers of adults can have constraints on their ability to work because of their caring responsibilities. HMRC has consulted on the practicalities of extending tax credit support for this group, with other Government Departments and with a number of representative bodies outside Government. There has been a range of representations, with a particular interest in whether there may be a case for reducing the working tax credit working hours requirement for informal carers of adults to at least 16 hours a week.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families in the Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency he expects to benefit from the reform to the tax credit system announced in the Pre-Budget Report. [37738]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available in the format requested. Combined, the various measures will achieve a balance between providing more certainty of tax credit award for families, while maintaining flexibility to respond to falls in their income and changes in circumstances.

Tax Returns

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what reduction in costs there was as a result of filing self-assessments electronically in (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2004. [36282]

Dawn Primarolo: Taxpayers have been able to complete their self-assessment returns electronically since 2000. Online filing reduces costs for both taxpayers and for HMRC, but estimates of the reduction of these costs are not available. Greater online filing and use of online services more generally, will enable HMRC to make savings in the long-term. These savings will contribute to the efficiency savings HMRC has committed to deliver.

Taxis

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been spent by his Department on taxi travel in the 2005–06 financial year; and what proportion of such travel was undertaken in each nation and region of the UK, including London. [37462]

John Healey: In the first eight months of 2005–06, the Treasury spent £86,000 on taxi travel and courier services. The Treasury has a combined contract for taxi and courier services and it is not feasible to disaggregate the courier element. An analysis of the travel by nation and region could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

VAT (Gravestones)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will exempt the cost of gravestones from VAT. [37729]

Dawn Primarolo: Under our agreements with our European partners, we are not able to extend our existing VAT zero rates or introduce an exemption from VAT for gravestones.

Wanless Report

Steve Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to revisit (a) the research for and (b) the conclusions of the Wanless report relating to increased NHS spending, with particular reference to the four years after 2008. [37989]

Mr. Des Browne: The Government accepted the recommendations made by Derek Wanless for health spending up until 2007–08. All public expenditure from 2008–09, including health spending, will be decided as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review that I announced in July 2005. No decision has been made to revisit the Wanless Report.

WALES

Administrative Savings

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what administrative savings have been made by his Department in each of the last eight years. [34943]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office was created on 1 July 1999 and since this time all information relating to gross and net controlled administration costs, is published each year on its departmental annual report. These publications are available via the Wales Office website: www.walesoffice.gov.uk and from the Libraries of the House.

Anti-poverty Strategies

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet (a) the Secretary of State for International Development and (b) the Welsh Assembly Government to discuss Wales' contribution to anti-poverty strategies and policies in developing countries. [38012]

Mr. Hain: I have regular meetings with Cabinet colleagues and the First Minister on a range of issues, including Wales' role in the international community.

The Assembly is in the process of developing an international development strategy to focus on Wales' role in helping strengthen capacity in the developing world, particularly in Africa. This will include an evaluation of the role that Wales can play in the delivery of the Millennium Development Goals. It is expected that a framework document will be published in the next few weeks. In addition, the Department for International Development has set up a cross-departmental working group to co-ordinate an African capacity building programme. Welsh Assembly officials are also involved in this.

Carers' Commissioner

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the Welsh Assembly Government concerning the recent proposal for a carers' commissioner in Wales. [37910]

Mr. Hain: I understand that the Welsh Assembly Government have noted this suggestion and have sought the views of its Carers Strategy Review Panel.

Carers Special Grant

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the (a) Welsh Assembly Government and (b) Secretary of State for Health on distribution of the carers special grant in England and Wales. [37911]

Mr. Hain: The distribution of the carers special grant is devolved to the Welsh Assembly Government. I understand that the Assembly's intention to transfer these grant resources into the local authority revenue support grant settlement was announced in January 2000 and that the decision that the transfer should take place from 2006–07 was taken following advice from the Assembly's Carers Strategy Review Panel. It is my understanding that the distribution of the carer's grant between local authorities is based on the older adults personal social services formula.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the (a) salary bill was and (b) administrative costs were for his Department in (i) Wales and (ii) London in 2004–05. [35879]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office was established on 1 July 1999.

Statistically data relating to salaries and administrative costing can be found in the Wales Office Annual Departmental Report 2005.

This publication is available on the Wales Office website: www.walesoffice.gov.uk and from the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was paid by his Department in 2004–05 in rent for properties in (a) total, (b) Wales and (c) London. [36009]

(a) Total rent payable, exclusive of VAT was £118,054 and £20,659 for VAT.

(b) The Wales rent costing is £118,054, with £20,659 for VAT.

(c) None. The Wales Office owns Gwydyr House in Whitehall London.

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the total value is of (a) catering and (b) entertainment contracts let by his Department; and what value of such contracts has been let in each nation and region of the United Kingdom, including London. [37471]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office has not let any catering and entertainment contracts.

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which spending programmes by his Department where the corresponding functions in Scotland are devolved are classified as non-identifiable in the Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses; and what the allocated expenditure on each is for the 2005–06 financial year. [37507]

Mr. Hain: All expenditure for the Wales Office is identifiable in the Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses.

Departmental Staff

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff in his Department have been relocated into London and the South East in each of the last five years for which records are available. [31735]

Mr. Hain: None.

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives are being taken in his Department to help civil servants with chronic back pain. [34976]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office does not have any staff that have identified themselves as having chronic back pain.

However, Wales Office staff are supported during times of illness. They can access occupational health and welfare services to assist them in managing such conditions.

Energy Efficiency

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment his Department has made of the potential for energy efficiency improvements to reduce energy demand in Wales over the next (a) five, (b) 10, (c) 20 and (d) 50 years; and if he will make a statement. [33524]

Nick Ainger: The "Energy Saving Wales Action Plan" sets out the Assembly Government's priorities and plans in respect of energy efficiency in Wales. This is available on the Assembly's website.

The Government's recently announced energy review will focus on policy measures to help deliver objectives, including those on energy efficiency, beyond 2010.

Mental Health

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps are taken by his Department to support staff with mental ill-health. [36270]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office does not have any staff that have identified themselves as having mental ill-health.

However, Wales Office staff are supported during times of illness. They can access occupational health and welfare services to assist them in managing such conditions.

Olympics

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what areas of (a) employment, (b) manufacture and (c) sports development in Wales he expects will benefit from the London 2012 Olympic Games. [35832]

Mr. Hain: The Government are committed to ensuring that the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games maximise the potential for job creation, training and business growth, leaving a lasting social and economic, as well as physical, legacy for the whole of the UK. This is reflected in the "Procurement Principles" published in September which will form the basis of the draft procurement strategy to be adopted by the Olympic Delivery Authority.

Wales is putting in place a regional working group, involving the Welsh Development Agency, Wales Tourist Board and appropriate representatives from the Welsh Assembly Government. This group will develop plans to maximise business and development opportunities for Wales.

I believe that hosting the Olympic and Paralympic Games, and events associated with those Games, will inspire the next generation of sportsmen and sportswomen, providing a massive boost to participation at all levels.

Pembrokeshire Coast National Park Authority

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many prosecutions were brought by the Pembrokeshire Coast National Park Authority in each year since 1980. [37005]

Nick Ainger: The Pembrokeshire Coast National Park Authority was established as a separate body with effect from 1 April 1996.

Prosecutions since then have been as follows:

	Public rights of way	Planning

Previously, National Park functions were exercised by Dyfed county council. While definitive records are not available, it is believed that there were no prosecutions in relation to Public Rights of Way between 1980 and 1996. In relation to Planning matters, there was one prosecution in 1993 and three in 1994. Information about the period prior to 1990 is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Police Forces (Merger)

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with (a) the Home Secretary, (b) Welsh chief constables and (c) chairs of police authorities on the proposed mergers of police forces in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [37626]

Mr. Hain: I have held discussions with a wide range of stakeholders, including my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary, the four Welsh chief constables and four police authority chairs.

I see no realistic alternative to a single force for Wales if the objectives set out in the report by Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary are to be achieved. However, decisions will not be made until we have final recommendations from the police service. These are due to be submitted on 23 December.

Public Relations

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the value was of (a) public opinion research and (b) public relations contracts issued by his Department in 2004–05. [36010]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office did not carry out any public opinion research or issue any public relations contracts in 2004–05.

Rates

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was paid by his Department in rates in 2004–05, broken down by local authority; and how much was paid in rates in 2004–05 in London. [36003]

Mr. Hain: During financial year 2004–05 the Wales Office paid rates to Cardiff city council amounting to £33,222 and £48,222 to the City of Westminster.

Renewable Energy

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will ensure that the decorative lights on departmental Christmas trees are powered by electricity from renewable sources of power. [35768]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office was established from 1 July 1999. I refer the hon. Member to the answer previously given on 31 October 2005, Official Report, column 742W, to the hon. Member for Ceredigion (Mark Williams).

Taxis

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much has been spent by his Department on taxi travel in the 2005–06 financial year; and what proportion of such travel was undertaken in each nation and region of the United Kingdom, including London. [37472]

Mr. Hain: Since the beginning of financial year 2005–06, the year to date spend for taxi travel undertaken by the Wales Office is £2,457.

To provide spending by nation or region would be at a disproportionate cost.

Winter Deaths

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with his colleagues in (a) the Cabinet and (b) the National Assembly for Wales regarding the excess winter deaths of those aged over 65 years in Wales. [33916]

[34738]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available in the format requested.

The latest available information on the numbers entitled to income related benefits is in "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take Up in 2002/2003", a copy of which is in the Library.

Notes:

1. The data refers to benefit units, which may be a single person or a couple.
2. Case loads have been rounded to the nearest hundred and expressed in thousands and percentages have been given to 1 decimal place.
3. For HB/CTB, figures for any non-responding authorities have been estimated.
4 Housing benefit figures exclude any extended payment cases.
5. Council tax benefit totals exclude any second adult rebate cases.
6. Pension credit replaced MIG on the 6 October 2003 and extended IS entitlement to customers aged 60+.

Child Maintenance

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Tamworth constituency receive maintenance allowance via the Child Support Agency under the (a) old and (b) new scheme. [29291]

Mr. Plaskitt: This information is not available at the geographical level requested.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people are employed in the Child Support Agency self-employed team; and how many cases they are currently working on. [23230]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 31 October 2005]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 15 December 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions; how many people are employed in the Child Support Agency self-employed team; and how many cases they are currently working on.

In answer to your first question, our staff work on cases involving parents who are self-employed as part of our overall operation. We do not record centrally, the number of staff working specifically on these type of cases.

In September 2005, there were around 63,000 cases using the Agency's collection service and a further 10,000 cases using the maintenance direct arrangements, in which the non-resident parent was recorded as self-employed at the point they received an initial assessment or calculation.

There are also some applications involving self-employed non-resident parents for which the Agency has yet to calculate maintenance.

I apologise for the delay in replying but I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what amount of arrears was written off by the Child Support Agency in each year from 1997 to 2005 in (a) England, (b) Northamptonshire and (c) Wellingborough. [26779]

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what amount of arrears was written off by the Child Support Agency in (a) England, (b) the Tees Valley and (c) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency in each year since 1997. [29917]

Mr. Plaskitt: This information is not available. The Child Support Agency does not have the power to write off any debt owed.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on what date a hard copy of the Child Support Agency (CSA) Standards Committee report was published; and on what date the report was placed on the CSA's website. [29988]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 15 December 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on what date a hard copy of the Child Support Agency (CSA) Standards Committee report was published; and on what date the report was placed on the CSA's website.

The Child Support Agency (CSA) Standards Committee report was published on the CSA website on Monday 8 August 2005. No hard copy was published.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many changes of circumstance have been reported by non-resident parents on the (a) old and (b) new Child Support Agency scheme in each month of the last three years. [30066]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is not available.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Scottish claims were awaiting processing under the new Child Support Agency scheme calculation in each month since June 2003. [31137]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information can not be broken down to the geographical level requested.

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether it is the Government's policy for the Child Support Agency to give priority in a financial settlement to the children of a new partnership where the father is not the biological parent over the children of his original marriage. [34241]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 2 December 2005]: The Government aim to balance the needs of both sets of children. It recognises the additional responsibilities of a non-resident parent caring for their own child or a stepchild in their current family in the rules used to work out child maintenance.

For example, normally in the new scheme (introduced in March 2003) the non-resident parent's net weekly income is reduced by 15 per cent. where they care for one such child, 20 per cent. for two and 25 per cent. for three children or more. These are the same percentages used to work out the amount of child support the non-resident parent should pay.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what criteria the Child Support Agency uses when selecting cases pre-dating 3 March 2003 for recalculation of child maintenance liability; [36955]

(2) when he expects the Child Support Agency to have recalculated child maintenance liability for all cases predating 3 March 2003. [36961]

Mr. Plaskitt: Some old scheme cases linked to a new application will be converted to the new scheme.

The Child Support Agency's chief executive, Stephen Geraghty, is currently undertaking a root and branch review of the Agency. He will report to Ministers and we will make announcements shortly.

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether there are circumstances under which the Child Support Agency contacts birth parents asking for information about children who were adopted. [37979]

Mr. Plaskitt: There are no circumstances where the Child Support Agency will need to contact the birth parents in relation to that child. Once a legal adoption has been completed, the adoptive parents take on the legal liability for the financial support of the child.

Child Support Maintenance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he takes to monitor the proportion of parents with care on income support or income-based jobseekers allowance who are receiving child support maintenance for their children; and if he will make a statement. [30566]

Mr. Plaskitt: The proportion of parents with care on income support or income-based jobseeker's allowance who are receiving child support maintenance for their children is reported and monitored through the CSA Quarterly Statistical Summary which was first published on the Department's website on 27 October. A copy of this table is available in the Library.

CSA

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many formal complaints his Department has received regarding the Child Support Agency from people in (a) Gravesham and (b) England since 1997. [19807]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested can not be broken down to the geographical level requested.

Data Protection Act

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many enforcement notices have been placed on the Department by the Information Commissioner with regard to the Data Protection Act 1998 since it came into force. [38021]

Mrs. McGuire: None.

European Funding

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the basis was for the allocation of European expenditure to Scotland in 2003–04 in the Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis, comprising payments under European social fund (ESF), payments in advance under the ESF, and payments under European regional development funds. [36016]

Mr. Plaskitt: The allocation within the departmental expenditure limit, (DEL) over country and region, which includes ESF payments, is based on DWP staff numbers in those areas.

Stakeholder Pensions

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to seek the extension of the amount of tax relief given to stakeholder pensions; and what products he plans to introduce alongside the stakeholder pension range. [32695]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 29 November 2005]: There are no current plans to seek the extension of the amount of tax relief given to stakeholder pensions or to introduce new products alongside the stakeholder range.

Winter Fuel Payment

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners (a) are eligible for and (b) have claimed the winter fuel allowance in Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency. [36986]

Mr. Timms: It is not possible to provide an estimate of the number of people who are eligible for a winter fuel payment. So far this winter, 1,877 claim forms have been issued to people in the Middlesborough South and East Cleveland constituency and of these 1,212 have been returned and processed. The majority of payments are made automatically without the need to claim. Last winter 18,920 winter fuel payments were made in the Middlesborough South and East Cleveland constituency.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many abortive telephone calls were made to Jobcentre Plus by claimants in each month since December 2004, broken down by local call centre. [35066]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 15 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning how many abortive telephone calls were made to Jobcentre Plus by claimants in each month since December 2004, broken down by local call centre. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

When a customer calls they are placed into a queue either until the call is answered or they choose to abandon the call. I have assumed that abandoned calls is what is meant by "abortive" telephone calls. I have, therefore, placed in the House of Commons Library information on the numbers of abandoned contact centre calls made by customers.

I hope this is helpful.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Carbon Footprint

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what steps the Commissioners are taking to minimise their carbon footprint. [38093]

Sir Stuart Bell: The Commissioners welcomed the General Synod report 'Sharing God's planet' which requested that church bodies improve their environmental achievements by 2008. Their main aims are to develop a new 'Green Guide' for parsonage building standards and improve our approach to sustainability in our land management plans.

Fund-raising

Hugh Bayley: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what advice the Church Commissioners give to church bodies on raising funds through public appeals. [38094]

Sir Stuart Bell: Guidance on fundraising for repairs and maintenance is available from the Council for the Care of Churches and its "churchcare" website (www.churchare.co.uk). It is hoped shortly to expand the site to include guidance on the wider use and development of church buildings.

VAT Relief

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what discussions the Commissioners have had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the scope of extending VAT relief to the cost of church car parks. [39157]

Sir Stuart Bell: The scope of VAT relief covers repairs to church buildings and not ongoing costs. In consequence the Commissioners have had no discussions with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on such an extension.

CABINET OFFICE

Advice to Ministers/Permanent Secretaries

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in what month his Office expects to make an announcement on advice to Ministers and Permanent Secretaries. [36623]

Mr. Jim Murphy: This Government have done much to strengthen the system for handling of Ministers' financial interests, including the requirement to provide Permanent Secretaries with a list of their interests on appointment to each new office and the facility to seek external advice if needed. Careful consideration is being given to the recommendation by the Committee on Standards in Public Life and an announcement will be made in due course.

Civil Servants

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many civil servants worked from home for at least one day a week in the last year for which figures are available. [38018]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Cabinet Office does not centrally monitor the number of staff who work from home. However, within the newly launched 10 point plan "Delivering a Diverse Civil Service" there is senior leadership commitment to work life balance and all senior civil service (SCS) and feeder grade posts should be available on a flexible working pattern basis unless robust and objective justification is provided.

Departmental Research

Bob Spink: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what research projects commissioned by his Department are being undertaken; and what the publication arrangements are in each case. [32992]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The information requested regarding research projects commissioned for the Cabinet Office is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Downing Street (Refurbishment)

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) of 6 June 2005, Official Report, column 302W, on Downing street (refurbishment), when he expects officials to have concluded their consideration of options. [38835]

Mr. Jim Murphy: I have nothing further to add to the reply given by my right hon. Friend, the then Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (Mr. Hutton), on 6 June 2005, Official Report, column 302W.

Government Departments

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the cost was of re-structuring central Government Departments in each year since 1997. [37932]

Mr. Jim Murphy: This information is not collected centrally. Departmental costs and other expenditure are accounted for in departmental annual reports and National Audit Office (NAO) audits of departmental accounts.

TRANSPORT

A5

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average speed travelled by private cars was on the A5 between the A405 and the A40 in (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2004–05. [37521]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not available.

Administrative Savings

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what administrative savings have been made by his Department in each of the last eight years. [34948]

Ms Buck: I refer the hon. Member to the information on gross and net controlled administration costs for this Department published annually in the Public Expenditure White Papers for the years since it was formed in 2002–03.

Agency Staff

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff were employed by non-departmental public bodies and agencies for which he has responsibility in 2004–05 in (a) total and (b) each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK and (c) London. [35963]

Ms Buck: Total Executive NDPB staff numbers by Departments at 31 March 2005 are recorded in table 2 of Public Bodies 2005, a copy of which is in the House Libraries and which is available online at: http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/the_future_of_the_civil_service/agencies_and_public_bodies/publications/pdf/publicbodies/publicbodies2005.pdf.

The Department does not hold NDPB data broken down by region of the UK.

The number of staff in individual Executive agencies as at 1 April 2004, including a regional analysis, is available in Civil Service Statistics 2004 which was published in February 2005, a copy of which is in House Libraries. It is also available online at: http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_of_the_civil_service/statistics/contents_for_civil_service_statistics_2004_report/number_of_civil_servants/index.asp.

Air Bags (Motor Vehicles)

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department collects statistics on the number of car accidents where safety air bags are inflated. [38730]

Dr. Ladyman: Statistics are not collected on the number of injury car accidents where safety airbags are inflated.

The Department funds the co-operative crash injury study (CCIS) to investigate why car occupants are injured in traffic collisions and to use this information to design countermeasures to reduce the number of casualties in the future. CCIS is an in-depth study that involves specialist teams examining over 1,300 cars per year after they have been involved in police reported injury crashes and correlating the injuries suffered by the vehicle occupants to their causes. The vehicle investigation involves a thorough evaluation of all the cars' safety features, including seat belts and airbag systems. The effectiveness of the airbags once they have deployed is evaluated through this work. CCIS is a representative sample of all the car occupant injury crashes that occur in Great Britain and can be used to predict the number of airbags that are inflated or deployed per year in such accidents. Non-injury crashes where airbags deploy are not routinely investigated.

Air Fares

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average real terms price of air fares within the UK was in each year since 1975; and what forecast he has made of average price of airfares over the next 25 years. [38188]

Ms Buck: There is no series giving past data in UK air fares. The national air traffic forecasts published in 2000 assumed a 1 per cent. annual decline in air fares over the period 1998 to 2020. This was revised prior to the Air Transport White Paper to a 2 per cent. per annum decline for the period up to 2030.

Air Passengers

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passengers arrived by air to the UK from (a) Vietnam, (b) Laos, (c) Cambodia, (d) Burma, (e) Thailand and (f) Indonesia in each of the last five years. [36437]

Ms Buck: The following table shows estimated number of passengers arrived by air to the UK from Vietnam, Thailand and Indonesia in each of the last five years. Reliable data for Laos, Cambodia and Burma are not available but are likely to be less than 15,000 per year.

The International Passenger Survey (IPS). Number of arrivals in the UK by country of overseas airport used

Thousand

	Vietnam	Thailand	Indonesia
2000	21	410	85
2001	17	420	77
2002	19	463	63
2003	17	443	30
2004	17	532	38

Aircraft Landing Rights

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what requirement there is on operators of foreign registered aircraft to indicate to United Kingdom authorities the purpose of the flight for an aircraft seeking landing rights at a UK civilian airport. [36050]

Ms Buck [holding answer 8 December 2005]: Not all foreign operated flights into the UK require prior permission from the Secretary of State for Transport. Those stopping for non-traffic purposes (e.g. to refuel) and privately operated flights do not require prior permission. Where operators of foreign registered aircraft are required to seek permission to land from the Secretary of State in order to comply with Article 138 of the Air Navigation Order 2005, it is apparent from their applications whether the purpose of the flight is to carry passengers or cargo. Flights carrying dangerous goods or munitions of war are required to seek specific authorisation from the Civil Aviation Authority.

Airline Safety

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with the Civil Aviation Authority on commercial airline safety. [38240]

Ms Buck: The Secretary of State and the chairman of the Civil Aviation Authority meet regularly to discuss matters of current interest, including any matters relevant to commercial airline safety. Officials within the Department also have regular meetings with the chairman and with the Authority's group director for safety regulation and there is day-to-day contact as necessary on a range of safety matters.

Airport Expansion (Northamptonshire)

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the merits of expansion of airport capacity in Northamptonshire. [36632]

Ms Buck: The "Future Air Transport" White Paper published in December 2003 sets out a 30-year strategic framework for the development of airport capacity in the UK. The preceding studies and consultations led us to conclude that while a number of airports in the Midlands and the South East serve the Northamptonshire market, there is little demand for a commercial airport located within the county. There is however, nothing to prevent proposals for such an airport being brought forward for consideration through the planning system.

Alternative Automobile Fuels

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funding the Government have allocated to developing (a) electric and (b) non-petrol fuelled automobiles in each of the last five years. [37953]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government's primary form of support for alternatively fuelled vehicles, including electric vehicles, is through duty incentives which are set out in the Alternative Fuels Framework published in the Chancellor of the Exchequer's 2003 pre-Budget report.

Since 2002 the Department for Transport has also provided grant funding towards the research and development of innovative vehicles with improved environmental performance. The grants are technology and fuel neutral so a breakdown of funding by technology or fuel type is not available. Actual spend for the years since the grants were launched are listed as follows:

2002–03	0.590

Up to £5 million has been allocated for this financial year (2005–06) but it is unlikely that actual spend will reflect this allocation due to the suspension of the programme for part of this year while State Aid clearance was sought from the European Commission.

Aviation Pollution

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what economic modelling has been undertaken to assess the impact of Government policy on emissions trading on tackling climate change pollution from aviation. [38173]

Ms Buck: Analytical and modelling work has been undertaken by consultants for the European Commission looking at the feasibility and impact of emissions trading, emissions charges, and fuel taxation. The Department has not undertaken economic modelling since any scheme would be EU wide.

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what economic modelling he has undertaken of the impact of (a) different oil prices, (b) emissions trading, (c) an emissions charge and (d) an increase in air passenger duty on the growth of aviation greenhouse gas emissions. [38190]

Ms Buck: Our forecasts for aviation and climate change, and the assumptions underlying them, are set out in "Aviation and Global Warming", published by the Department for Transport in January 2004. The "best case" scenario emissions forecasts assumed the introduction of economic instruments to tackle climate change, resulting in improved fuel efficiency. We have not undertaken analysis to consider these specific scenarios.

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what economic modelling he has undertaken to assess the impact of participation in (a) the existing and (b) an aviation-only EU emissions trading scheme on forecast growth in aviation emissions of greenhouse gases. [38192]

Ms Buck: At present, it is too early to provide a reliable estimate of the impact emissions trading will have on forecasts of emissions from aviation. This will depend on a number of factors including the overall number of allowances and the detailed design for the inclusion of aviation into the EU ETS. These factors have yet to be specified and will be subject to discussion with other member states' governments.

The number of fatalities in accidents where a driver or rider had an illegal alcohol level is estimated from coroners' and procurators' fiscal data which becomes available a year later than the main road accident data. As a result, the estimates for 2004 are provisional. The provisional estimate of deaths in drink drive accidents in Great Britain in 2004 is 590. Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the statutory basis is for the collection of light dues. [37263]

Dr. Ladyman: Section 205(2) of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 empowers the General Lighthouse Authorities to collect light dues. These are paid into the General Lighthouse Fund. The Secretary of State is empowered to set the amount under Section 205(5) of the Act.

Ms Buck [holding answer 15 December 2005]: In July 2005 the Department received from Nexus, on behalf of the Tyne and Wear Passenger Transport Authority, a Local Transport Plan major scheme funding bid for Phase 1 of the Orpheus Bus Improvement Corridor Programme. This includes a park and ride site in the Follingsby area of Gateshead. I understand that the proposed park and ride scheme is intended to cater for journeys to Gateshead town centre and Newcastle city centre.

Advice on priorities for major transport schemes (including this one) is currently being sought from the region and I propose to consider this advice before taking decisions on funding for this, and other, schemes in the north east.

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport and London 2012 continues to aim for 100 per cent. spectator use of public transport, walking and cycling during the 2012 Olympics. Temporary parking restrictions will be operated in the vicinity of Olympic events, enforced through fines. It will not, therefore, be possible for most members of the public to travel to the games using private cars, although there will be a limited number of parking spaces for those with mobility requirements.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 565W, on the London Olympics, which vehicles producing no emissions will be used for (a) spectator and (b) Olympic family transport. [37024]

Ms Buck: Vehicles that will be used specifically for Olympic transport have not yet been purchased. In the case of the vehicles to be used for Olympic family transport, we would not anticipate these vehicles being purchased until two to three years before the Olympics. Given the pace of technological development in this field, it is not possible at this time to predict precisely which vehicles will be used. When the vehicles are purchased, we will aim to ensure that the cleanest vehicles possible are used.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 565W, on the London Olympics, what assessment he has made of whether the number of parking spaces available in connection with park-and-ride schemes at (a) the main northern side near the M11 and M25 junction, (b) the southern side near the Dartford river crossing, (c) at the Ebbsfleet station and (d) Windsor racecourse will meet demand at the 2012 Olympics. [37025]

Ms Buck: The Olympic candidature file prepared by London 2012 included plans for 6,000 cars at the Northern park and ride site, 6,000 at the Southern site, 9,000 at Ebbsfleet and 10,000 at Eton. These were based on the best information on spectator numbers available at that time.

The Olympic Transport Authority is in the process of carrying out a review of the anticipated demand at the planned park and ride sites. Should it be determined that the anticipated demand is not in line with the planned capacity, the plans will be adjusted to take this into account.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what (a) decisions, (b) agreements and (c) procedures have resulted from the liaison between project teams on Crossrail and the Olympic games on the coordination of construction programmes. [37027]

Ms Buck: During the Olympic bid process Cross London Rail Links Limited and the London Development Agency agreed to cooperate in the delivery of the two projects. This will now be developed into detailed governance arrangements to ensure that both projects can be delivered successfully.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) pursuant to his answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 564W, on the London Olympics, which part of the Construction Code specifies how Crossrail construction activities will be carried out; and if he will place a copy of the Construction Code in the Library; [37033]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 564W, on the London Olympics, what other mechanisms, besides the Construction Code, are being developed to ensure the construction impacts of Crossrail are suitably controlled, with particular reference to the 2012 Olympics. [37028]

Ms Buck: The current draft of the Construction Code, is available on the Crossrail Bill documents website: http://billdocuments.crossrail.co.uk and copies have been placed in the House Libraries. The code will continue to be developed in consultation with local authorities and other stakeholders throughout the Crossrail Bill's passage through Parliament.

The Construction Code forms part of a wider suite of controls known as the Environmental Minimum Requirements (EMR's) which also includes a planning memorandum, environmental memorandum and excavated materials handling strategy. The EMR's in combination with the controls in the Crossrail Bill and existing legislation will provide a comprehensive mechanism for controlling construction throughout the route.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 565W, on the London Olympics, what percentage of the £2.375 billion public sector funding package will be used specifically for developing or improving transport in London; and what percentage of the £2.375 billion public sector funding package will be generated from (a) London council tax and (b) the London Development Agency. [37035]

Ms Buck: Of the £2.375 billion public sector funding package made available for the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic games, £542 million (23 per cent.) has been assigned for Olympic specific transport schemes. London council tax will contribute up to £625 million (26 per cent.) to the £2.375 billion public sector funding package and the LDA will contribute £250 million (11 per cent.).

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 565W, on the London Olympics, what estimate he has made of the effect in terms of (a) capacity, (b) cost of operation and (c) administrative organisation of converting the North London Line to Docklands Light Railway. [37037]

Ms Buck: The operation and development of the Docklands light Railway is the responsibility of Transport for London (TfL).

Subject to the approval of applications which are currently before the Secretary of State, the planned frequency of the Docklands Light Railway extension between Stratford International and Canning Town prior to the Olympics is some 10 trains per hour, per direction in the peak and six trains off peak. This would mean a passenger capacity of 5,000 per hour, per direction in the peak and 3,000 per hour, per direction off peak. During the Olympics however the frequency of services on this part of the DLR will be increased substantially to accommodate anticipated spectator demand. The converted part of the North London Line to DLR operation will have the capability of up to 30 trains per hour.

It is anticipated that the cost of operation will be met by revenue.

TfL have indicated that they would expect the new extension to be operated within the existing franchise arrangements which currently govern the operation of the Docklands Light Railway.

London Underground (Security)

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what additional security measures have been instituted on the London Underground system following the terrorist attacks of 7 and 21 July. [37178]

Ms Buck [holding answer 13 December 2005]: We do not reveal the detail of security measures. London Underground Ltd. applied pre-agreed enhanced security measures after the attacks on 7 July together with further additional measures after consulting with the Department.

In addition, British Transport police (BTP) have stepped up their activity. Public vigilance remains very important. BTP, Metropolitan police and Transport For London (TfL) have also initiated a new poster campaign to engage the public in being alert to possible terrorist activity.

M2

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 12th December 2005, Official Report, column 1619W, if he will list the dates between 1 September and 1 December during which roadworks on the M2 between junctions 5 and 6 have been disrupted by (a) fog, (b) frost and (c) rain; and on which occasions between 1 September and 1 December work has been suspended between junctions 5 and 6 of the M2 on the advice of Kent police arising from fog, frost or rain. [38055]

Dr. Ladyman: Between 1 September and 1 December 2005, road works on the M2 between junctions 5 and 6 have been disrupted by (a) fog on 21 November, (b) frost on 25 November, 26 November, 28 November and 29 November, (c) rain on 19 October, 24 October, and 6 November. In addition, a combination of low temperatures, bad visibility and damp, delayed works on 31 October and 2 November.

The Highways Agency suspended these roadworks for technical reasons, where environmental conditions would have had an adverse impact on safe and effective operational delivery. No work has been suspended on the advice of Kent police.

Media Analysis

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) for what purpose his Department commissions analysis of print media; and how the results of such research are used; [35883]

(2) if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the use of broadcast and print media analysis; [35884]

(3) if he will place copies in the Library of broadcast media reports undertaken for his Department since 2002; [35885]

(4) how much has been paid to Millward Brown for print media analysis undertaken for his Department in each year since 2002; [35886]

(5) whether his Department has (a) undertaken and (b) commissioned any research into (i) broadcast and (ii) print media reporting in relation to the hon. Member for Carshalton and Wallington since 5 May 2005. [36011]

Ms Buck: The Department was formed in May 2002.

In common with other public and private sector organisations we do undertake research to understand the effectiveness of our communications.

The Department has bought media research services from Millward Brown at a total cost of £254,250.40 since the creation of DfT to date. This is broken down for each year as follows:

May 2002 to March 2003	33,518.40
April 2003 to March 2004	62,792.80
April 2004 to March 2005	93,279.20
April 2005 to November 2005	64,660.00

This research independently analyses transport coverage in the national print media only. We also commissioned a one-off examination of regional print media coverage of transport issues.

I can confirm that the Department has not undertaken or commissioned any research into media reporting in relation to the hon. Member for Carshalton and Wallington since 5 May. Media reporting of public statements and comments made by the hon. Member would have only been categorised by the media analysis company as a comment by a shadow Minister/ Opposition politician.

The reports are available on the Department's website at: http://www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_foi/documents/divisionhomepage/041073.hcsp

Media Monitoring

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department and its predecessors have spent on media monitoring activities in each of the last eight financial years. [35634]

Ms Buck: It is common practice for organisations in both the public and private sector to undertake media monitoring activities. This is to both understand the effectiveness of their communications but also to ensure that they are aware of media coverage of issues relating to their activities.

The Department for Transport pays for two media monitoring services. As with other Government Departments, the Department pay a subscription for the Cabinet Office's Media Monitoring Unit. The DfT also commissions a press cuttings company to provide a daily set of cuttings of national print media coverage of transport issues.

Since the Department was formed in May 2002, the following costs have been incurred on these two services in each of the completed financial years:

	MMU	National press cuttings
2002–03	40,097.18	169,976.63
2003–04	41,227.50	164,341.13
2004–05	49,000.00	155,693.86

Ministerial Training

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what briefing and training Ministers joining the Department in May had in advance of (a) making decisions and (b) answering oral questions; and what assessment he has made of the level of preparation and training. [27941]

Ms Buck: My hon. Friends and I received full and comprehensive briefing from senior Officials in the Department, on all policy areas involving the Department for Transport, immediately after our appointment in May 2005.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the travel costs are for each Minister in his Department in each month since June, broken down by mode of transport. [25635]

Ms Buck: Ministers use a variety of public transport services when undertaking departmental business. Detailed information about the mode of transport used by Ministers on departmental business is not held centrally and cannot be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost.

However, the following table shows the travel costs incurred by each Minister in the period from June to November 2005. These figures include costs incurred in connection with the UK's presidency of the EU this year.

Minister	June	July	August	September	October	November	Total
Alistair Darling	3,586	203	34	1,277	5,074	1,001	11,175
Stephen Ladyman	3,642	1,456	1,163	1,011	1,439	8,008	16,719
Derek Twigg	895	0	0	764	211	995	2,865
Karen Buck	284	235	0	221	168	161	1,069
Grand total	8,407	1,894	1,197	3,273	6,892	10,165	31,828

All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions he has used public transport over the past 12 months. [26518]

Ms Buck: The Secretary of State regularly travels by public transport in connection with his official duties. Details of individual journeys are not recorded.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions since 7 July 2005 he has used the London Underground in connection with his official duties. [35026]

Ms Buck: The Secretary of State regularly travels by public transport, including London Underground, in connection with his official duties. The Secretary of State has used London Underground a number of times since 7 July, but details of individual journeys are not recorded.

Motorway Accidents

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) deaths and (b) serious injuries of people of each age between 17 and 45 years there were on motorways in each of the last 10 years. [38273]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of fatal and serious injuries of people aged between 17 and 45 in personal injury road accidents on motorways between 1995 and 2004 is given in the table.

Number of killed and serious casualties aged between 17 and 45 on motorways[1]: 1995 to 2004

Navigational Aids Services

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment was made of the merits of concentrating navigational aids services at the existing Swansea depot as an alternative to constructing a new facility at Dun Laoghaire in the Irish Republic. [37224]

Dr. Ladyman: The Commissioners of Irish Lights new single base operation at Dun Laoghaire is needed to ensure it can play its part more effectively in the integrated aids to navigation service for the British Isles. The General Lighthouse Authorities will continue to share use of ship and buoy yard facilities where it is economically cost effective to do so.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what reason the Irish Government gave for refusing to agree to a reform of the Irish subsidy component of the light dues system for funding navigational aids in Irish Republic territorial waters. [37256]

Dr. Ladyman: The Irish Government have agreed to renegotiate the 1985 Agreement that sets out the funding arrangements for the Commissioners of Irish Lights. We have a statutory responsibility to fund Irish Lights and cannot withdraw from the arrangements in place. Options are being considered that include a more equitable split in cost sharing between the UK and Ireland. We will continue to press the Irish Government to meet the full costs of provision of their aids to navigation.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the final decision to go ahead with the Dun Laoghaire depot has been made; and if he will make a statement. [37289]

Dr. Ladyman: In April 2005, approval was given for the redevelopment of the Commissioners of Irish Lights' (CIL) Dun Laoghaire depot. The existing HQ offices in the centre of Dublin will be sold and depot and offices co-located in a new complex to be built on the existing depot site. Co-location to a modern building will streamline the organisation and bring major efficiency gains to CIL's operations, resulting in annual cost savings of £1.4m. Construction work is expected to commence in January 2006.

Parking Offences

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what powers parking attendants have to issue penalty charge notices to disabled person badge holders who have parked in loading bays. [37874]

Ms Buck [holding answer 15 December 2005]: Parking attendants have powers under the Road Traffic Act 1991 to issue a penalty charge notice where they believe a vehicle has contravened parking regulations. If a Traffic Regulation Order excludes disabled persons' badge holders from parking in loading bays, it would be an offence for which a penalty charge notice may be issued.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what advice he has issued to local authorities regarding disabled person badge holders parking in loading bays. [37875]

Ms Buck [holding answer 15 December 2005]: General advice in the form of Departmental Circulars has been issued to local authorities on the Blue Badge Scheme. Specific advice on the parking concessions provided under the Scheme is contained in an explanatory leaflet which is made available to local authorities and badge holders themselves. This includes advice that badge holders are not permitted to park in places reserved for specific users, including loading bays.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list local authorities that have continued to issue penalty charge notices after notification that notices issued for similar offences were invalid. [37976]

Ms Buck [holding answer 15 December 2005]: This information is not collected centrally. Local authorities are responsible for ensuring that penalty charge notices conform to statutory requirements.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what checks are made by (a) the Department and (b) the National Parking Adjudication Service on the technical aspects of applications by local authorities for decriminalised parking powers. [37980]

Ms Buck [holding answer 15 December 2005]: To take on decriminalised parking enforcement (DPE) powers a local authority has to affirm in its application to the Secretary of State that it will comply with the requirements of Local Authority Circular 1/95—"Guidance on Decriminalised Parking Enforcement outside London" as amended. A copy of the circular has been placed in the House Library. The requirements cover a wide range of procedural, operational and other aspects of enforcement, including the need to show that NPAS is content with the relevant local authority's application.

Pedicabs

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 568W, on pedicabs, what the outcome was of his discussions with representatives of Transport for London on 4 October on the regulation of pedicabs. [37026]

Ms Buck: Following the meeting with them on 4 October TfL officials are taking forward proposals for the introduction of a licensing system for pedicabs in London.

Penalty Charge Notices

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many penalty charge notices have been issued using incorrectly-worded pre-printed forms since decriminalisation of parking enforcement began; by which local authorities they were issued; and if he will make a statement. [37526]

Ms Buck [holding answer 13 December 2005]: This information is not collected centrally. Local authorities are responsible for ensuring that penalty charge notices conform to statutory requirements.

Pier and Harbour Order

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the requests (a) sought from and (b) granted by his Department for ministerial permission and approvals under the Pier and Harbour Order (Bembridge Harbour) Confirmation Act 1963 in each year since 1997. [38160]

Dr. Ladyman: Responsibility for navigational consents under local legislation has rested with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs since October 2004. Prior to that date and since 1997 the Department has no record of any permissions sought or approvals given under the 1963 Act.

Predictive Diallers

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many calls were made from call centres in his Department in 2004–05 using predictive diallers; how many such calls resulted in contact being made with the recipient without a Government agent available to talk to them; and what assessment he has made of the likely impact of Ofcom's policy on silent calls on the use of predictive diallers in departmental call centres. [28166]

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport does not use predictive diallers when making calls to members of the public.

Private Members' Bill

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those Private Members' Bills introduced under (a) Standing Order No. 14(6), (b) Standing Order No. 23 and (c) Standing Order No. 57 which were (i) supported and (ii) opposed by his Department in each Session since 1997–98. [36250]

Ms Buck: The Department was formed on 29 May 2002.

The Department supported the Aviation (Offences) Act 2003 and the Marine Safety Act 2003 both of which were introduced under Standing Order No. 14(6).

Public Appointments

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by his Department, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [36691]

Ms Buck: Information about the political activity of appointees is recorded and publicised in accordance with the independent Commissioner for Public Appointments' Code of Practice. This shows that no former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 have since been appointed to public bodies sponsored by the Department.

Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which spending programmes by his Department where the corresponding functions in Scotland are devolved are classified as non-identifiable in the Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses; and what the allocated expenditure on each is for the 2005–06 financial year. [37491]

Ms Buck: The following table sets out the Department's spending programmes which are classified as non-identifiable in the Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses and where corresponding functions in Scotland are devolved, and the 2005–06 allocated expenditure for these programmes.

DfT programme	2005–06 allocated expenditure (£ million)
Powershift and cleaner vehicles programmes	20
Transport research: sustainable development	2
Transport Technology Standards Research Development	6
Transport Analysis and Economics Research	6
Transport Technology Consultancies	0

Public Relations

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the value was of (a) public opinion research and (b) public relations contracts awarded by his Department in 2004–05 in (i) each (A) nation and (B) region of the UK and (ii) London. [35962]

Ms Buck: For details of how much the Department for Transport spent on public opinion research in 2004–05, I refer the hon. .Member to my answer of 5 October 2005, Official Report, column 2857W, which lists the research and the costs.

For details of how much the Department for Transport spent on public relations contracts in 2004–05 I refer the hon. Member to a reply to the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. Salmond) on 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 146W, which lists the spend on public relations contracts.

Breaking these figures down between nation, region of the UK and London could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public Transport (Disabled Access)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to improve access to public transport for disabled people in Stroud. [38280]

Ms Buck: We have introduced "accessibility planning" into the local transport planning process to encourage local authorities and other agencies to assess more systematically whether people can access transport services in their areas. This process covers all forms of transport from buses, coaches and taxis to cycling and walking networks. Making provision for disabled people is a condition against which the resulting Local Transport Plans (LTPs) are assessed.

At a local level, Gloucestershire county council have installed raised kerbs at bus stops in Stroud to make it easier for disabled people to get on an off buses.

At a national level there has been significant progress in making public transport accessible to disabled people through regulations made under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (DDA 1995). We made the Rail Vehicle Accessibility Regulations (RVAR) in 1998 and many of the trains calling at Stroud station comply with these.

More generally, disabled people in Stroud as elsewhere in the country will also benefit from the provisions in the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 (DDA 2005). We have already laid regulations which will, from 4 December 2006, lift the transport exemption in Part 3 of the DDA 1995 for land-based public transport, vehicle hire, breakdown services and vehicles used on leisure and tourism transport services. We will also be consulting shortly on draft regulations to set an "end date" of no later than 1 January 2020 for when all trains will have to meet RVAR and to apply those regulations to older trains when they are refurbished.

Railways

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a copy of the Review of Northern Rail Services. [36018]

Derek Twigg: The review began earlier this year and recommendations are due early in 2006. A copy of the final report will be placed in the House Library once completed.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which railway stations in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire, (d) Greater London and (e) England and Wales do not meet the standards required by the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [37517]

Ms Buck: Compliance with Part 3 of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 is a matter for station operators. Where disabled people would find it impossible or unreasonably difficult to access a station, then the station operator is under a duty to take reasonable steps to remove or alter physically the obstacle(s), find a way to overcome them, or provide the service by a reasonable alternative means. What is considered reasonable will depend on the circumstances of each case and that is something which ultimately only the courts can determine.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of railway stations have wheelchair access, broken down by (a) county and (b) London borough. [37955]

Ms Buck: The Department does not hold this information.

The rail industry has, however, improved the availability and quality of station information and this has enabled the train operating companies to keep it up to date. Disabled people can get station information at nationalrail.co.uk or by telephone through the National Rail Enquiry Service on 08457 484950.

Disabled people can get information about the accessibility of the stations they wish to use at nationalrail.co.uk

Rates

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was paid by his Department in rates to Coventry local authority in 2004–05. [36237]

Ms Buck [holding answer 13 December 2005]: The Department paid £1,753.96 in rates in 2004–05 to Coventry local authority.

Road Fuel

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his estimate is of the value of road fuel sales to the road transport sector in each financial year since 1997–98, broken down by (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) biofuel sales. [38657]

Dr. Ladyman: Historic data on fuel duty rates, fuel sales and on the total amount of duty paid on those sales is available at http://www.uktradeinfo.com.

Total sales of petrol, diesel and biofuels in each of the years in question were as follows (all figures are in millions of litres).

Litres (millions)

	Petrol	Diesel	Biofuels
1997–98	29,959	18,134	0
1998–99	29,137	18,407	0
1999–2000	28,640	18,295	0
2000–01	27,532	18,493	0
2001–02	28,229	19,113	0
2002–03	27,837	20,102	5
2003–04	27,407	21,230	22
2004–05	26,540	22,395	35

The total amount of duty paid on those fuel sales was as follows (all figures in millions of pounds):

£ million

	Petrol	Diesel (not including biodiesel)	Biofuels
1997–98	12,144	7,101	0
1998–99	13,131	8,197	0
1999–2000	13,667	8,639	0
2000–01	13,397	9,006	0
2001–02	12,960	8,760	0
2002–03	12,756	9,211	1
2003–04	12,713	9,842	6
2004–05	12,500	10,539	9

Data on the total value of road fuel sales is not readily available.

Road Humps (Kettering)

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment the Department has made of road humps in Kettering borough against the regulations the Department has set. [36631]

Ms Buck: The Highways (Road Humps) Regulations 1999 give local authorities powers to construct road humps without the consent of the Secretary of State as long as they meet the requirements of the regulations.

The Department does not assess road humps against the regulations. It is the responsibility of local highway authorities to ensure that road humps comply with the regulations.

Further advice on the design and implementation of road humps is given in the Department's Traffic Advisory Leaflets (TALs). TAL 2/05 "Traffic Calming Bibliography", lists those relevant to road humps, and a copy is already available in the Library of the House.

Road Improvement Costs

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the (a) expected cost when first submitted for approval and (b) most recently-estimated or final cost is of each road scheme (i) in the Targeted Programme of

Improvements and (ii) submitted for funding through the Local Transport Plan process in each year since 1999–2000 and (b) from 2005–06. [37568]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when (a) road schemes that have entered the Targeted Programme of Improvements since April 2003 will be re-appraised and (b) the relevant cost estimates will be updated. [37569]

Dr. Ladyman: The following road schemes have entered the Targeted Programme of Improvements (TPI) since April 2003 and are shown until their next key event. Scheme appraisals, including estimates, are reviewed in advance of these key events. Estimates are kept under constant review.

Scheme	Date of next economic re-appraisal	Key event

A30 Carland Cross to Chiverton Cross

A30 Temple to Higher Carblake Improvement.

Roads

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many parking bays there were in (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2004–05; and how many such bays were subject to parking controls. [38566]

Ms Buck: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his Department's projected spending on road building is in each of the next five years, broken down by category of road; and how many miles of each category of road he expects to be built over that period. [38448]

Dr. Ladyman: We have made indicative budget allocations of £379 million in 2006–07 and £578 million in 2007–08 for major trunk road schemes on motorways and trunk roads categorised as of national importance. In 2006–07 through to 2007–08 we expect to complete two national schemes, which collectively will deliver approximately 6.3 miles of road improvements to the network, and to have started works on eleven others. Expenditure on these roads beyond 2007–08 will be reviewed as part of the next Spending Review and announcements about spending levels beyond 2007–08 will be made after the conclusion of that review.

Future expenditure on motorways and trunk roads categorised as of regional importance, and on roads which are the responsibility of Local Highway Authorities, will be reviewed in the light of the regions' advice on their priorities for major transport schemes within indicative Regional Funding Allocations, which we published in July 2004. The regions' advice is expected in January 2006. However, the Highways Agency is currently working to indicative budget allocations of £262 million in 2006–07 and £328 million in 2007–08 for major trunk road schemes on motorways and trunk roads categorised as of regional importance. In 2006–07 through to 2007–08 the Highways Agency expects to complete 17 regional schemes, which collectively will deliver approximately 58 miles of road improvements to the network, and to have started works on nine others.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of roads for which his Department is responsible were closed for repairs in each year since 1997. [38449]

Dr. Ladyman: The information is not available in the form requested. The Highways Agency is charged with making motorway and trunk road lanes available to traffic. Their records show that over the last six years they have kept an average of 98.8 per cent. of those lanes free from roadworks.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of new roads for which his Department is responsible have been built in each year since 1997, broken down by category of road. [38452]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 27 June 2005, Official Report, columns 1263–66W, for the information up to June 2005. The schemes completed on the trunk road network in England, since June 2005, and their approximate lengths are shown in the following tables:

All-purpose trunk road	Scheme description	Date of completion	Length (miles)
A5	Weeford to Fazeley Improvement	October 2005	3.1
A47	Thorney Bypass	December 2005	3.3
		Total	6.4

Motorway	Scheme description	Date of completion	Length (miles)
A1(M)	Wetherby to Walshford	August 2005	3.7
M5	J17-J18A Northbound Climbing Lane (Hallen Hill)	October 2005	1.4

M25	J12-J15 Widening	December 2005	6.9

Ships (Piracy)

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many UK registered ships have (a) reported and (b) been subjected to (i) acts and (ii) attempted acts of piracy in each of the last four financial years. [38297]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government do not collate piracy statistics according to financial year but on a calendar year basis, similar to that of the IMO and International Maritime Bureau. The answer to parts (a) and (b) are essentially the same, as UK ships only report piracy incidents to the UK if they have been involved in an incident. The number of UK registered ships that have reported and been subjected to an act or attempted act of piracy for the last four calendar years is as follows:

Piracy attack

	Actual	Attempted	Total
2005[1]	3	1	4
2004	1	6	7
2003	4	2	6
2002	2	0	2

[1] January to September.

This data is taken from the International Maritime Bureau's quarterly piracy and armed robbery reports against ships. These figures tend to provide a more accurate record than those provided by the IMO. The figures include ships attacked both on the high seas (true piracy) and ships attacked within territorial waters, classed as maritime robbery.

South Hampshire Rapid Transport Scheme

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his written statement of 29 November 2005, Official Report, columns 16–17WS, on the South Hampshire Rapid Transport Scheme, what discussions his Department (a) has held and (b) plans to hold with Hampshire county council and Portsmouth city council to discuss alternative transportation strategies. [36156]

Derek Twigg: I wrote to Hampshire county council and Portsmouth county council last week offering discussions on transport improvements in the South Hampshire area, in the light of the Government's decision not to reinstate the South Hampshire Rapid Transit scheme. The Department stands ready to work with South Hampshire in exploring good value alternative transport proposals.

The Department has also offered to meet the South Hampshire authorities to discuss whether a package of measures in the Solent area can be developed for the next round of Transport Innovation Fund pump-priming funding in 2006.

Speeding Fines

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the administration costs were of imposing speeding fines in each year since 1997. [38456]

Dr. Ladyman: All Partnership audit certificates for 2004–05, which show a breakdown of expenditure by partner, are posted on the Department's website at:

http://www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_control/documents/contentservertemplate/dft_index.hcst?n=14972&l=2

Sunset Clauses

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his policy is in respect of the use of sunset clauses in legislation. [37515]

Ms Buck: The appropriateness of a sunset clause for the whole or part of any proposed legislation is considered on a case by case basis. It is also addressed when a regulatory impact assessment relating to legislation is being prepared.

Transport Expenditure

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the transport spending per person by (a) his Department and (b) all public bodies on (i) light rail, (ii) heavy rail, (iii) bus and (iv) roads has been in (A) Yorkshire and Humber and (B) London in each year since 1997; and what estimates have been made for each year to 2010. [37870]

Ms Buck [holding answer 15 December 2005]: This information is not held centrally. However, details on overall transport spend per head of population for the two regions, based on certain assumptions as to how this should be attributed, can be found in chapter 8 of the Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 2005—published by HM Treasury, and available on their website at http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/economic_data_and_tools/finance_spending_statistics/pes_publications/pespub_index.cfm

Tyne and Wear (Financial Bids)

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library the submissions made by Tyne and Wear authorities for local transport plan support for (a) 2005–06 and (b) 2006–07. [34377]

Ms Buck: The provisional second local transport plan for Tyne and Wear (which seeks funding support for 2006–07) and the annual progress report submitted in 2004 on the first local transport plan (which seeks funding support for 2005–06) are being placed in the Library.

Ultra-light Rail Systems

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the relative costs of ultra light rail compared with (a) guided busways and (b) conventional train systems. [34004]

Derek Twigg: The cost of any scheme will vary significantly according to local circumstances and so direct comparison of this nature is difficult. No 'ultra light rail' systems have been constructed and there is little evidence on which to estimate its likely costs.

Vehicle Registration

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) cars, (b) commercial vans and (c) lorries were registered to use roads in the UK in each year since 1997. [38821]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested can be found in the following table:

	(a) Cars	(b) Vans	(c) Lorries
1997	21,681,000	2,317,000	414,000
1998	22,115,000	2,362,000	412,000
1999	22,785,000	2,427,000	415,000
2000	23,196,000	2,469,000	418,000
2001	23,899,000	2,544,000	422,000
2002	24,543,000	2,622,000	425,000
2003	24,985,000	2,730,000	426,000
2004	25,754,000	2,900,000	434,000

The figures provided are for Great Britain and do not include Northern Ireland.

Vehicle Servicing

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his estimate is of the turnover in the servicing of (a) commercial and (b) private vehicles in each year since 1997. [38654]

Dr. Ladyman: Information is not available by type of vehicle, or specifically for servicing. Estimates for the maintenance and repair, including servicing, of all vehicles are as follows:

Annual turnover: maintenance and repair of motor vehicles[1]

1998	9.0
1999	11.1
2000	11.2
2001	11.9
2003	12.4

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

"Full Pint" Legislation

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action his Department (a) has taken and (b) intends to take in respect of 'full pint' legislation following the completion of the consultation process on simplifying the food orders. [37492]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It remains our aim to publish for consultation in the new year an Order consolidating and simplifying the weights and measures provisions relating to food. This will take into account the earlier consultations on the 'full pint' issue, and incorporate our conclusions. However, the timing of the draft Order will depend on the progress of discussions between the community institutions on the Commission's proposals on specified quantities.

Asbestos

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the risks to the public of the presence of asbestos in textured coatings. [28357]

Mrs. McGuire: I have been asked to reply.

There are no risks to the public from asbestos in textured coatings where the material is undisturbed and in good condition.

The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) has recently published research commissioned from the Health and Safety Laboratory on levels of asbestos fibres released during licensed-work to remove textured decorative coatings in domestic premises. As part of the current Health and Safety Commission (HSE) consultation on proposed changes to the UK regulations governing work with asbestos (Proposals for revised Asbestos Regulations and an Approved Code of Practice (CD 205)), HSE has commissioned further research on asbestos exposures arising from work on textured coatings, will consider the risks to the public from such work, and will evaluate this and other available research.

The published HSL research and HSC consultation document are available on HSE's website.

Atomic Energy Authority

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the allocation of expenditure on the UK Atomic Energy Authority in his Department's Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis is made on the basis of who benefits from the service. [35858]

Barry Gardiner: UKAEA expenditure is allocated to statistical regions based on expenditure by nuclear site for which it is responsible.

Bio-energy Capital Grant Scheme

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in respect of how many of the projects for large scale electricity generators of greater than 20 MWe for which grants were awarded under the bio-energy capital grant scheme draw-down of the grants have begun; what sums have so far been paid out for such projects; and to whom. [33982]

Malcolm Wicks: Of the three projects in this category £2,975,000 has been paid to Sembcorp for the Teesside project. On the E.ON project at Lockerbie, the grant has been accepted and work is under way, but no grant payments have yet been made; and the Peninsula Power WINBEG Project has yet to accept its grant offer.

Business Start-ups

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many business start-ups have taken place in (a) Tamworth constituency and (b) the West Midlands in the last 12 months; and what steps he is taking to increase the number in each case. [37835]

Alun Michael: There is no statistical information available which can accurately record the total number of business start-ups as such. New VAT registrations can be used as a proxy for business start-ups, and these show that in 2004 there were 225 new registrations in the Tamworth district council area and 14,855 in the West Midlands. The Tamworth constituency covers a greater area than that of Tamworth district council but it has not been possible to quantify the number of start-up or VAT registrations at a constituency level as records are not maintained by constituency area.

The Department of Trade and Industry sponsors the regional development agencies (RDAs) which are charged with the responsibility for the economic development of their regions and to work with partners to increase the sustainability of businesses and foster business start-ups. Advantage West Midlands supports a range of regional-level schemes and programmes that support start-ups including Mustard which exists to give new and young business start-ups the right kind of help when they need it the most. It is an initiative offering practical, hands-on expertise to high growth-potential new and young business start-ups in the West Midlands. Mustard is a unique private/public sector collaboration managed by Birmingham Chamber of Commerce and Industry and delivered by the region's Business Links and leading private sector consultancies.

Advantage West Midlands has also established a suite of regional funds available to start-ups including the Early Growth Fund, the Growth Fund and Advantage Business Angels and created a searchable database of all public and private sector sources of finance in the region—www.westmidlandsfinance.com.

The region's three high technology corridors are sites providing more incubation space for high value start-ups. For example, the Wolverhampton to Telford corridor has just completed work on the £5.5 million e-Innovation Centre in Telford, providing start-up premises and grow-on space for companies involved in high-technology businesses such as e-commerce and e-engineering.

To create an enterprise culture in Tamworth and the West Midlands region in general, Advantage West Midlands has established the West Midlands Enterprise Board. One of the targets the Enterprise Board has set itself is increasing the number of self employed people in the region by 35,000 by 2010. To help achieve this, it has recommended reforming the business support network. The new reformed network will include in-depth, specialist support to a wide range of start-ups across the region and ensure that the various initiatives which are already in place to stimulate entrepreneurship and start up activity are effectively brought together to provide cohesive packages of support. Under the current business support regime Business Link Staffordshire has assisted 1,816 start-ups in the county during the period 1 January 2005 to 15 December 2005.

Carbon Capture

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria were used to decide that £25 million was the appropriate amount for the initial investment in carbon capture and sequestration. [36408]

Malcolm Wicks: The £25 million was assigned in the Carbon Abatement Technology Strategy to provide capital grant support for the demonstration of a Capture Ready Plant or Carbon Dioxide Storage. The precise amount needed to support such projects depends on what industry brings forward, but £25 million is a significant contribution and would help leverage additional funds from other sources.

My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer recently announced an additional £10 million in his pre-Budget statement, which increases the amount to £35 million.

Coal Mining

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will instigate a review of the policies related to the production of coal in the UK; and whether he has made a recent assessment of the potential for further coal production in the UK. [37866]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 15 December 2005]: The current Energy Review will consider the role of coal in delivering our energy policy goals.

An assessment of the potential for further coal production in the UK was made in 1999. There are no present plans to commission a further assessment.

Competitiveness Council

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals on energy issues were put before the EU Competitiveness Council on 28–29 November in respect of the consideration of the EU's Seventh Framework Programme. [35652]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 15 December 2005]: The Commission's proposal for the Seventh Framework Programme (FP7) includes energy research as one of nine thematic priorities. The EURATOM programme for nuclear research and training also includes a number of relevant activities. The Competitiveness Council on 28 November considered a UK Presidency compromise text of the FP7 Proposal and member states agreed to a Partial General Approach, which excludes budgetary aspects pending the outcome of the negotiations on the EU budget.

Deceased Optional Risk Offer Scheme

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what payments have been made in each quartile under the Deceased Optional Risk offer scheme since payments began. [37935]

Malcolm Wicks: As at 11 December 2005, 904 payments of £1,200 to widows and 2,539 payments of £1,000 to ex-miners' families had been made under the Deceased Optional Risk Offer scheme since it became operational on 1 September. This scheme is intended to quickly compensate those claimants where there is no evidence of Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease. Under the full scheme, the average payment in equivalent circumstances is £822. Claimants' representatives will be able to advise for each claim on the eligibility for and merits of a DOROS payment.

EU-China Textiles Agreement

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the likely effects of the EU-China textiles agreement on numbers of jobs in (a) the EU, (b) China and (c) the UK; and if he will make a statement. [16844]

Ian Pearson: The textiles agreement between the European Commission and the Chinese Ministry of Commerce concluded in June and subsequently revised in September limits imports into the EU from China of 10 textiles and clothing products until the end of 2007. This agreement provided a level of stability for trade in these products and avoided the uncertainty of the alternative of a succession of product-by-product safeguard investigations. I have made no assessment on the effects on jobs in the EU, China or the UK.

EU-Vietnam Trade Dispute

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the trade dispute between the EU and Vietnam. [36670]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 12 December 2005]: I am not aware of any trade dispute between the EU and Vietnam. However, the European Commission is investigating the alleged dumping of Vietnamese (and Chinese) footwear. The European Commission has yet to produce the preliminary findings of its investigation.

Gas Prices

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to cap wholesale gas prices; and what discussions he has had with UK industry on the effect of unregulated gas price increases on business. [37936]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government's approach to security of energy supply is to let the market work so that price signals reflect supply and demand conditions and thereby encourage restraint on the demand side and additional provision on the supply side as necessary. A cap on wholesale prices would be wholly contrary to that approach and would be likely to have an extremely damaging impact on the market's ability to balance supply and demand in the short-term and on investor confidence in the longer-term.

I, as well as DTI and Ofgem officials, have had numerous meetings with industry representatives to discuss the impact of high gas prices and ways of mitigating that impact.

Gas Supply

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether there is sufficient gas supply to meet the demand of UK industry for the next 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [37937]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government's approach to security of gas supply is to foster a market-based regulatory framework which incentivises market participants to ensure that supply and demand balance. Both supply and demand can be affected by various different factors on a day-to-day basis, such as the weather, prices both in the UK and overseas, market conditions in supplier and transit countries affecting the availability and price of imported gas, technical issues at production and import facilities, etc. On an annual basis, however, if investment in currently planned import projects goes ahead as expected, there should be sufficient capacity to deliver gas to meet UK demand until at least 2020.

Liquefied Gas Pipeline

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with (a) Cadw and (b) the Countryside Council for

Wales in relation to the proposed Tywi Route for the liquefied gas pipeline from Milford Haven to Herefordshire. [35595]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has attended a meeting with key parties on the proposed pipeline from Milford Haven to Aberdulais. It has also attended several meetings on proposed pipeline from Filindre to Tirley at which the proposed route was discussed. I understand the CCW attended all the meetings but not the CADW.

Over-indebtedness

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he has taken as a result of his tackling over-indebtedness action plan of 2004; what further research and monitoring he carried out further to Annex D of the action plan; and what the results were. [38298]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Actions taken as a result of the tackling over-indebtedness action plan of 2004 are set out in "Tackling Over-indebtedness—Annual Report 2005" published in August 2005 (available in the Libraries of the House and on the DTI website: http://www.dti.gov.uk/ccp/topicsl/overindebtedness.htm#report2005). Research carried out further to the 2004 plan is summarised in Annex C of the 2005 annual report. Monitoring of progress against the action plan is included in the annual report, with additional monitoring of the high level factors which influence levels of over-indebtedness reviewed on a quarterly basis (and published on the DTI website: http://www.dti.gov.uk/ccp/topicsl/overindebtedness.htm#monitorql05). The results of these exercises are set out in the documents referred to and enclosed references.

Post Office

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reasons the Postal Services Act 2000 does not require the Post Office to compensate for the cost of the postage when a package is lost. [38110]

Barry Gardiner: Section 89 of the Postal Services Act 2000 enables universal service providers (currently only Royal Mail) to make schemes setting out the terms and conditions for their provision of universal postal services. These schemes include provision for compensation payments for loss etc. Postcomm, the independent regulator, is responsible for enforcing such schemes (including on compensation) through the licensing regime also created by the Act.

The powers required for Royal Mail to make such schemes were already in place under previous postal services legislation before the creation of the 2000 Act. Rather than introduce new arrangements, when adequate mechanisms already existed, the Postal Services Act 2000 merely mirrored previous arrangements updating them only to take into account the new framework and references for postal services envisaged by the 2000 Act (i.e. the potential for more universal service providers in addition to Royal Mail and the licensing regime).

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many rural post offices closed in the last 12 months. [38696]

Barry Gardiner: I am advised by Post Office Ltd. that total net rural post office closures for the financial year 2004–05 were 144.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the written statement of 8 December 2005, Official Report, column 1245WS, on regional development agencies, who the (a) new and (b) reappointed members of the South-west Regional Development Agency are. [38138]

Alun Michael: The written statement lists Kelvyn Derrick, Nigel Costley and Jonathon Porritt as fresh appointments, as their appointments followed an open competition, in accordance with the requirements set down in the Commissioner for Public Appointments Code of Practice. Kelvyn Derrick has been appointed for the first time. Nigel Costley and Jonathon Porritt were already serving as SWRDA Board members.

The chairman, Juliet Williams and board members Judith Reynolds, Harry Studholme and Eric Thomas have all been re-appointed for a second term.

Rogue Dialling

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make representations to British Telecom on not holding consumers responsible for telephone charges due to rogue dialling; if he will introduce legislation to protect consumers from the effects of rogue dialling; and if he will ask the Independent Committee for the Supervision of Standards of Telephone Information to re-open an investigation of the role of premium media communication and other companies in rogue dialling. [33181]

Alun Michael: The Independent Committee for the Supervision of Standards of Telephone Information Services (ICSTIS) has put in place a prior permission scheme for Premium Rate diallers. This makes it possible to assess the dialler software to be used for proposed services, and if appropriate to prohibit their release. The independent regulator for electronic communications, the Office of Communications (Ofcom), is currently consulting on extending this scheme to enable ICSTIS to take action against any rogue dialler irrespective of the telephone number or call charge used. Implementing a recommendation from Ofcom's Report into the Regulation of Premium Rate Services, this Department has just increased the maximum fine for breaches of the ICSTIS Code, and ICSTIS intends to review its sanctions policy early in 2006. ICSTIS has also put in place a key recommendation from the report to slow the money-flow to those that abuse the premium rate services charging mechanism. This obliges telecoms companies not to make payments to premium rate service providers for at least 30 days after calls have been made. This gives ICSTIS more time to identify breaches of its Code and enables ICSTIS to direct telecoms companies to withhold funds pending the outcome of investigations.

As ICSTIS has not had any complaints since May, Premium Media Communications may have withdrawn from the UK dialler market. However ICSTIS plans to write to this company shortly to give it notice of the withdrawal of its licence to operate diallers. This means that no phone company can give Premium Media Communications premium rate numbers for dialler services.

The Office of the Telecommunications Ombudsman (Otelo) is the appropriate body to make representations to BT on consumer disputes about telephone charges due to rogue dialling, and regularly contacts BT about specific cases.

Royal Mail

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he is expecting the Royal Mail to publish details of its employee share scheme. [35771]

Barry Gardiner: The Chairman of Royal Mail has said that he is keen to introduce such a scheme as this would give employees a stake in the business and help create the structural changes that are needed to enable the Royal Mail to compete in a liberalised market.

To date Royal Mail has not presented details of any such scheme to the Government for their consideration. Whether or not Royal Mail intend to publish proposals for such a scheme is a matter for them and I have therefore referred my hon. Friend's question to the chairman of Royal Mail and asked that he reply to my hon. Friend directly.

Stonehenge Visitor Centre

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Stonehenge Visitor Centre project. [38084]

Mr. Lammy: I have been asked to reply.

It is inappropriate for me to comment on the detail of English Heritage's Visitor Centre plans which are now subject to appeal. The present visitor facilities fail to meet the quality visitors expect and are inappropriate to the setting. English Heritage wants to address this and they have my support.

Toucan Telecom

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with Ofcom on complaints about telephone sales by representatives of Toucan Telecom. [37735]

Alun Michael: It is the responsibility of the regulator, the Office of Communications (Ofcom) to deal with such complaints. Accordingly, my officials have asked the Chief Executive of Ofcom to reply directly to the hon. Member and to send me a copy of his letter. Copies of the chief executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of the Houses.

Trade Liberalisation

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his policy is on trade liberalisation affecting developing countries; and if he will make a statement. [37500]

Ian Pearson: The Government believe that it is for developing countries to make their own decisions on the timing, pace, sequencing and product coverage of any trade liberalisation in line with their own national development plans and poverty reduction strategies.

UK Oil Supplies

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which countries import oil from the UK's surplus; and what proportion was imported by each country in 2004–05. [36850]

Malcolm Wicks: The table shows exports of UK crude oil split by country of destination (from which it may be transhipped elsewhere) for 2004.

Total crude oil exports from the UK in 2004 were 59½ million tonnes, with four countries (the USA, the Netherlands, Germany and France) accounting for 81 per cent. of UK crude oil exports.

Exports of UK crude oil 2004

Destination country	Tonnes (million)	Percentage of total exports
Canada	2.9	5
France	8.5	14
Germany	9.5	16
Italy	2.2	4
Netherlands	12.3	21
Portugal	0.6	1
Republic of Ireland	0.7	1
Spain	0.8	1
Sweden	1.0	2
USA	17.8	30
Other	3.2	5
Total exports	59.6	100

Working Time Directive

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the Government expressed the view that the opt-out from the Working Time directive (a) should be regarded as an exception and (b) should eventually be made redundant at the last meeting of the Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council; and if he will make a statement. [38020]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 15 December 2005]: At the Employment Council on 8 December, the Government expressed the view that the opt-out was an essential part of the Directive and that a choice to work longer hours must continue to be made available to workers. The Government did not agree that the opt-out should be phased out. Although some member states continue to believe that it should be severely limited or removed, this view did not gain majority support in the Employment Council.

DEFENCE

Armed Forces

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many armed forces personnel have been (a) injured and (b) killed whilst performing temporary firefighting duties in each of the last 10 years. [37962]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the armed forces are serving abroad, broken down by location. [30407]

Mr. Ingram: Data collected manually from operational records show that as at 7 December 2005 the number of armed forces personnel deployed and in country on that day were:

Country	Service personnel[1]
Bosnia	770

[1] Due to the rounding method used, figures may not always equal the sum of the parts. When rounding to the nearest 10, numbers ending in five are rounded to the nearest 20 to prevent systematic bias.
[2] Denotes less than 10.

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British armed forces personnel are deployed on (a) expeditionary operations abroad, broken down by country, and (b) in Northern Ireland. [35329]

Mr. Ingram: Data collected manually from operational records show that as at 7 December 2005 the number of armed forces personnel deployed and in country on that day were as follows.

Country	Number of[1] service personnel
Bosnia	770

[1] Due to the rounding methods used, figures may not always equal the sum of the parts. When rounding to the nearest 10, numbers ending in five have been rounded to the nearest 20 to prevent systematic bias.
[2] Indicates less than 10.

As at 30 November 2005 there were 9,790 service personnel in Northern Ireland. This figure includes 3,150 members of the Royal Irish Regiment.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many recruits to the UK armed forces since 1997 were from Coventry South; and if he will make a statement. [37888]

Mr. Touhig: This information is not held centrally and cannot be collated without incurring disproportionate cost.

Army Prosecuting Authority

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 24 November 2005, Official Report, columns 2201–2W, on the Army Prosecuting Authority, (1) what the reasons were for the delay in carrying out further investigations in the case concerned; [36128]

(2) if he will make a statement on the case in which investigations have now been completed. [36064]

Mr. Ingram: As the case referred to is subject to legal proceedings it would be not be appropriate for me to comment further.

Army Uniforms

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received on the quality of army uniforms in each of the last three years. [38264]

Mr. Ingram: I and my ministerial colleagues have received a number of representations, either direct or through Parliament, regarding the provision of garments and clothing during the last three years. These letters have been related, in particular, to the contract award for Cut and Sew Garments and have included representations on the quality of army uniforms. Delivery of garments under the Cut and Sew contract continues to meet quality standards.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the balance sheet value of the Atomic Weapons Establishment was on 31 March; what the (a) carrying charge and (b) applicable depreciation for that establishment is in the 2005–06 financial year; and if he will make a statement. [37636]

John Reid: As at 31 March 2005, the Gross Book Value of the Atomic Weapons Establishment (AWE) Balance Sheet was £599.8 million and the associated carrying depreciation was £86.7 million, resulting in a Net Book Value of £513.1 million. The projected in year depreciation to 31 March 2006, is £26.2 million.

Ballykelly Army Camp

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the Ballykelly Army Camp. [37843]

Mr. Ingram: Ballykelly is one of the no more than 14 core sites listed in the Joint Declaration as locations where the regular garrison might be based after the end of Operation Banner. There is no change in this position.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what will happen to the proceeds raised by the disposal of former married quarters at Ballykelly, Co. Londonderry. [37844]

Mr. Ingram: The proceeds of the sale of the former married quarters at Ballykelly, Co. Londonderry will come to the defence budget in common with all receipts from the disposal of surplus defence property.

Cadets (Funding)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the units of (a) Army cadets, (b) Royal Marine cadets, (c) Royal Navy cadets and (d) Air Training Corps cadets in the Isle of Wight and Hampshire; and what grant was paid to each unit by his Department in (i) 1997, (ii) 2001 and (iii) 2005. [38161]

Mr. Touhig: Cadet force units in Hampshire and the Isle of Wight are as follows:

The department provides funding to the individual services to support their respective cadet forces, which is administered through the cadet force headquarters. Each unit does not receive a specific grant, but benefits from the support of its national organisation and parent service, depending on need, unit contingent size and activity undertaken.

Compensation Claims (Kenya)

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many claims for compensation were lodged in Kenya against members of the UK armed services in the last two years; and what each claim was for. [36937]

Mr. Ingram: No claims were lodged in Kenya against members of the United Kingdom armed services in the last two years.

Courts Martial

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the oral answer of 7 November 2005, Official Report, columns 21–30, on courts martial, what the cost was of (a) the investigation and (b) the court martial proceedings in relation to the serving or former members of the Parachute Regiment accused of murdering an Iraqi citizen. [27060]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 10 November 2005]: The costs for the investigation in relation to the serving and former members of the Parachute Regiment accused of murdering an Iraqi citizen are not available as a separate figure. General costs relating to the running of courts martial such as staff and utilities are not held centrally. The more direct costs related to this court-martial, such as legal fees and travel and subsistence are not yet fully available as some legal bills are yet to be presented. These are not expected to exceed £5 million.

Defence Budget

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the defence budget was in each year since 1997. [29394]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 28 November 2005]: Defence spending plans are set as part of the Government's Spending Review process. The outcome is published in Treasury White Papers on the conclusion of each Spending Review round and in the annual Government Expenditure Plan for Defence. Drawn from these documents, the planned defence budget was as follows:

	Budget (£ billion)
1997–98	21.8
1998–99	22.2
1999–00	22.3
2000–01	23.0
2001–02	23.6
2002–03	29.3
2003–04	30.9
2004–05	29.7
2005–06	30.9
2007–08	33.5

The Government accounting framework has changed progressively over this period due to the introduction of full Resource Accounting and Budgeting (RAB). The terms in which the budgets were set are therefore not directly comparable.

In-year adjustments to the budget (for example, to cover the cost of operations) are set out through the estimates process, approved by Parliament.

Defence Systems and Equipment Exhibition

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the types of equipment exhibited at the Defence Systems and Equipment International 2005 exhibition which are banned for direct export under British law. [32639]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The DTI is not responsible for authorising displays at this exhibition, and the question should be referred to the organiser, who worked closely with the Ministry of Defence.

The DTI's role is limited to the issue of export licences where these are required, e.g. for the re-export of goods on display after the exhibition, or the promotion of trade in controlled or restricted goods between third countries. On that basis, we are not aware that any of the goods specified were exhibited at DSEI2005. Beyond that, export licences are not required for the exhibition of such goods in the UK. Firearms licences may however be required from the Home Office.

The Government's 1997 ban on the export and transhipment through the UK of torture goods relates to portable devices designed or modified for riot control purposes or self-protection to administer an electric shock, including electric-shock batons, electric-shock shields, stun guns, and tasers, and specially designed components for such devices, and leg-irons, gang-chains, shackles (excluding normal handcuffs). Since 1998, the import, export, transfer and manufacture of all forms of anti-personnel landmines has also been banned.

Departmental Staff

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff are employed by his Department in each (a) region and (b) nation of the UK; and if he will make a statement. [35887]

Mr. Touhig: The number of staff employed by the Ministry Of Defence by region and nation of the UK can be found in United Kingdom Defence Statistics 2005 Table 2.3: Service and Civilian Personnel by Government Office Region, at 1 April each year (see www.dasa.mod.uk).

Service data is published quarterly in TSP10; the most recent publication shows the numbers of Service personnel at 1 July 2005. Copies of TSP 10 are held in the Library of the House and also available on www.dasa.mod.uk.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many personnel will be relocated from RAF Innsworth to RAF High Wycombe in the restructuring of RAF headquarters. [37000]

Mr. Ingram: As recruitment to the new organisation is not due to conclude until next summer and as the RAF Personnel Management Agency are not due to relocate until 2008, it is too early to state how many posts will be filled by personnel relocating from RAF Innsworth to RAF High Wycombe.

Departmental Telephone Lines

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 10 November 2005, Official Report, column 705W, on departmental telephone lines, if he will list the organisations which hold the records on 0870 numbers used by his Department and the revenue received from them. [37949]

Mr. Touhig: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether a Minister in his Department is planned to be nominated to take responsibility for liaison with the Office for Disability Issues; and if he will make a statement. [37059]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence is not a key Department in taking forward the recommendations of the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report "Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People" with the Office for Disability Issues, and is not, therefore, a member of the cross-government ministerial steering group. We are, however, kept fully aware of the work of the steering group and will be involved as necessary. I am the lead Minister for equality and diversity issues generally within the Department.

Equipment Exports (Libya/China)

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on exporting defence equipment to (a) Libya and (b) China. [36746]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

The Government continues to implement fully the EU arms embargo on exports to China, as set out by my hon. Friend the then Minister of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the late Derek Fatchett, in his reply to a question by the hon. Member for Gedling (Vernon Coaker) on 3 June 1998 Official Report, columns 240W-241W. In addition, all export licence applications for Libya and China are rigorously assessed on a case by case basis against the consolidated EU and national arms export licensing criteria, taking account of the circumstances prevailing at the time and other announced Government policies. The criteria clearly set out, among other considerations, our commitment to assess the risk that exports might be diverted under undesirable conditions, used for internal repression, external aggression, to abuse human rights, or the risk of reverse engineering or unintended technology transfer.

Falklands/South Georgia

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Army, (b) Navy and (c) RAF personnel are serving in (i) the Falklands and (ii) South Georgia. [37161]

Mr. Ingram: There are approximately 390 Army, 340 Navy and 680 Royal Air Force personnel serving in the Falklands. The numbers of armed forces personnel serving in the Falklands and South Georgia will vary throughout the year as a result of individual posting plots and unit movements.

There are no armed forces personnel based permanently on South Georgia.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people sit on the (a) South Georgia Council and (b) Falklands Island Council. [37162]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I have been asked to reply.

The Falkland Islands Legislative Council has eight elected members and four ex officio members (who have no vote). Three of the legislative councillors form the executive council, which also has five ex officio members and is chaired by the Governor.

South Georgia has no permanent population and has no legislative council.

Future Joint Combat Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what missile systems were to be fitted to the Future Joint Combat Aircraft when first designed; what the current position is; and if he will make a statement. [38186]

Mr. Ingram: The Joint Combat Aircraft (JCA) will enter UK service with a potent air-to-ground and air-to-air capability provided by Paveway IV precision guided bombs, and ASRAAM and AMRAAM air-to-air missiles. Future requirements are kept under review as part of the aircraft's ongoing capability development: among the weapons under consideration for integration at a later date are Storm Shadow and Brimstone. Our missile system requirements have not changed from when the Joint Strike Fighter was selected to meet our JCA requirement.

HMS Sheffield

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 17 November 2005, Official Report, column 1409W, on HMS Sheffield, what his timetable is for (a) the completion of the departmental review and (b) the publication of the findings; and if he will make a statement. [32367]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence review is still continuing but I hope to be in a position to write to the hon. Member in the new year to advise him of the timetable for its completion. At that time, it should also be possible to provide an indication as to when any documents relating to the Board of Inquiry into the loss of HMS Sheffield may be made public.

Intrepid Fallen Heroes Fund

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements his Department has made to facilitate the financial assistance offered by the US-based Intrepid Fallen Heroes Fund to the families of British personnel lost on operations in Iraq and Afghanistan. [36458]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 14 December 2005]: Since June 2003, the Intrepid/Anheusar Busch Fallen Heroes Fund (Intrepid Foundation) has, very generously, been supporting the widows and children of US and UK Service personnel killed while serving on operations in Iraq and Afghanistan. Support ceased in June 2005 when the Intrepid Foundation decided to concentrate its activities in support of limbless US Service personnel. This decision was taken in light of the recent US Congress decision to significantly enhance the support given to families of personnel killed while on operations.

The Ministry of Defence has a liaison officer in place who regularly communicates with the Intrepid Foundation in New York and facilitates payments through the appropriate single Service casualty organisation. The Intrepid Foundation has paid $10,000 to each widow and $5,000 to each child of a Service person who has died. Where an unmarried partner is involved, the Foundation has paid $5,000 to each child. Forty-eight families have so far benefited from the Intrepid Foundation with payments ranging from $5,000 to $25,000. There are four outstanding cases that the Fund and the Ministry of Defence continue to work on.

When the scheme ceased in June this year the Chief of the Defence Staff wrote to the Chairman of the Intrepid Foundation thanking him personally for his support. I would like to take this opportunity to add my own personal thanks for their very generous and unstinting support.

Iraq/Afghanistan

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the identities of the killers of the six Royal Military Police who died at Al Majarr Al Kabir in Iraq on 24 June 2003 are known by the British authorities. [30738]

Mr. Ingram: The identities of individuals suspected of being involved in the incident in which the six Royal Military Policemen died in Al Majarr Al Kabir on 24 June 2003 are known to the British authorities.

Jurisdiction for this case lies with the central criminal court of Iraq and they are responsible for issuing any arrest warrants. Case papers, which take account of the Royal Military Police investigation, including the identity of key suspects, have been lodged with the court. The Ministry of Defence will continue to provide whatever support it can.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the potential impact of the US mid-term elections in November 2006 on the programme and timetable for withdrawal of coalition forces from Iraq and Afghanistan. [38259]

Mr. Ingram: Withdrawal of coalition forces from Iraq and Afghanistan is a matter for the individual troop contributing nations. Withdrawal of UK forces does not depend on particular dates or timetables but on achieving certain conditions.

Married Quarters

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer to the right hon. and learned Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram) of 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 98W, on married quarters, what the cost to his Department of the empty married quarters properties was in the last year for which figures are available; what plans his Department has for reducing this number; and if he will make a statement. [37767]

Mr. Touhig: The Married Quarters estate in Great Britain comprises some 49,000 properties of which approximately 7,900 can be empty at any one time. The figure of 7,900 fluctuates throughout the year and the cost cannot readily be identified. However, the nominal rental cost of that number of properties would be around £22 million. In practice, the vast majority of properties remain empty for considerably less than a year.

The number of vacant properties is kept under constant review and they are managed either for continued use, or for disposal where it can be demonstrated that there is no identified longer-term need. The level of empty properties has historically been higher than social housing norms largely because the Ministry of Defence queues houses for families, not families for houses. A number of studies into future basing requirements is currently under way and some of the empty homes are being held against future decisions or are earmarked for work to improve their condition.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer to the right hon. and learned Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram) of 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 98W, on married quarters, where the married quarters in England which have been empty for longest are located; and if he will make a statement. [37768]

Mr. Touhig: This information will take a little time to obtain from the database. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer to the right hon. and learn d Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram) of 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2054W, on married quarters, how many properties in the married quarters estate he expects to be classified as empty in each of the next three financial years; and if he will make a statement. [37769]

Mr. Touhig: It is not possible to predict accurately the number of married quarters that will be empty in each of the next three financial years. Approximately 7,900 properties can be empty at any one time and that number fluctuates depending upon demand.

The following table gives details of those properties in Great Britain that have been identified for disposal and those which are currently empty.

	Properties identified for disposal	Currently empty pending disposal
2006-07	568	269
2008-09	221	34

Properties in the married quarters estate that are leased from Annington Homes are prepared for disposal in sufficient numbers to meet the minimum number criteria laid down in the 1996 Sale Agreement. Typically this means either 10 per cent. of a site or 20 properties (whichever is the lesser) have to be available for disposal at any time. Consequently, empty properties are retained until sufficient numbers at a site become available. Married quarters which are owned by the Ministry of Defence can be disposed of more easily upon vacant possession.

Medical Provision (Gulf)

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what medical provision is available in the Gulf for British forces; and whether it is provided exclusively by British medical personnel. [37265]

Mr. Touhig: Medical support to any deployed operation is absolutely vital, and British forces in the Gulf have access to a wide range of high quality medical care, the majority of which is provided by UK Defence Medical Services.

Specifically, there are three levels of Medical Treatment Facility (MTF) available to the British forces in the Gulf. These are:

Role 1—Primary health care, specialised first aid, triage, resuscitation and stabilisation.

In addition to the organic role 1 facilities within the deployed elements, there is also a facility at Basra air station with additional strategic, tactical and immediate response teams components deployed.

Health care providers also give basic occupational medicine and preventative medical advice including:

primary dental care;

basic laboratory testing;

initial stress management.

Role 2—Reception and triage of casualties, and resuscitation and treatment of shock to a higher level than role 1 MTFs.

May include damage control surgery and a short term holding facility for casualties until they can be returned to duty or evacuated. Can be enhanced to include primary surgery (PS), intensive care unit (ICU), and medium and low dependency nursing care beds (MLDs). May also cover:

preventative medicine; operational stress management, psychiatry or psychology; diagnostic imaging and tele-medicine;

patient evacuation co-ordination;

GeneralMedicine;

Genito-urinary medicine.

There are role 2 facilities at Al Amarah and Al Muthanna; the latter has Australian medical personnel supporting UK personnel.

Role 3—Deployed hospitalisation and associated support elements including PS, ICU, MLDs, diagnostic support and mission tailored clinical specialities for emergency medical care.

The holding capacity allows for beds for the sick and injured, diagnosis and treatment of patients who may return to duty within the Joint Operations Area (JOA), within the constraints of the Theatre Holding Policy. Role 3 facilities reinforce those of roles 2 and control or give ready-access to Medical Evacuation (MEDEVAC) assets. These may include:

Specialist surgery (neuro-surgery, maxillo-facial, burns);

Advanced and specialist diagnostic capabilities to support clinical specialists (CT scan, arthroscopy, sophisticated laboratory tests);

Major medical, nursing specialities (internal medicine, neurology, intensive care, ophthalmology);

Primary dental care.

The MOD has a role 3 field hospital at Shaibah logistics base, which is currently supported by a Czech surgical team. This has the additional capability of a theatre dental team, a mental health team, two aeromedical evacuation liaison officers (AELO), and a detachment of 84 Medical Supply Squadron.

Other deployed facilities include:

Environmental health technicians, deployed throughout the area of responsibility;

AELO/primary health care nurse based in Baghdad;

Medical admin primary health care/aeromed evacuation co-ord in Muharraq and Seeb;

Primary health care nurse/AELO in Al Udeid.

Other troop contributing nations provide facilities which, if necessary, our troops can access. Similarly, other nations can access our facilities.

Meteorological Office

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the temperature has been at midday at each of the Met Office's observation stations in the UK on each day in (a) November, (b) December, (c) January, (d) February and (e) March since 1985. [35246]

Mr. Touhig: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the cause of the fire that disrupted services at the Exeter headquarters of the Meteorological Office on 26 October; what damage was caused by the fire; what was the cost of damage to the property; and what estimate he has made of the commercial loss resulting from the fire. [28439]

Mr. Touhig: The incident of 26 October occurred due to a catastrophic failure of the static bypass switch serving the Uninterruptible Power Supply (UPS) for Computer Hall Two. The UPS system remained offline until 22 November in order that remedial activities could be carried out. During this time Computer Hall Two's power was supplied by use of the site's standby generators. The incident is still the subject of an investigation by the Met Office's insurer, and it would therefore be inappropriate to speculate further.

Neither the building fabric nor its interior were damaged.

The Exeter headquarters of the Met Office is designed so that key operational systems are duplicated between two independent Computer Halls. Thus the temporary loss of one Computer Hall does not result in the loss of all services. The Met Office also has well rehearsed plans for dealing with business continuity incidents. These plans were invoked on the 26 October to ensure that alternative arrangements were made for those Services that might have been impacted. The Met Office is not aware of any commercial loss as a result of the incident.

Military Training (Falklands)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on military training in the Falklands. [37164]

Mr. Ingram: The Falkland Islands provide an excellent training environment. Joint armed forces training exercises of varying size and duration are conducted throughout the year, including flying training, live fire exercises, command post exercises and ground defence training. The training conducted on the Falkland Islands makes a valuable contribution to the operational capability of our armed forces and, because it is a visible sign of the UK's commitment to their security, attracts wide support from the local population.

Ministerial Travel

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions since 7 July he has used the London Underground in connection with his official duties. [35025]

John Reid: Once. Defence Ministers use public transport wherever possible and practical to complete their journey. All ministerial travel on official business is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in Travel by Ministers.

Mount Pleasant Airfield

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many aircraft and of what type are based at Mount Pleasant airfield. [37163]

Mr. Ingram: The following aircraft types and numbers are currently based at Mount Pleasant airfield:

Type of aircraft	Number currently based at Mount Pleasant
Fixed wing
Tornado F3	4
Hercules C-130	1
VC10	1
Rotary wing
Chinook	1
Sea King	2

Additionally, British International operate two Sikorski S-61 helicopters under contract in support of military tasks.

Opinion Research/Public Relations

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the value was of (a) public opinion research and (b) public relations contracts awarded by his Department in 2004–05 in (i) each (A) nation and (B) region of the UK and (ii) London. [35891]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence placed one contract for a corporate level public opinion poll in Financial Year 2004–05. This research was undertaken at national level and cost £41,736 (inc VAT). Details of other surveys that may have been conducted by the Ministry of Defence and its agencies are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The MOD does not record expenditure on public relations in the form requested, and this information also could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Parliamentary Questions

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to make a substantive reply to the questions tabled by the hon. Member for New Forest, East for Named Day Answer on 22 November 2005, on war-disabled UK veterans who live in former UK colonies, references (a) 29624, (b) 29625, (c) 29626, (d) 29627 and (e) 29628. [36304]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 12 December 2005]: I replied to the hon. Member today.

Porton Down

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which employees of Porton Down visited South Africa in the period from 1975 until the collapse of the apartheid regime; for what purposes; and if he will make a statement. [31254]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 23 November 2005]: In January and March 1992, at the request of the Mozambican Government, the Ministry of Defence sent a total of three employees from, what was then, the Chemical Defence Establishment at Porton Down to Mozambique as part of two missions to investigate allegations of the use of chemical weapons. In order to fulfil these verification missions the individuals were required to transit through South Africa to reach the area under investigation in Mozambique. The investigation team which visited the site of the alleged use of chemical weapons was a combined UK and UN team.

PowderJect (Vaccines)

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department has received supplies of vaccines originating from PowderJect. [34035]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence has received supplies of Tetanus, Influenza, Yellow Fever and Smallpox vaccines originating from PowderJect or from Chiron Evans/Evans vaccines, companies which were acquired by PowderJect.

Public Appointments

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by his Department, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [36680]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence has not appointed any former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 to its public bodies.

Recruitment Trends

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on recruitment trends for the UK armed forces. [36696]

Mr. Touhig: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 12 December 2005, Official Report, column 1679, to the hon. Member for Windsor (Adam Afriyie).

Royal Air Force

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence where the Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency will be relocated when RAF Innsworth is vacated; and when the relocation is due to take place. [36927]

Mr. Ingram: A study into the options for the relocation of the Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency from RAF Innsworth in 2008 is being conducted. The final outcome is not expected to be known until around July 2006.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects RAF Innsworth will cease to operate as part of RAF Headquarters. [370001]

Mr. Ingram: We expect that RAF Innsworth will cease to support Headquarters Personnel and Training Command following the move of the Personnel Management Agency to RAF Headquarters planned for 2008.

Royal Ordnance (Chorley)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last met representatives of Royal Ordnance (RO) to discuss Chorley RO factory. [36786]

Mr. Ingram: The Secretary of State has not met representatives of Royal Ordnance—now BAE Systems Land Systems—to discuss rationalisation of their factory at Chorley.

Space

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the military use of space. [37922]

Mr. Ingram: The focus of the United Kingdom Government's space policy is on civil and scientific uses. However, we also derive important security benefits from its military use. Like many countries, the UK uses satellites for a wide range of military functions such as secure communications, meteorological predictions and in the effective monitoring of various arms control treaties. This military use of space is distinct from the deployment of weapons in space. The UK Government has no plans to deploy weapons in space.

As one of the Depository States (along with the US and Russia), the UK Government continues to fully support the 1967 Outer Space Treaty, which places important constraints on the use of space, including prohibiting the deployment of weapons of mass destruction in space and military activity on the moon and other celestial bodies.

The main forum for discussing the military use of space is the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva. We have taken part in informal discussions on the possibility of a further treaty banning weapons in space, although no international consensus has been reached on the need for such a treaty. Notwithstanding this, we continue to support the annual resolution on the Prevention of an Arms Race in Outer Space (PAROS) at the UN.

TA

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions his Department has had with (a) the Treasury about the tax treatment and income of and (b) the Department for Trade and Industry about the employment terms and conditions of territorial army personnel with a view to encouraging recruitment and retention. [38151]

Mr. Touhig: None.

Ty Gwyn Centre

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Ty Gwyn centre for treating ex-service personnel suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder; and what other facilities offering similar services are available. [26028]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 8 November 2005]: MOD officials are in discussion with officials from the Department of Health and the Devolved Administrations about the provision of services for former service personnel suffering from mental illness resulting from their service. They have not yet had the opportunity to discuss in detail the question of the closure of Ty Gwyn, which was one of a number of facilities with the capability for treating ex-service personnel suffering from PTSD. However, the question of whether its closure leaves any gaps in the capability for treating ex-service personnel suffering from PTSD is one of the subjects for discussion at a meeting planned for 19 December.

Type-45 Destroyers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his timetable is for ordering hulls 7 and 8 of the Type-45 destroyers. [38183]

Mr. Ingram: Formal approval and a subsequent order for ships 7 and 8 will be sought at the appropriate time, taking into account the relative value for money and affordability of the ships.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the original estimated cost of each Type-45 destroyer was; and what the current estimated cost is. [38184]

Mr. Ingram: The estimated unit production cost of each Type 45 at Main Gate was £582 million. The latest estimated unit production cost, as at 31 March 2005 and as reported in the National Audit Office Major Projects Report 2005, is £561.6 million. The unit production cost excludes development costs, which is amortised over the entire class of warships, and cost of capital.

Uniform Contracts

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many battle dress uniforms for the new cut and sew contracts have been produced in (a) China, (b) the UK and (c) other countries, broken down by country; and how many have been tested. [36771]

Mr. Ingram: The number of items of combat (battle dress) clothing delivered under the cut and sewn contract as at 8 December 2005 are as follows:

Country of production	Quantity delivered
China	449,064
UK	30,647
Lithuania	12,493
Germany	12,337

Combat clothing is among the items listed as Category 1 items within the terms of the contract. As at 8 December, 389 Category 1 garments had been tested by Ministry of Defence personnel. The bulk of these were combat clothing items.

Garments are checked against the contractual specification, which includes certain tolerances to allow for the bulk manufacturing process. Only one fault outside of these tolerances has so far been identified. Checks carried out by MOD are risk-based random checks, with 100 per cent. checks carried out where necessary. This checking is, however, just one element of a comprehensive quality assurance process starting with the prime contractor and its sub-contractors and ending with technical personnel in the MOD Project Team.

Veterans' Medals

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with (a) the Arctic Veterans Association and (b) other organisations about the proposal for an Emblem to be worn on (i) the Atlantic Star and (ii) 1939 to 1945 Star medals; what decision he has reached on the proposal; and if he will make a statement. [36855]

Mr. Touhig: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no formal discussions with the Arctic Veterans Association or other organisations to discuss proposals for the new Arctic Emblem to be worn on the ribbon of existing campaign medals. Last month he did meet an Arctic veteran, Commander (Cdr) W. E. Grenfell RN (retired) to discuss the design of the new Emblem, first announced by the Prime Minister on 7 March, during which Cdr Grenfell submitted his own design for consideration. He asked for confirmation that it could be authorised for wear on a medal ribbon. My right hon. Friend made it clear that he could not endorse this proposal.

There are no plans to approach the HD Committee for permission to wear the Arctic Emblem on the ribbon of an existing wartime campaign medal. This would, effectively, give the Emblem the same status as a clasp and the Committee has made it clear on numerous occasions that it will not consider any more medals or clasps for second world war service.

War-disabled UK Veterans

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the financial help available to war-disabled UK veterans, or their widowed spouses, who live in former UK colonies; [29624]

(2) what discretion he has to make ex gratia payments to deserving cases of war-disabled UK veterans, or their spouses, living abroad in straitened circumstances; [29626]

(3) what estimate he has made of the number of Second World War-disabled UK veterans, or their spouses, who live in former UK colonies which have failed to pay war-disablement pensions since achieving independence; and if he will make a statement; [29627]

(4) what the criteria are for awarding supplementation payments to war-disabled UK veterans, or their spouses, who live in former UK colonies. [29625]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 22 November 2005]: Regardless of their country of residence personnel who served in the British armed forces, or their widows, may be entitled to receive payments under the United Kingdom war pension scheme in respect of injury or death due to service.

The provision of the scheme extends to those members who served in military units based in the United Kingdom or Isle of Man. Responsibility for pension provision of British Europeans who served with locally raised colonial forces is the responsibility of the Government of the territory in which they were raised, under arrangements made when they gained their independence.

No estimate has been made of the number of Second World War disabled UK veterans, or their spouses, who live in former British colonies which have failed to pay war disablement pensions since achieving independence.

War disabled veterans who served in units raised in certain former colonial territories can have their overseas war pension supplemented, where the responsible Government has failed to maintain payment, if they can be certified as an overseas officer in respect of the overseas territory in which they enlisted. The responsibility for certifying them as an overseas officer rests with the Overseas Pensions Departments of the Department for International Development and, in broad terms, an overseas officer is one who was not born in the overseas territory and not normally resident there at the time of his service.

In certain circumstances, where no overseas Government pension has been awarded, awards may be made on a statutory basis under the Personal Injuries Scheme and extra statutory awards can be made via Treasury authority given in 1946.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what remedy is available for war-disabled UK veterans, or their spouses, living in former UK colonies, for the adverse effect on war pension claims caused by loss of paperwork or failure to reply by the relevant agency. [29628]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 22 November 2005]: Where administrative failure results in financial loss there are provisions under special payment arrangements to make ex gratia payments.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of those detained under (a) the Terrorism Act 2000 and (b) the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 (i) were seeking asylum at the time of their detention and (ii) have subsequently claimed asylum. [31457]

Mr. McNulty: Between 11 September 2001 and 8 November 2005, Police and Home Office records show that a total of 963 people were detained under the Terrorism Act 2000 and the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001. Many have since been released. Of the 232 identified in Home Office records as having applied for asylum, 214 had claimed asylum prior to arrest, and 18 subsequently.

Copies of these publications and others relating to general immigration to the UK are available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Bail Hostel (Aldridge)

Mr. Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps (a) the West Midlands probation service and (b) the National Offender Management Service have taken to identify an alternative site for the Bail Hostel located in Stonnall road, Aldridge, since the High Court ruling in 1996. [36226]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information is as follows.

(a) NPS West Midlands do wish to provide a larger approved premises in the Walsall area. However, this would rely on both the local authority agreeing a suitable location and adequate funding being available.

(b) The National Offender Management Service (NOMS) has not identified an alternative site for this specific approved premises and currently there are no funds allocated for its replacement. There is a NOMS instigated review and scoping exercise currently being undertaken to ascertain the level of development required across the approved premises estate. Once complete this information will be used to inform a national strategy for approved premises development including, if appropriate, Stonnall road.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 19 October 2005, Official Report, column 1032W, on British citizenship, how many of the 760,886 applicants who were not refused British citizenship on character grounds had (a) been found guilty of a criminal offence by a court in the United Kingdom and (b) sentenced to a custodial sentence by a court in the United Kingdom. [33504]

Mr. McNulty: This information is not readily available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for British naturalisation there were from people resident in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [36485]

Mr. McNulty: The numbers of applications for naturalisation as a British citizen from people resident in Northern Ireland for the last five years is as follows.

2002	165
2003	190

This information is provisional management information and may be subject to change.

Cheque Fraud

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the British Bankers' Association about methods to reduce cheque fraud. [37053]

Paul Goggins: The Government take fraud seriously. Ministers and officials meet regularly with representatives from the police, retail and banking sectors, including the BBA, to discuss ways of combating fraud, including cheque fraud.

On 27 October the Attorney General announced terms of reference for a wide ranging cross-Government review of fraud. The review will engage a range of key stakeholders, including the banking industry, and consider the prevention, detection, investigation and prosecution/punishment of fraud.

Child Deaths (Custody)

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many child deaths in custody there have been in each year since 1990. [37323]

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what meetings his Department has held with Citygate Public Affairs Ltd. since July. [36750]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Department does not maintain a central list of such contacts. Ministers and civil servants, including special advisers meet many people as part of the process of policy development and business delivery. All such contacts are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code, Civil Service Code, Code of Conduct for Special Advisers and Guidance for civil servants on contacts with lobbyists and people outside Government.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the national targets are for the Criminal Records Bureau; and what the performance of its offices in South Devon has been against those targets. [36891]

Andy Burnham: The Criminal Records Bureau's (CRB) Published Service Standards are to issue 93 per cent. of Standard Disclosures within two weeks and 90 per cent. of Enhanced Disclosures within four weeks.

The CRB is a national service operating from its headquarters in Liverpool. However, Enhanced Disclosure applications are referred by the CRB to relevant police forces for them to perform a check of their local records. South Devon falls within the remit of Devon and Cornwall constabulary and, in line with the other forces in England and Wales, operates to a two week service level agreement with the CRB to complete this work.

Over the last four weeks the Disclosure Unit within Devon and Cornwall constabulary averaged 7.26 days for the work referred to them by the CRB.

Custodial Sentences (Mothers)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what offences custodial sentences were imposed on mothers in the last 12 months for which information is available; and how many mothers serving custodial sentences (a) have and (b) do not have their child with them in prison. [35808]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information on the number of mothers sentenced to custodial sentences, and the offences for which they were sentenced, is not centrally available. During the period 29 November 2004 to 28 November 2005 the number of women who had a child with them in a Mother and Baby Unit (MBU) in a prison ranged between 38 and 66 per week and averaged 44 per week. Figures on the number of women prisoners who have children resident in the community are not available centrally.

Deportation

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he takes if a deportee is discovered to have suffered an unfair trial, torture or ill treatment, in contravention of the UK's agreement with the receiving country. [31155]

Mr. McNulty: We firmly believe that Governments are entering into these agreements in good faith, and are confident that they will abide by the terms of any assurances given. Any contravention of a bilateral international agreement between Her Majesty's Government and another Government would be a matter of considerable concern.

If there were an allegation suggesting that the terms of an agreement had not been honoured, we would seek an immediate report of the circumstances from the authorities of the receiving state, and would request immediate access to the individual concerned.

Action thereafter would depend on the nature of the breach, and on the remedial action, if any, taken by the authorities in the country concerned; it could include a request for an independent inquiry, and/or a request for the receiving state to take remedial action. Failure to comply with formal political commitments in a Memorandum of Understanding or similar political instrument can seriously damage relations between the signatory states, and the standing of the state concerned in the international community generally.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those countries where there are substantial grounds to believe that a person deported would be subject to torture with which the UK (a) has signed a memorandum of understanding and (b) is in the process of negotiating a memorandum of understanding allowing the deportation of individuals who are citizens of that state, including those who pose a threat to national security and public order; and if he will make a statement. [33710]

Mr. McNulty: The Government have signed Memorandums of Understanding with Jordan and with Libya to facilitate the deportation of particular individuals consistent with our international human rights obligations, in particular those in the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR). We are discussing similar arrangements with Algeria and the Lebanon. We have said we will make public the names of the other countries to which we are talking when the time is right.

Detention Centres (Medical Services)

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons his Department is responsible for the provision of medical services in detention centres for asylum seekers; and what the arrangements are for liaison with (a) the NHS and (b) the local primary care trust on such services. [36141]

Mr. McNulty: The provision of primary health care services in contracted-out immigration removal centres is an integral part of the contractual arrangements for the management and operation of those centres, for which the Home Office immigration and nationality directorate (IND) has overall responsibility.

There is regular liaison between IND and Department of Health officials over issues that will affect removal centres collectively, and removal centres and primary care trusts are being encouraged to work together to develop local protocols to improve the interface between health care services within the centres and the local NHS.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which companies have been contracted to provide medical services to each detention centre for asylum seekers in England. [36148]

Mr. McNulty: Three of the nine immigration removal centres in England are directly managed, being operated by the Prison Service on behalf of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. Primary health care services at the centres concerned (Dover, Haslar and Lindholme) are therefore provided under normal Prison Service arrangements.

The six privately run removal centres are operated under separate contracts. The operators are: Global Solutions Ltd. at Campsfield, Oakington, Tinsley House and Yarl's Wood, Serco at Colnbrook; and UKDS Ltd. at Harmondsworth.

Removal centre contracts include requirements to provide specified primary health care services to detained persons. It is for the individual contractors to decide how to deliver their contractual obligations for the provision of primary health care services, whether through "in-house" delivery, via a health care sub-contractor, or a mix of both approaches.

DNA Database

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether there is provision to remove from the National DNA Database details of a DNA sample of a minor who has never been charged or cautioned. [35616]

Andy Burnham: Yes. Section 64 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act (PACE) 1984, as amended, enables the police to retain DNA samples (and profiles) taken from individuals arrested for, informed they will be reported for or charged with a recordable offence and detained in a police station. The police may retain the sample even when the individual has not been convicted of the offence for which the sample was taken. The decision whether to retain or remove a sample is an operational one for the chief constable of the police force which took it. There is no distinction in PACE between samples taken from an adult or a minor.

EU Maritime Border Guard Corps

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with his EU counterparts on the creation of an EU maritime border guard corps to tackle illegal immigration in the Mediterranean. [35749]

Mr. McNulty: The European Commission's Communication of 30 November 2005 on Priority Actions for Responding to the Challenges of Migration notes that the EU Border Management Agency (Frontex) will be requested to launch in 2006 a feasibility study on reinforcing monitoring and surveillance of the Mediterranean Sea, and on a Mediterranean Coastal Patrols Network involving EU member states and North African countries.

The Government support the launch of such a feasibility study, given the need, identified in the Hague Programme, for EU member states to co-operate more closely to combat illegal immigration flows and to prevent humanitarian tragedies occurring in the Mediterranean. A Mediterranean Coastal Patrols Network would not be an EU maritime border guard corps. It would facilitate contact and coordination between member states' sea border surveillance authorities and search and rescue services and proper links with North African countries.

Fraud Trials (Juries)

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in developing the Government's proposals in relation to the use of juries in fraud trials. [36236]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Government's policy remains that certain very serious and complex fraud cases ought not to be tried by a jury and that trial by judge alone, as provided for by section 43 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003, represents the best way forward. However, we have offered to discuss alternatives to jury trial with the Opposition parties, if they have concrete proposals to bring forward.

HM Prison Brixton

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the cost was over the last 12 months of additional (a) overtime and (b) staff needed to replace officers suspended at HM Prison Brixton; [29253]

(2) how many prison officers are suspended on full pay (a) in the prison service and (b) at HM Prison Brixton; [29254]

(3) what the cost was over the past 12 months of salaries paid to officers at HM Prison Brixton who had been suspended; [29255]

(4) what the cost of salaries paid to prison officers suspended on full pay in the prison service was in the last 12 months. [29256]

Fiona Mactaggart: Staff are required to work additional hours to ensure that a deliverable regime is maintained and major services to prisoners are not affected by any staff shortages. Staff are repaid for working these additional hours by time off in lieu. No overtime has been paid for the specific reason of replacing suspended staff.

Information on the number of prison officers suspended across the service is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. It is therefore not possible to provide the total cost to the service of salaries paid to prison officers, suspended on full pay, over the past 12 months. Currently five officers are suspended on full pay from Brixton prison. In the period 1 November 2004 to date, nine officers have been suspended on full pay from duty at Brixton. The total cost of the salaries paid to these officers in that period is £168,000.

Leave to Remain

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 24 November 2005, Official Report, column 2317W, on leave to remain, what percentage of postal applications was processed in (a) 20 and (b) 70 working days in the last year for which figures are available. [35821]

Mr. McNulty: Applications under the provisions of the European Community Association Agreements (ECAA) fall into the category of non-charged casework. The published service standards for this category are 25 per cent. of postal applications to be processed in 20 working days and 30 per cent. in 70 working days.

The average time taken from the date of receipt until the date of decision for European Community Association Agreement (ECAA) applications during the period 1 August to 31 October 2005 was 331 days. This information is provisional management information.

National Lottery

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many businesses were prosecuted for selling lottery tickets and scratch cards to under 16s in Tamworth constituency in the last five years. [35672]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information taken from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform shows that between 2000 and 2004, there were no prosecutions of businesses at the magistrates courts in the Staffordshire police force area under S13a National Lottery etc. Act 1993. It is not possible to identify those prosecutions in the Tamworth constituency, as the data is not collected at this level of detail.

Court statistics for 2005 will be available autumn 2006.

The lottery operator is required to ensure sufficient controls are in place to prevent sales to under 16s. Examples include test purchasing programmes and retailer training and education. It will also remove the lottery terminal if a retailer is found to have made repeat sales to people under 16.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department's target is for the time taken to answer written parliamentary questions. [36397]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Department's target for responses to ordinary written questions is five sitting days.

Ministers give serious attention and make every effort to answer questions substantively and in accordance with the performance guidelines set.

The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to Members/Peers correspondence. The Report for 2004 was published on 6 April 2005, Official Report, columns 137–140WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House.

Passport Applications

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) new and (b) renewed UK passport applications were processed at the Belfast passport office in (i) 2003 and (ii) 2004. [36484]

Andy Burnham: The number of new passport applications and passport renewal applications processed by the United Kingdom Passport Service at the Belfast office are as follows:

	New	Renewal
2003	90,406	120,999
2004	94,521	181,561

Police Numbers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the ratio of police officers to inhabitants in (a) each London borough and (b) each county has been in each year since 1997. [27128]

Hazel Blears: The deployment of officers to the London Borough Operational Command Units is an operational matter for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis (Sir Ian Blair). Information on the number of officers to population for each London borough is only available from March 2003 and is set out in the table.

Information on the number of police officers to 100,000 population for each police force area in England and Wales can be found in Home Office statistical bulletins on police service strength for each year from March 1998. Copies of these are in the House of Commons Library.

Prison Population

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the future prison population; and what plans he has to meet these projections. [34164]

Fiona Mactaggart: The most recent prison population projections are in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin 10/05 "Updated and Revised Prison Population Projections, 2005–2011, England and Wales"—July 2005. Figures for 10 scenarios can be found in this document. The scenarios range from 'High' to 'Low'. Projected total prison population figures (end of June) for 'High' and 'Low' scenarios for the relevant financial years are presented in the following table.

The National Offender Management Service (NOMS) keeps under review the demand on prison places and the capacity of prisons to accommodate those prisoners sent to them by the courts. The operational capacity of the prison estate is being increased by bringing accommodation back into use and through additional places being built at existing prisons.

Projected prison population[1]

Prisons

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when telephone charge rates for BT telephones in prisons were last reviewed; [33508]

(2) for what reasons the cost of telephone calls from BT telephones in prisons differs from the cost charged to those using BT telephones elsewhere. [33509]

Fiona Mactaggart: The cost of prisoners' telephone calls is reviewed quarterly. Call rates are no longer linked to public payphone rates, they are agreed under the terms of the contract with BT which allows the Prison Service to set appropriate charges, taking account of the pattern of calls, as well as maintenance costs. The minimum charge, which is lower than that for public phones, reflects the fact that prisoners' calls tend to be of short duration.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 762W, on prisons, what plans he has to conduct a further survey of the prevalence of blood-borne viruses in prisoners, with particular reference to viruses transmitted sexually. [36345]

Fiona Mactaggart: We have no such plans.

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce his decision on the contestability bid for the three prisons on the Isle of Sheppey; and if he will make a statement. [37858]

Fiona Mactaggart: An announcement about the performance improvement test of three prisons on the Isle of Sheppey will be made as soon as possible.

Probation Officers

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many probation officers were employed in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire and (d) the Metropolitan area of London in each of the last 15 years for which figures are available. [37546]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information is not available for the full period requested. Data collected prior to 1 April 2003 is unreliable, and is not directly comparable with the more accurate figures collected since that time. The figures presented in the table show full-time equivalent (FTE) figures at the close of each quarter from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2005. Please also note that the data for quarter one 2003–04 cannot be separated to show probation officers only, and is not included in the table as a result.

Staffing information is collected by probation area, and is not collected centrally in sufficient detail to allow figures for Southend to be presented separately. The staffing figures are provided for the Essex, London, and Hertfordshire Probation Areas only.

Returned Detainees

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with foreign Governments on returning to secure detention in those countries of their nationals held in British prisons. [34105]

Fiona Mactaggart: The United Kingdom is a signatory to two multi-party prisoner transfer agreements: the Council of Europe Convention on the Transfer of Sentenced Persons, and the Commonwealth Scheme for the Transfer of Convicted Offenders. In addition, the Government have concluded bilateral prisoner transfer agreements with 18 countries. The UK has prisoner transfer agreements with a total of 97 countries and territories and is in regular contact with the Governments concerned about the transfer of individual prisoners.

Prisoner transfer under these agreements is voluntary; the consent of both states involved, and of the prisoner concerned, is required before repatriation can take place. In 2004, 107 prisoners were transferred from prisons in England and Wales to other countries to continue serving their sentences.

Secure Establishments

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) assaults and (b) violent offences there have been in (i) home office youth establishments, (ii) local authority secure accommodation and (iii) secure training centres in each of the last three years. [33689]

Fiona Mactaggart: Full-year information is available only for the most recent year, 2004. The relevant data relates to incidents of assault. 'Violent offences' are not treated as a separate category. In Prison Service young offender institutions, 1,223 assaults were recorded in 2004 and in secure training centres 1,128 were recorded. Currently no information is collected centrally about assaults in local authority secure children's homes.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how often the Home Office monitors review videos of (a) movement of children around and (b) restraint of children in secure training centres. [35059]

Fiona Mactaggart: The primary function of CCTV systems at secure training centres is to allow the operators to maintain the security of the premises, prevent crime and, if a crime were committed, to assist with the investigation of the crime. The systems are also designed to give confidence to trainees, staff and visitors that they are in a secure environment.

The systems are not intended as a means of assisting the Youth Justice Board's performance monitors to monitor the contractors' performance. However, the monitors do, on occasion, make use of the systems for that purpose. For example, if a monitor has concerns that an incident report is unclear, or if the report raises doubts whether the incident has been handled correctly, he or she may decide to view the footage of the incident. Or if a young person makes a complaint about an incident at the centre, the monitor may choose to view the relevant footage to enable him or her to consider the complaint.

Sentencing Policy

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he has put in place to monitor the effectiveness of sentencing policy. [36599]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Office routinely monitors the effectiveness of sentencing in reducing re-offending through examining reconviction data. Records from the Police National Computer are used to ascertain whether sampled cohorts of offenders have been convicted of further offences during the two year period (one year for juvenile offenders) either following the imposition of sentence (in the case of community sentences or fines) or following release from prison (in the case of custodial sentences).

For the purposes of measuring performance against Public Service Agreement (PSA) targets to reduce re-offending of adults and juveniles by 5 per cent. by 2006 from a 2000 baseline, the Home Office publishes annual statistics on reconviction rates (for adults and juveniles separately—see http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/onlinepubs1.html) showing rates for a variety of sentences. The statistics show both actual reconviction rates and predicted reconviction rates.

Sex Offenders

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the performance indicators are for the monitoring of sex offenders for each police authority area in England and Wales. [36883]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Multi-Agency Public Protection Arrangements (MAPPA) have been in place since 2001 and have already made a significant contribution to public protection. Under the MAPPA, the police, probation and prison services, supported by additional agencies including housing, health and social services, combine forces to manage the risk to the public posed by sexual and violent offenders. Those "critical few" offenders that pose the highest risk are referred to a Multi-Agency Public Protection Panel (MAPPP), where their cases are regularly scrutinised by senior representatives of local agencies.

From next year police and probation areas have been asked to produce business plans which will aid the monitoring and development of the MAPPA locally. Each area is already obliged to produce an annual report to highlight the work undertaken within the MAPPA to protect local communities. The annual reports published in October showed that only a very small proportion of offenders managed at the highest levels in the community were charged with a serious further offence (SFO), indicating a robust level of management.

The Association of Chief Police Officers are currently developing a public protection manual to provide central guidance to police forces in managing not only sex offenders in the community but covering all areas of public protection. This is due in 2006.

Skilled Migrants

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) teachers, (b) IT specialists and (c) engineers from (i) Sierra Leone, (ii) Malawi, (iii) Tanzania, (iv) Ghana, (v) Zambia, (vi) Africa, (vii) South Asia and (viii) other Asian countries have been admitted to the United Kingdom under the terms of (A) the work permits system and (B) the highly skilled migrants programme in each year since 1997; [36945]

(2) how many nurses from (a) Sierra Leone, (b) Malawi, (c) Tanzania, (d) Ghana, (e) Zambia and (f) Africa have been admitted to the United Kingdom under the terms of the work permit system in each year since 1997; [36946]

(3) how many general practitioners from (a) Sierra Leone, (b) Malawi, (c) Tanzania, (d) Ghana, (e) Zambia and (f) Africa were admitted to the United Kingdom under the terms of the (i) Highly Skilled Migrant Programme and (ii) Work Permit Scheme in each year since 2002. [36947]

Mr. McNulty: The requested information is not available.

Video Games

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of the effectiveness of controls on the sale of violent video games; and what recent discussions he has had regarding (a) controls and (b) penalties for those who provide access to them for underage children. [37959]

James Purnell: I have been asked to reply.

The penalties for supplying a grossly violent video game to a child who does not meet the age requirement are up to six months in prison and/or a fine of up to £5,000; these are among the toughest penalties in Europe. We have been working with industry trade associations to ensure that retail staff are aware of these penalties, and are continuing to explore with them ways of increasing parental awareness of the contents of video games and the classification system.

Women Prisoners

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the women who have taken their own lives in prisons since 1975 in cases where all proceedings are complete. [33100]

Fiona Mactaggart: As publishing such details can cause distress to the families of those bereaved by a self-inflicted death in prison, I will write to the hon. Member with the information available.

Youth Crime

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the (a) Secretary of State for Wales, (b) Secretary of State for Scotland, (c) Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, (d) First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales Government, (e) First Minister of the Scottish Executive and (f) Mayor of London on youth crime; and if he will make a statement. [32806]

Fiona Mactaggart: There are no records of recent meetings between the Secretary of State for the Home Department and any of the individuals listed in the question for the specific purpose of discussing youth crime.

Officials from the Home Office and the Youth Justice Board are in regular contact with the devolved and other administrations listed in the question on a range of issues, including youth crime and have recently had a number of meetings with them about youth justice legislation.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Estate

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was paid by his Department in 2004–05 in rent for properties in (a) total, (b) Scotland and (c) London. [36007]

David Cairns: The costs for the buildings rented by the Scotland Office in 2004–05 are as follows:

Building	Scotland	London	Total
Dover House	—	12,338	12,338
Melville Crescent, Edinburgh	135,250	—	135,250
Total	135,250	12,338	147,588

The Office pays a reduced rent for Dover House and consequently an adjustment is made in the resource accounts of the Office to reflect this; the latest net book value of the building is £1.09 million.

In addition, the Office has a small amount of accommodation in Meridian Court, Glasgow and Frederick Street, Edinburgh. These premises are shared with other Departments. The Office pays an agreed share of the overall running costs of each building which includes such items as rent, rates, utilities, cleaning and security and a separate record is not held of the rental element of the costs. The costs of the agreed share in 2004–05 for Meridian Court was £21,797 and for Frederick Street was £7,107.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the total value is of (a) catering and (b) entertainment contracts let by his Department; and what value of such contracts has been let in each nation and region of the UK, including London. [37473]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office does not hold any catering or entertainment contracts.

Departmental Research

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research projects commissioned by his Department are being undertaken; and what the publication arrangements are in each case. [32998]

David Cairns: None.

Departmental Staff (Chronic Back Pain)

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what initiatives are being taken in his Department to help civil servants with chronic back pain. [34985]

David Cairns: All the staff in the Scotland Office are on loan from the Scottish Executive or the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA). Both the DCA and the Executive can arrange for provision of practical and timely support for employees with chronic back pain or other health problems, including mental health.

Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether a Minister in his Department is planned to be nominated to take responsibility for liaison with the Office for Disability Issues; and if he will make a statement. [37085]

David Cairns: Overall responsibility for the Office for Disability Issues (ODI) comes within the remit of the Department for Work and Pensions. I will liaise with ODI for this Office's interest.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the initial activity undertaken by his Department in response to those recommendations in the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People where lead responsibility was assigned to all Government Departments. [37086]

David Cairns: Policy responsibility for the recommendations of the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report lies with other Government Departments. Scotland Office officials attended the Scottish consultation on the Office for Disability Issues and will continue to keep a watching brief in relation to Scotland.

Public Relations

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the value was of (a) public opinion research and (b) public relations contracts issued by his Department in 2004–05. [36008]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office did not award any contracts for public opinion research or public relations in 2004–05.

Rates

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was paid by his Department in rates in 2004–05, broken down by local authority; and how much was paid in rates in 2004–05 in London. [36002]

David Cairns: The payments for rates for the Scotland Office in 2004–05 were:

Name and address	Local authority	Cost
Dover House, Whitehall, London, SW1A 2AU	City of Westminster	131,100
1 Melville Crescent, Edinburgh, EH3 7HW	City of Edinburgh	48,118

In addition, the Office has a small amount of accommodation in Meridian Court, Glasgow and Frederick Street, Edinburgh. These premises are shared with other Departments. The Office pays an agreed share of the overall running costs of each building which includes such items as rent, rates, utilities, cleaning and security and a separate record is not held of the rates element of the costs. The costs of the agreed share in 2004–05 for Meridian Court was £21,797 and for Frederick Street was £7,107.

Taxis

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been spent by his Department on taxi travel in the 2005–06 financial year; and what proportion of such travel was undertaken in each nation and region of the UK, including London. [37474]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office does not record the costs of taxi travel by region. Expenditure on taxi travel for the current financial year, to the end of November 2005, is £5,713.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agricultural Products (Designation)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what agricultural products she plans to designate as sensitive in the forthcoming World Trade Organisation negotiations. [36626]

Mr. Bradshaw: The issue of sensitive products is a key aspect of the negotiations on agricultural market access. The principle that WTO Members may designate "an appropriate number" of sensitive products was established under the July 2004 Framework Agreement. However, the number and treatment of sensitive products have yet to be agreed under the negotiations. When these issues are agreed, it will be for the EU as a whole, rather than for individual EU member states, to designate the sensitive products. The UK's position in these EU discussions will be guided both by our firm support for the Doha Development Agenda mandate to secure substantial improvements in agricultural market access, and by the position of key UK stakeholders.

Animal Disposal

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many calls have been made to the Animal Health Divisional Office requesting collection of dead sheep in each year since 2002. [37906]

Mr. Bradshaw: Since 2002, the number of recorded calls made to Animal Health Divisional Offices are as follows:

	Great Britain	Northern Ireland	Total
2002	[1]225	195	420
2003	4,063	918	4,981
2004	5,615	603	6,218
2005 (to 1 December 2005)	8,834	1,501	10,335
Total	18,737	3,217	21,954

[1] GB only started receiving information from AHDOs in October of 2002.

Animal Fairs

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether it is her intention that there will be a full public consultation on animal fairs in relation to the Animal Welfare Bill; and when a regulatory impact assessment for the Bill will be published. [38189]

Mr. Bradshaw: A Regulatory Impact Assessment for the Animal Welfare Bill was published on 14 October 2005. This includes information on our plans for consultation about pet fairs.

Animal Feed

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much (a) feed barley and (b) feed wheat was produced in the United Kingdom in each year since 2001–02. [37250]

Jim Knight: Estimates of the quantity of wheat and barley used for animal feed in the UK are given in the following table:

United Kingdom feed use of wheat and barley

Thousand tonnes

	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06
Total wheat	6,159	6,891	6,491	6,862	6,807
Of which home grown	5,690	6,677	6,314	6,849	6,759
Total barley	3,885	3,285	3,494	3,137	3,021
Of which home grown	3,794	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a

For confidentiality reasons home grown barley figures are not available from 2002–03.

Excludes exports of UK produced wheat and barley. Information on the end use of exports is not available and therefore the quantity of exports subsequently used for animal feed is not known.

Animal TB

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the number of (a) cats and (b) ferrets identified with Type 13 TB in (i) England and (ii) Sussex. [38736]

Mr. Bradshaw: Bovine TB does affect both cats and ferrets. The incidence seems low, but TB in these species is not notifiable. So far this year in Great Britain, the Veterinary Laboratory Agency has diagnosed nine cases of bovine TB in cats, and one case in a ferret. Of these, spoligotype 13 has been isolated from one cat, and the ferret. Both of these animals came from the East Sussex area.

The disclosure of TB lesions will become officially notifiable in farmed and pet mammals when the new TB (England) Order comes into force on 20 February 2006.

Bovine TB

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many badgers have been identified as infected with tuberculosis following the implementation of testing of badgers involved in road traffic accidents; and if she will remove the protected status of badgers in infected areas. [38475]

Mr. Bradshaw: From the beginning of 2002 until the end of 2004, 1,876 badgers were cultured for bovine TB as part of the seven counties road traffic accident survey. 324 badgers were found to be positive.

Protected status does not prohibit the culling of badgers in appropriate circumstances, so its removal is not a consideration at this time.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment the Government have made of the welfare implications for cattle placed under tuberculosis restriction. [38476]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Agriculture (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1968 makes it an offence to cause or allow unnecessary pain or distress to livestock. And the Welfare of Farmed Animals (England) Regulations 2000 set out general welfare, inspection, housing and feeding rules for all farm animals. Enforcement action is taken against farmers who do not comply with this legislation.

The State Veterinary Service (SVS) enforces the legislation. Its staff conducts regular farm inspections to check compliance.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to halt (a) the geographic spread of tuberculosis in cattle and (b) the decline in the number of ground nesting birds in areas affected by tuberculosis. [38477]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government will introduce statutory pre-movement testing of cattle in England from 20 February 2006. This will reduce the risk of spreading TB to areas of the country where the incidence is low. It will also help to reduce the spread of TB between herds in high risk areas.

Evidence is being gathered about the effect of badgers on ground nesting birds. This is being done through a DEFRA-funded project investigating the ecological consequences of badger removal. Some of this work has been conducted in treatment areas of the randomised badger culling trial. The project also involves an exhaustive literature review and experimental field research using artificial bird nests. The results from the project will be presented to DEFRA in March 2007.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost of tuberculosis testing for bovine tuberculosis was in each of the last three years; and what the costs of culling animals affected by tuberculosis were in each year. [38478]

Mr. Bradshaw: Summary of GB TB expenditure for periods 2002–03 to 2004–05.

£ million

Activity	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
Cattle Testing	24.7	33.2	36.4
Compensation	31.9	34.4	35.0
Culling Trial	6.6	7.3	7.2
Other Research	6.5	7.0	5.7
VLA	4.1	5.3	4.9
HQ/Overheads	0.7	1.0	1.3
Total	74.5	88.2	90.5

TB expenditure in 2003–04 increased by 18.4 per cent. on 2002–03.

TB expenditure for 2004–05 shows increase of 2.6 per cent. on 2003–04.

Conservation of Albatrosses and Petrels

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to encourage more countries to sign the international agreement on the conservation of Albatrosses and Petrels. [36089]

Jim Knight: The United Kingdom, as a contracting party to the agreement on the conservation of Albatrosses and Petrels (ACAP) and as the current chair of the Advisory Committee, strongly supports the ACAP secretariat in its efforts to encourage more non-party range states to sign up to the agreement.

To reinforce those efforts, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office approached several countries last year, including Japan, Korea, Brazil, Peru and Chile, encouraging them to join ACAP. Peru have since ratified the Agreement.

Correspondence

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Brent East, dated 9 December 2004, regarding Ms Rosanna Kelly. [37742]

Mr. Bradshaw: I apologise for failing to reply to the hon. Member. This was due to an administrative error. I have commissioned an urgent reply.

Departmental Consultants

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many secondees there have been to her Department from consultancy firms, including the Big Four accountancy firms, in each of the last three years; and what areas of the Department they have worked in. [37359]

Jim Knight: In the last three years there have been no recorded secondments to DEFRA from the Big Four accountancy firms.

DEFRA has though seconded a large number of individuals from a wide variety of other organisations but establishing which of these organisations may have a consultancy strand would be possible only at disproportionate cost.

The term 'secondee' refers to a person 'borrowed' from an organisation outside the civil service for a period of between three months and three years (exceptionally five years), without affecting employment status. During the secondment period the 'secondee' remains an employee of the parent organisation but is expected to abide by the DEFRA Staff Handbook and the Official Secrets Act. Secondees are expected to undertake the full range of duties attached to the post. At the end of the secondment the 'secondee' returns to the parent organisation.

Departmental Property

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much was paid by her Department in rent for properties in (a) total, (b) each (i) region and (ii) nation of the UK and (c) London in 2004–05. [35953]

Jim Knight: The amount of rent paid by DEFRA in 2004–05 is given in the following table:

		£ million
(a)	Total	22.66
(b) (i)	East Midlands	0.09
	East of England	2.65
	London	12.97
	North East	1.09
	North West	0.18
	South East	3.68
	South West	1.30
	West Midlands	0.27
	Yorkshire and Humber	0.24
(b) (ii)	England	22.47
	Scotland	0.10
	Wales	0.09

Departmental Staff

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff are employed by her Department in each (a) region and (b) nation of the UK; and if she will make a statement. [35917]

Jim Knight: The figures requested are published in civil service statistics. Table D covers permanent staff numbers on a full-time equivalent basis in each Department and agency. Civil service statistics are available in the Library and at the following address on the Cabinet Office statistics website: http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management of the civil service/statistics/civil service statistics/index.asp

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what initiatives are being taken in her Department to help civil servants with chronic back pain. [34977]

Jim Knight: The Department and its executive agencies have various mechanisms in place to assist staff with back disorders and put preventative measures into place.

Workstation assessments procedures are in place for all VDU users, and staff are encouraged to report all work-related back pain via accident/ill health reporting procedures.

These are followed up as appropriate, with use of specialist assessments for advice on adjustments and specialist accessories/new furniture, or by referral to occupational health service providers.

Guidance and Information is available on intranets—with links to Health and Safety Executive campaigns and brochures related to back disorders and other MSDs.

There are also online training packages which encompass advice and best practice in relation to ergonomics, posture etc. to reduce upper limb and back pain.

Manual handling courses are advised and/or arranged for any 'at risk' staff and many sites have onsite fitness centres. Many roadshows and promotional events are arranged throughout the year.

Departmental Transport

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to her answers of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 507W and 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 301W, on departmental transport, why the departmental building in Merrow, Guildford does not yet have a Travel Plan; when the joint Travel Plan will be published; whether car parking by staff and contractors outside the departmental buildings in Merrow has been identified as a significant impact; and if her Department will issue instructions to its staff and contractors not to park in residential roads around the departmental building, with particular reference to Down road, Daryngton drive, Carroll avenue, Gateways, Broadwater rise and Pitt Farm road. [36954]

Jim Knight: The Department in Merrow did have a Travel Plan, which was made redundant by the increase in numbers of contractors over the last 12 months necessitating a full re-write of the plan.

The revised Travel Plan will be made available to site users by the end of December and will have been prepared by the Department and IBM.

Car parking by staff and contractors outside the departmental buildings in Merrow has been identified as a significant impact.

Staff and contractors who are unable to park on-site, are requested to avoid parking in Down road, Daryngton drive, Carroll avenue, Gateways. Broadwater rise and Pitt Farm road. A site wide notice to all staff and contractors to reiterate this request will be issued on 15 December 2005.

Digital Mapping

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers in the South West submitted incorrect data for digital mapping in each year between 2002 and 2004. [36129]

Jim Knight: The Rural Payments Agency is responsible for the administration of digital mapping in England. The RPA developed the RLR between 2002 and 2004 predominantly using land parcels previously claimed for subsidy purposes, notably data received with Area Aid Applications. In some cases this included data from on the spot inspections and any information the applicant provided in the form of mapping requests. The following table shows the number of applicants in the South West where an overclaim was found as a result of an inspection.

	Number
2002	386
2003	349
2004	378

Direct Mail

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she will take steps to reduce the amount of paper used in direct mail by encouraging the use of cleared mailing lists; [36124]

(2) if she will assess the effects on the environment of a (a) 5 per cent. and (b) 10 per cent. reduction in direct mail; [36125]

(3) when she last met representatives of the direct mail industry to discuss waste paper. [37239]

Mr. Bradshaw: In July 2003 the Government signed a voluntary producer responsibility agreement with the Direct Marketing Association (DMA), a trade body representing 890 corporate members of the direct mail industry, to increase the recycling of direct mail to 70 per cent. by 2013 (the level of direct mail recycling was about 13 per cent. in 2002). The first target of 30 per cent. is due to be met by the end of 2005.

As part of the agreement, the DMA have also agreed to reduce waste by improving the targeting of direct mail and by publicising the use of suppression files such as the Mailing Preference Service which allows people to opt out of receiving addressed direct mail.

The signing of the agreement in July 2003 was the last meeting between my officials and the DMA. However, we have had ongoing correspondence with the DMA who have produced an interim report on their progress in relation to the objectives set out in the agreement. We are currently awaiting the publication of the first formal report which will detail whether they have achieved the 2005 recycling target of 30 per cent. I would expect my officials to hold a progress meeting shortly after the publication of this report in the new year.

I do not intend to conduct a quantitative analysis of the environmental benefits of reducing direct mail at this time. However a 5 per cent. and 10 per cent. reduction in direct mail will equate to a saving of 271 million and 542 million items of direct mail per year respectively, (based on the current estimate of 5.4 billion items of direct mail being distributed annually). The Government take the view that direct mail is a legitimate method of marketing goods and services and have no plans to introduce legislation prohibiting or restricting the distribution of such mail, although they will continue to encourage and support the use of a voluntary opt-out service.

Entry Level Scheme

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reasons she decided to adopt the regional route in determining entry level scheme payments. [37912]

Jim Knight: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the Entry Level Stewardship strand of Environmental Stewardship. The regional route and the historic route has not been part of the process in determining Entry Level Stewardship payments.

Entry Level Stewardship has a national payment rate of £30 per hectare, per year. However land parcels of 15 hectares or more in the Less Favoured Area, are eligible for payments of £8 per hectare, per year.

The payment rate for Entry Level Stewardship was determined using a combination of agronomic assumptions based on various farming systems which covers income forgone and costs incurred calculations, along with an incentive element where it was deemed appropriate. A more detailed breakdown setting out the calculations behind each option can be found in the England Rural Development Programme Modification to the Commission.

Environmental Controls

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice she is offering to farmers on whether they will need to register with the Environment Agency for (a) a waste management licence and (b) a pollution prevention and control permit. [35779]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Environment Agency has issued interim guidance to advise farmers of the regulatory requirements when waste management controls (waste management licensing or waste pollution prevention and control (PPC) permits) apply to agriculture. This guidance was published in Farmers Weekly on 2 December 2005 and will be published in British Farmer and Grower on 28 December 2005. The Environment Agency's National Customer Contact Centre (0845 6033113) has launched a dedicated enquiry line for agricultural waste.

The Defra funded Environment Sensitive Farming programme (ESF) holds events across all regions of England and Wales for farmers. ESF advises and informs farmers on the new controls. The website can be viewed at http://www.environmentsensitivefarming.co.uk/. In addition, a Recycling Directory that provides recycling and disposal advice to farmers on agricultural waste is available at http://www.wasterecycling.org.uk/. The Environment Agency has set up a Communications Group involving agricultural industry stakeholders.

The Communications Group have drafted a plan for a range of activities starting in early 2006 using publications, posters, CDs, pig and poultry events and workshops for intensive livestock operators. These workshops will provide practical assistance to operators in submitting their PPC applications. The Environment Agency has established a website for intensive livestock operators concerning PPC at http://www.environment-agency.gov.uk/business/444304/1224648/1224695/1116263/?version=1&lang=_e

The Environment Agency's "Guide for applicants for pig and poultry rearing units" is already available and was updated in July 2005. The Environment Agency is currently holding a public consultation on new guidance entitled "IPPC—How to comply—Guidance for intensive pig and poultry farmers". The consultation ends on 24 February 2006. It is expected that the final guidance will be published in Spring 2006.

EU Sugar Regime

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria were used to agree additional EU support for sugar producers in the French Département d'Outre Mer; and if she will make a statement. [36637]

Mr. Bradshaw: The additional support for sugar producers in the outermost regions of the EU, including French overseas departments, is based on the specific characteristics distinguishing production in those areas and will be integrated into local support programmes as provided for in the relevant Council Regulations in the POSEI (Programme of Options Specific to Remote and Insular Regions) series.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received from farmers on the recent announcement on the EU sugar reforms. [36951]

Mr. Bradshaw: Farmers representatives have recognised the sugar agreement as a tough but necessary reform, removing recent uncertainties about the future of the sector. They have also asked for early discussions with Ministers on the detail of the compensation arrangements for UK sugar beet growers.

Expert Advisers

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria govern the number of papers a candidate must have published to be considered an expert member of her Department's statutory advisory bodies; and whether, when considering applications for membership of such bodies, her Department takes into account the declaration of conflict of interest at the end of papers published by scientific journals. [35797]

Jim Knight: There is not a standard requirement for expert members of DEFRA's advisory committees to have published scientific papers. All appointees must be able to demonstrate they posses the level of expertise and/or experience defined in the post criteria. The Department will seek to satisfy itself that the evidence provided by the candidate is appropriate to the post. The degree of expertise required will be decided on a post-by-post basis, in accordance with the requirements of each committee.

All applicants are asked to declare any potential conflicts of interest on their application form and again at interview. If the selection panel think there is anything in an application that could potentially be seen to conflict with the work of the committee it will be discussed with the candidate at interview. This approach follows the Commissioner for Public Appointment's code of practice.

Farm Animals (Disease Levy)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the merits of imposing a levy on farmers to pay for the cost of future animal disease outbreaks; and if she will make a statement. [36967]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Joint Industry Government Working Group announced 28 November in the "Partners for success—A farm regulation and charging strategy" will assess the merits of a levy on farmers as part of its consideration of the options for sharing the risks of animal disease outbreaks.

Food Recalls

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the recalls of foodstuffs that have been notified to the Department over the last year for which figures are available. [35106]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

The Food Standards Agency (FSA) advises that during the period 1 January-30 November 2005, product withdrawals or product recalls notified to them resulted in the agency issuing 58 Food Alerts for Information (FAFI).

During that period, the FSA also issued 16 food alerts for action (FAFA). These required the relevant local authority to undertake further investigation and/or enforcement action in order to remove the affected product/s from the food supply chain. In total 74 food alerts were issued.

Home Information Packs

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 15 November 2005, Official Report, column 1061W, on home information packs, if she will place in the Library a copy of her Department's submission. [31834]

Mr. Bradshaw: A copy of the submission will be made available in the Library of the House. My officials will continue discussions with interested parties on the inclusion of contaminated land reports in Home Imformation Packs.

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) of 15 November 2005, Official Report, column 1061W, on Home Information Packs (HIPs), what information on contaminated land she proposes should be included in HIPs; and if she will place the full submission to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (a) in the Library and (b) on her Department's website. [36015]

Mr. Bradshaw: The submission referred to in the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) has already been placed in the Library of the House. The Department has not put forward proposals of its own on the contents of Home Information Packs, but will continue discussions with interested parties on the possible inclusion of contaminated land reports in these Packs.

Integrated Pollution Legislation

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the regulatory impact of the Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control legislation. [37338]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department undertook a regulatory impact assessment (RIA) of the Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations 2000, when these regulations were laid before Parliament. A further copy of this RIA will be deposited in the Library of the House.

The Department, with the support of the devolved Administrations and other Government Departments, is currently undertaking a review which will provide an evaluation of the UK implementation of EC Directive 96/61 on Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control, as implemented through the Pollution and Prevention and Control Regulations 2000, in terms of both costs and benefits. This evaluation is expected to be published in early 2006.

Landfill

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her estimate is of the amount of landfill capacity likely to be available in (a) 2010 and (b) 2015 at present rates of disposal. [36121]

Mr. Bradshaw: There is sufficient landfill capacity to meet current arisings. Landfill capacity in 2010 and beyond is difficult to predict. However, Government policies are designed to significantly reduce the demand for disposal in landfill in future.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent research she has commissioned into the types of material going to landfill. [36122]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Environment Agency's 2002–03 Commercial and Industrial Waste Survey provides the most comprehensive and up to date evidence. The total of construction, industrial and hazardous waste streams in England is estimated at 67.5 million tonnes, of which about 28.5 million tonnes goes to landfill. A further breakdown is given in the following table.

Landfill

	Tonnes	Percentage
Construction and demolition	1,335	75
Combustion wastes	4,163	43
Common sludges	188	17
Discarded equipment	70	24

DEFRA's annual Municipal Waste Survey provides the most comprehensive evidence on the sources, quantities and fates of municipal waste collected by local authorities in England. In 2003–04 local authorities collected 29.1 million tonnes of Municipal Solid Waste (MSW). Of this, 25.4 million tonnes was household waste, the remainder being collected from sources such as industry, commerce, municipal parks and gardens. In total 72 per cent. (20.9 million tonnes) of MSW was disposed of in landfill.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her estimate is of how many tons of paper went to landfill in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [36123]

Mr. Bradshaw: Data are not specifically collected on the amount of paper sent to landfill. However, the Confederation of British Paper Industries estimates the amount of paper consumed in the UK and therefore likely to become waste (shown in the following table). They also estimate that 38 per cent. of paper and board are recycled. The paper materials that are not sent for recycling will be disposed of by some method, but it is not known what proportion of this is sent to landfill.

Estimated consumption[1] of paper and board in the UK

Million tonnes

	Amount
1999	12.8
2000	12.9
2001	12.6
2002	12.4

[1] Consumption is defined as UK production plus imports minus exports.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 930W, on landfill, if she will make an assessment of the landfill requirement arising from the consumption of bottled water; and if she will draw up a plan of action to encourage the recycling of bottles. [36459]

Mr. Bradshaw: Glass and plastic bottles are already subject to recycling obligations under the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997 (as amended), which require businesses that handle more than 50 tonnes of packaging a year and have a turnover greater than £2 million to recover and recycle specified tonnages of packaging waste.

In 2004, 344,000 tonnes of plastic packaging waste was recycled, of which we estimate that about 10 per cent. or 34,500 tonnes was plastic bottles, some of which would have held water. I understand that the plastic industry expect to recycle 50,000 tonnes of plastic bottles this year. Likewise, in 2004, 1,050,000 tonnes of glass packaging waste was recycled, of which approximately 75 per cent. was glass bottles and again some would have held water. It is worth noting, however, that in 2004 only 32,000 tonnes of glass was used to bottle water. It is much more sustainable for people to drink tap water.

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what financial penalties would be incurred by the United Kingdom in the event of non-compliance with the EU Landfill Directive; and if she will make a statement. [38573]

Mr. Bradshaw: The European Commission is not currently undertaking any infraction proceedings against the United Kingdom in relation to the Landfill Directive (1999/31/EC) as supplemented by Council Decision 2003/33/EC. In the absence of infraction proceedings, the issue of financial penalties does not arise.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many and what percentage of (a) closed and (b) operating landfill sites capture methane for electricity generation; what volume in total was captured in the last period for which figures are available; and what estimate she has made of savings in greenhouse gas emissions from (i) non-release of methane and (ii) displacement of fossil fuel generation, assuming all displacement came from such sources. [30924]

Mr. Bradshaw: In 2004, there were in excess of 200 generating stations utilising landfill methane in the UK. The Government does not hold statistics determining whether these landfill gas utilisation plants are located on closed landfill sites or operational ones. There are about 900 of the latter. According to DTI statistics, the total installed generating capacity at landfill sites in 2004 was 722 MW. Research for Defra by Colder Associates indicates that the volume of methane captured for electricity generation was about 1,070 thousand tonnes (kT) in 2004. An estimated additional 1,307 kt methane was captured and flared at landfill sites. This means that electricity generation and flaring saved greenhouse gas emissions of about 6 million tonnes carbon equivalent (MtC equiv), and about 7.5 MtC equiv, respectively. The total saving from capture was therefore about 13.5 MtC equiv. The generating plant produced about 4 TWh of electricity, equivalent to saving a further 0.5 million MtC equiv due to reduced emissions at power stations.

Livestock Markets

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assistance is available from her Department for the setting up of livestock markets. [36130]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are no funding schemes administered by DEFRA for the purpose of setting up of livestock markets, although DEFRA's Rural Enterprise Scheme (which in its present form ends next year) could provide assistance for the building of a livestock market as part of a farm diversification project. Details are publicly available from the Department.

Marine Environment

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is in respect of the creation of a spatial planning regime for the marine environment. [38733]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government are preparing proposals for legislation to provide a new framework for the seas, based on marine spatial planning. A consultation paper on the proposed Marine Bill be will published early in 2006.

In 2004 DEFRA commissioned a pilot project to investigate with stakeholders a number of issues associated with the development of marine spatial planning. This is almost complete, and the final report will be available on www.abpmer.co.uk/mspp shortly.

Opinion Research/Public Relations

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the value was of (a) public opinion research and (b) public relations contracts awarded by her Department in (i) each (A) nation and (B) region of the UK and (ii) London in 2004–05. [35954]

Jim Knight: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given on 7 December 2005, Official Report, column 1294W and 12 December 2005, Official Report, columns 1600–1601W, salient details of which are given as follows.

(a) Public opinion research

Since 2001 Defra's Communications Directorate has commissioned the following omnibus tracking survey to measure public awareness of the Department, knowledge of its responsibilities and opinions on its performance:

All agencies provided specialist skills and services not currently available within Defra's Communications Directorate.

Details of public opinion research and public relations contracts broken down by nation and regional are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportional costs.

Pensioners (Insulation Costs)

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her estimate is of the number of pensioner householders in Wakefield District who are eligible for assistance with (a) central heating insulation costs and (b) home insulation costs. [38334]

Mr. Morley: Information on the exact number of pensioner households in Wakefield District eligible for assistance from the Warm Front Scheme is not available.

The Warm Front Scheme Manager uses a range of tools to target activities to those who may qualify for assistance from the scheme and to raise awareness of the support available.

Poultry

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of the UK's poultry imports came from Thailand in 2004–05. [37634]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 15 December 2005]: Imports of poultry products from Thailand into the UK for the period 2003 to September 2005 are shown in the following table. The final row in the table shows that these represented 9.8 per cent. (by value) of total poultry imports into the UK for the period January to September 2005.

The importation of fresh poultry meat produced on or after 1 January 2004 and cooked poultry meat which has not been heat treated to at least 70°C was banned in January 2004. Poultry meat products which have been cooked to 70°C or more are not considered to be a risk.

	2003		2004		January to September 2005
	Tonnes 000	£000	Tonnes 000	£000	Tonnes 000	£000
Total imports	567	1,071	622	1,153	495	854
Imports from Thailand	46	88	46	86	47	83
Proportion of imports from Thailand	8.1%	8.2%	7.4%	7.4%	9.6%	9.8%

Recycling

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to promote the separate collection and recycling of paper and other materials from small and medium-sized businesses; whether her Department has set targets for such recycling; and if she will make a statement. [34860]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The Government aim to have reduced the amount of commercial and industrial waste going to landfill to 85 per cent. of the 1998 level by 2005. The recent Environment Agency report, published this month, showed waste recovery rates were at record levels in 2004, with 53 per cent. of all business waste recycled or re-used.

The main incentive for businesses to recycle more is economic. The landfill tax is increasing the cost of waste disposal and thus providing the waste management industry with a strong incentive to offer separate collection facilities for businesses.

£43 million from the landfill tax escalator was fed back into business via the Business Resource Efficiency and Waste (BREW) programme to fund a variety of initiatives such as Envirowise, which advises and supports businesses who want to improve their recycling performance.

The Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997 have set targets to obligated businesses for recycling paper packaging waste, peaking at 70 per cent. in 2008. To create stable and efficient markets for recycled materials such as paper, Government have established the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP). Clean source separation of paper and other recyclates is a well recognised factor in obtaining best prices.

WRAP is currently undertaking a study aimed at finding ways to overcome the barriers currently inhibiting adequate provision of recycling services for SMEs, and to improve their capacity to recycle more waste. The study is funded by BREW. WRAP intend to deliver a series of trials to collect materials for recycling from SMEs that presently receive no recycling services.

Trials are expected to continue until summer 2006 after which WRAP will produce a final feasibility study report based on their findings.

Plastic Packaging

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much plastic packaging has been (a) recovered and (b) recycled in each of the last seven years. [37604]

Mr. Bradshaw: The amount of plastic packaging waste that was recovered and recycled in the last seven years was as follows:

Tonnes

	Recycled	Energy recovery[1]
1998	125,539	201,759
1999	198,461	223,321
2000	204,430	225,021
2001	269,962	231,273
2002	360,418	262,953
2003	321,205	269,721
2004	344,317	271,260

[1] Under the UK packaging regulations the amount of packaging waste recovered in the form of energy is not identified by packaging material. However, the Environment Agency estimates that about 45 per cent. of the packaging waste recovered in the form of energy was plastic packaging waste.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs from where plastic recycling schemes are being operated; and whether her Department has assisted each scheme (a) financially and (b) through the provision of advice. [35778]

Mr. Bradshaw: A recent survey commissioned by the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) showed that 73 per cent. of all UK local authorities offer some sort of plastic collection scheme. This year Defra is providing nearly £2 million under the Waste Implementation Programme to support ROTATE, WRAP'S local authority advisory service. Under ROTATE WRAP have advised several English local authorities on kerbside collection of plastics, in particular how they might add plastic to existing kerbside collection schemes. Advice has been provided to South Gloucestershire, London borough of Richmond, Telford and Wrekin, Tonbridge and Malling, Guildford, Southwark and Cheshire County along with the constituent collection authorities.

Roadside Pollution Units

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many roadside pollution monitoring units there are in each local authority in England; what pollutants they monitor; and what criteria govern their placement. [37774]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are 17 roadside sites in the National Automatic Urban and Rural Network (AURN; See Table 1), monitoring mainly oxides of nitrogen and carbon monoxide. There are a large number of roadside sites run by local authorities which are not in the AURN. Data from and site information on all the national monitoring sites are available on the National Air Quality Information Archive (www.airquality.co.uk).

Local authorities have a duty to Review and Assess air quality in their areas. This often involves monitoring of oxides of nitrogen, PM_{10} and other pollutants at roadside locations. While DEFRA is a statutory consultee for local authority reports on air quality, monitoring results are made available to the public by local authorities. DEFRA does not log the monitoring information from these assessments. A partial survey of monitoring sites in the UK was carried out in November 2003. This estimated the total number of monitoring sites in the UK at around 6–700. A large proportion of these are likely to be roadside sites.

Table 1: Pollutants monitored at roadside sites in the National Automatic Urban and Rural Network (AURN)

Site name	Pollutants measured	Local Authority
Bath Roadside	Oxides of nitrogen[1], Carbon monoxide	Bath and NE Somerset

Wrexham	Oxides of nitrogen, Carbon monoxide, sulphur dioxide	Wrexham County Borough

[1] Oxides of nitrogen include nitric oxide (NO) and nitrogen dioxide (NO_2)

The criteria for defining a site as Roadside is as follows: the site must be between 1 m from the kerb of a busy road and the back of the pavement. Sites are typically within 5 m of the road with a sampling height of 2 to 3 m.

Scrapie

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many dead sheep have been collected as a result of the national survey for scrapie. [37903]

Mr. Bradshaw: So far this year, 10,505 fallen sheep aged over 18 months have been collected in the UK and submitted for testing under our national survey.

Single Farm Payment Scheme

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of digital mapping in relation to single farm payments is complete. [37240]

Jim Knight: Around 95 per cent. of the digital mapping required to support claims to the 2005 Single Payment Scheme (SPS) is complete based on the area within the Rural Land Register and the estimate of the area still awaiting digitisation. A significant proportion of the area was digitised prior to the inception of the SPS, but in excess of 130,000 mapping requests to modify or increase digitised areas have been received since September 2004.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what training is given to (a) policy officials and (b) lawyers in her Department responsible for drafting statutory instruments; and if she will make a statement. [33554]

Jim Knight: Statutory instruments are drafted by departmental lawyers based on instructions from policy divisions. Where SIs amend primary legislation, parliamentary counsel are consulted.

As members of the Government Legal Service (GLS), departmental lawyers receive extensive training on the preparation and drafting of statutory instruments. This consists of a combination of lectures and practical exercises run by experienced practitioners in the GLS, coupled with training given by legal advisers who advise the parliamentary scrutiny committees. In addition, senior managers in the GLS take a close interest in the quality of SIs and provide frequent feedback and on the job training to those with lead responsibility for drafting. This is an ongoing process and part of the continuing education of government legal advisers.

Sunset Clauses

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is in respect of the use of sunset clauses in legislation. [33556]

Jim Knight: The appropriateness of a sunset clause for the whole or part of any proposed legislation is considered on a case by case basis. It is also addressed when a regulatory impact assessment relating to legislation is being prepared.

Timber

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether timber produced under the Australian Forest Standard scheme meets standards set by her Department for sustainability. [38655]

Mr. Morley: In November 2004 the Government commissioned its Central Point of Expertise on Timber (CPET) to examine five forest certification schemes to determine whether they provide credible assurance of legal and sustainable timber sources as defined in the model contract condition and specification used by central Government Departments. One of the schemes assessed was the Programme for the Endorsement of Forest Certification (PEFC) which sets forest management and certification requirements for national bodies, endorsed by PEFC, to adopt and apply to suit local conditions. PEFC has endorsed the Australian Forestry Standard (AFS) which means that forests and products that derive from the trees harvested in those forests that are certified as operating to the AFS can be marketed under the PEFC label.

CPET's initial assessment of the PEFC scheme was that on paper it provided credible assurance of legal harvesting but did not provide credible assurance of sustainable timber production. PEFC was judged not to have sufficient requirements for involving all relevant interest groups in the forest standard setting and forest management auditing process. This was judged to be a system failure at the international scheme level and was not influenced by actual situations at a national level. No national body was examined and there was no assessment of actual performance on the ground. PEFC has since changed its scheme requirements and been reassessed as providing a credible system, on paper, for assuring sustainable timber production as defined in Government contracts. However, the UK Government, aware that scheme changes at the international level are meaningless if not adopted nationally, gave notice that it would check to see that national PEFC bodies had implemented changes to their published requirements. CPET plans to make such checks in January 2006.

Waste Management

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the implementation of Government policy on waste management by (a) local authorities and (b) West Sussex county council. [37734]

Mr. Bradshaw: As part of the Audit Commission's role in ensuring that public money is spent economically, efficiently, and effectively on local government services, it inspects the waste and recycling services of authorities in England through the Comprehensive Performance Assessment (CPA). The assessment looks at refuse collection; street cleansing; education and enforcement; waste disposal; and, related services with an overall sub-score for waste management derived using best value inspection reports (where available), and performance indicator data.

In December 2004, the Audit Commission reviewed the waste management service of West Sussex county council and gave it a score of three out of a possible four for the way it is run.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of Tamworth borough council's response to new waste regulations which place a duty of care on householders for their household waste. [37826]

Mr. Bradshaw: Local authorities and the Environment Agency have powers to take enforcement action for breaches of the waste duty of care. It is for local authorities to develop their own local enforcement policy positions.

The Government are encouraging local authorities to actively promote legitimate waste disposal and to highlight the need for people to only use registered waste carriers. Local authorities are also being encouraged to investigate incidents of illegal waste disposal and to take action against offenders.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many facilities burn municipal waste; and where they are located. [37622]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are currently 16 municipal waste incinerators in England, located in Bermondsey, Billingham, Birmingham, Bolton, Chineham, Coventry, Dudley, Edmonton, Grimsby, Huddersfield, Marchwood, Nottingham, Portsmouth, Sheffield, Stoke and Wolverhampton.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government is taking to support local authorities in Bedfordshire in developing alternative methods of waste disposal; and if she will make a statement. [37637]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government continues to encourage all local authorities to move towards innovative methods of waste disposal which will reduce amounts of waste sent to landfill. In Bedfordshire all authorities have benefited from the award of approximately £2 million from the Government's National Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fund to invest in extending the collection of dry recyclables and garden waste. Additionally, a total of £304,000 has been awarded to the Bedfordshire authorities in 2005–06 through the Waste Performance Efficiency Grant—a figure that will be approximately doubled for 2006–07 and 2007–08.

Through Defra's Waste Implementation Programme and the Defra funded Waste and Resources Action Programme additional financial support and specialist advice has been taken up by the Bedfordshire authorities on strategic planning, communications and new technologies. It is pleasing to note that local authorities in Bedfordshire have taken full advantage of the Government support available to develop alternative methods of waste disposal.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what additional measures the Government are taking to assist growth areas to develop alternative methods of disposing of waste; and if she will make a statement. [37647]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government continues to encourage all local authorities to move towards innovative methods of waste disposal which will reduce amounts of waste sent to landfill. In last year's Spending Review the Government announced an increase in the Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services (EPCS) Formula Spending Share block of £888 million by 2007–08 over 2004–05. Over the three-year period to 2005–06, authorities are also benefiting from a total of £294 million invested through the Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fund and its successor the Waste Performance and Efficiency Grant, will provide a further £260 million over the three years to 2007–08. Finally, through the private finance initiative (PFI), credits worth £355 million have been made available over the three years 2005–06 as an extra source of funding, with a further £535 million available in 2006–07 and 2007–08.

In growth areas, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister have held regional seminars to discuss how waste arising from increasing population, particularly from construction, demolition and excavation can be properly planned for to ensure that the necessary infrastructure can be developed. The ODPM are also in discussions with the Environment Agency to carry out a study to predict quantities and types of waste that are likely to arise in the Thames Gateway region and the results from this study will be applicable to other designated growth areas.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria are used when awarding local authorities permits for the disposal of annual amounts of biodegradable waste in landfill sites; and if she will make a statement. [37648]

Mr. Bradshaw: The allocation of landfill allowances for each Waste Disposal Authority has been made until 2020. The allocation process is based on the total waste arisings and amounts sent for disposal, recycling, composting or recovery that were reported to Defra by each local authority in the 2001–02 Municipal Waste Management Survey.

Allocations for the target years (2009–10, 2012–13 and 2019–20) are based on applying each Waste Disposal Authority's percentage contribution to 2001–02 Municipal Waste Management Survey (the base year) and applying a percentage reduction of Biodegradable Municipal Waste that can be sent to landfills from England in target years. The allocation process ensures that all Waste Disposal Authorities make a contribution to England's landfill reduction targets.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the facilities available in areas of major housing growth for the disposal of waste; and if she will make a statement. [37649]

Mr. Bradshaw: It is for local authorities, through the preparation of Regional Spatial Strategies and Waste Local Plans, to assess and plan for the facilities needed to deal with the waste arising in a region/area, including the growth areas.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received regarding the permissible annual amounts of biodegradable waste which can be disposed of in landfill sites by local authorities in Bedfordshire; and if she will make a statement. [37650]

Mr. Bradshaw: A consultation on the provisional allocation of landfill allowances was held in August 2004. Bedfordshire county council responded expressing its concerns that the allocation of landfill allowances did not take into account the above-average population growth in the Bedfordshire area.

DEFRA officials will be meeting Milton Keynes council, Northamptonshire county council, Bedfordshire county council and Buckinghamshire county council, to discuss support to authorities with above-average population growth in January 2006.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment the Government makes of projected increases in population and households in Bedfordshire when determining annual amounts of biodegradable waste permitted for disposal in landfill sites by local authorities; and if she will make a statement. [37675]

Mr. Bradshaw: A clear message from the Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme consultation in 2003 was that all Waste Disposal Authorities wanted certainty in their allocations. It is our belief that basing the allocations on predictions of future population growth will not provide that certainty.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether it is her policy to implement the Waste Incineration Directive in full by 28 December; and if she will make a statement. [33694]

Mr. Bradshaw: The legislation necessary to implement the Waste Incineration Directive in full was in place by 28 December 2002. I understand that applications to the regulators (the Environment Agency or the local authority, depending on the capacity of the installation) from the operators concerned for the necessary permits are in the final stages of determination with a view to completion by 28 December 2005.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much public money was spent on waste management and disposal in 2004–05; what proportion of gross domestic product this represents; and what changes in the cost are expected by 2010. [27879]

Mr. Bradshaw: In England approximately £47.5 million was spent directly by Defra and DTI in 2004–05.

In addition local authority revenue expenditure on waste management amounted to some £2.2 billion. The figures for capital expenditure for 2004–05 are not yet available.

Figures for English GDP are not separately published. The closest equivalent is Gross Value Added (GVA) which for 2003 (the most recent year for which figures were available) was some £815 billion.

An analysis of future waste-related costs will take place as a part of the Waste Strategy Review and the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of Gravesham council's response to new waste regulations which place a duty of care on householders for their household waste. [36950]

Mr. Bradshaw: Local authorities and the Environment Agency have powers to take enforcement action for breaches of the waste duty of care. It is for local authorities to develop their own local enforcement policy positions.

Local authorities, including Gravesham, have been actively encouraging residents to use registered waste carriers, as well as following up and investigating illegal waste disposal.

Yoghurt

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with her EU counterparts on the EU proposals relating to the classification of yoghurt. [37267]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that in 2003 there was some initial interest at European level in setting European Commission standards for the composition and labelling of yogurt. However, no formal proposals for legislation have been made by the European Commission and there has been no further progress on this initiative since then.

PRIME MINISTER

Catering Facilities

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister what the cost was of (a) the in-house canteen and (b) other catering services provided by his Office in 2004. [35972]

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Prime Minister what the total value is of (a) catering and (b) entertainment contracts let by his Office; and what value of such contracts has been let in each nation and region of the UK, including London. [37459]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Members to the answer given by my noble Friend Lord Bassam of Brighton to the noble Lord Hanningfield on 21 July 2005, Official Report, column WA261. In addition, the cost of other catering services provided by my office in 2004–05 was £48,680. This includes associated overheads, including staffing. Beverages and light refreshments were provided for a broad spectrum of official events, including: Cabinet meetings, meetings with foreign Governments, and a wide range of external guests and visitors from the UK and overseas.

The in-house cafe in my office is self-financing.

Communications Interception

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister whether it is his policy that no authorisation will be given for the interception of communications in respect of (a) hon. Members and (b) Members of the House of Lords; and if he will make a statement. [38741]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement I made on 15 December 2005, Official Report, column 173WS.

Congressional Medal of Honor

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to collect his Congressional Medal of Honor. [38418]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Louth and Horncastle (Sir Peter Tapsell) at Prime Minister's Questions on 14 December 2005, Official Report, columns 1301–02.

Harlow North Sustainability Symposia

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the representatives of his Office who attended the Harlow North Sustainability Symposia on 6 June. [37449]

The Prime Minister: As far as I am aware no one from my Office attended the Harlow North Sustainability Symposia on 6 June.

Ministerial Visit

Mr. Hands: To ask the Prime Minister if he will accompany the hon. Member for Hammersmith and Fulham on a visit to that constituency via the London Underground to observe changes in the levels of overcrowding since his last tube journey in 2000. [38625]

The Prime Minister: I have no current plans to do so.

The London Underground is the responsibility of Transport for London. Transport for London provides regular performance reports on the London Underground. These are available on their website (www.tfl.gov.uk).

Public Appointments

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by his Office, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [36678]

The Prime Minister: None. As Prime Minister I have responsibility for appointments to a number of public bodies sponsored by Government Departments. Details of former hon. Members who have been appointed to such positions have been addressed in each Department's response to the hon. Member.

Secondments

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister how many secondees there have been to his Office from consultancy firms, including the Big Four accountancy firms, in each of the last three years; and what areas of the Department they have worked in. [37357]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I have therefore asked my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Murphy) to reply. A copy of the reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Spy Ring (Stormont)

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Prime Minister (1) when he was consulted about the decision to discontinue the case against those charged with running a spy ring at Stormont in 2002; [38723]

(2) what representations he has received on those charged with running a spy ring at Stormont in 2002 prior to the announcement of the case's discontinuance being made. [38724]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave at Prime Minister's Questions on 14 December 2005.

Taxis

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Prime Minister how much has been spent by his Office on taxi travel in the 2005–06 financial year; and what proportion of such travel was undertaken in each nation and region of the UK, including London. [37460]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my Office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the letter from my right hon. Friend the then Duchy of Lancaster (John Hutton) to the hon. Member for Monmouth (David T.C. Davies), a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Figures for financial year 2005–06 are not yet available.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Academies

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average time taken by her Department has been between receipt of a formal expression of interest for an academy and a decision being taken. [38133]

Jacqui Smith: The average time taken from final expression of interest to ministerial decision is about two months, subject to internal procedures.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on what date she received from Southwark council the expression of interest for a federated academy in East Dulwich; when she expects to make a decision on this; and if she will make a statement. [38134]

Jacqui Smith: The expression of interest was received on 8 July 2005. We are currently considering the proposals and hope to make a decision shortly.

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions have taken place between the city of Newcastle upon Tyne, the local Learning and Skills Council and Newcastle college about a second city academy in Newcastle for the 11 to 16 years age group. [38290]

Jacqui Smith: Discussions between Newcastle council, the local LSC and Newcastle college are a matter for them and I am not party to that information.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on what (a) research and (b) exemplar the proposals to create (i) academy and (ii) trust schools were based; and what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of such schools. [36290]

Jacqui Smith: The independent five-year evaluation of the Academies Programme undertaken by PricewaterhouseCoopers shows that academies are overwhelmingly popular with both parents and pupils, and that academies have made a significant difference to the teaching and learning culture since the predecessor schools. The evaluation has also found clear evidence that sponsors are having a positive impact on academies by both establishing a positive vision and ethos for the new academies, and also by providing their expertise.

Improvements in GCSE results are already in evidence, despite many pupils only having attended their academy for a few terms. Of the 14 academies open at the time of the last round of GCSE examinations, all but two showed an increase in the proportion of students achieving five grades A* to C relative to their predecessor schools, and the average annual increase in the number of students gaining five grades A* to C across all academies is 6 per cent. a year. Several academies have shown remarkable improvements in their GCSE results since opening. The City Academy in Bristol, for example, has shown an increase of 25 per cent. in the number of pupils achieving five grades A* to C in just two years. Four other academies have shown increases of greater than 20 per cent. since opening.

The Government's proposals to establish trust schools represent an extension of the freedom to innovate to schools outside those areas currently being targeted by the academies programme. The creation of trust schools will assist in offering more and better choice and diversity in the schools system for parents and pupils. Trust schools will build on the long tradition of voluntary schools which are backed by trusts, and also on the successful experience of specialist schools and academies in working with sponsors from the voluntary, not-for-profit and private sectors. The success of specialist schools in their value-added performance is attested by research by Professor David Jesson, most recently his study: 'Educational outcomes and value added by specialist schools, 2004'.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what criteria are used for the geographical distribution of academies; what part her Department plays in this; on what basis, and by whom, the schools to be designated as academies are chosen; whether local authorities have any veto on the establishment of an academy; and how many of the academies are in areas where a better schools building programme has been authorised. [36362]

Jacqui Smith: Academies are situated in areas of deprivation and/or educational need. The main criteria for consideration of an Academy is for it to be sited in an area of historically weak educational performance and that the local authority area concerned is listed in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister statistics on deprivation. Other factors such as poor ratings by OFSTED and low admission numbers for predecessor schools are sometimes considered, but it is the academic under-achievement and deprivation that are of primary importance. Some Academies are being established in areas not considered as deprived overall but with particular enclaves of deprivation or low attainment.

Local authorities have supported all Academy proposals to date through signing where appropriate the Expression of Interest (EOI) that formally establishes the project.

DfES is responsible for: identifying potential Academy proposals; working with the responsible stakeholders to produce an EOI for establishing an Academy; assessing the viability of the proposal once an EOI has been received including consulting with stakeholders in the local area; co-ordinating the building process for the Academy, setting up the Trust that will govern the Academy; working with the Trust and the Sponsor to set up the educational vision and ethos of the school; organising for the Funding Agreement to be signed between the Secretary of State and the Trust to govern the Academy.

All of the 27 open Academies are in areas where the Building Schools for the Future programme is running. A breakdown of which local authority is in which wave of the BSF programme can be found at http://www.bsf.gov.uk/documents/ in the document "Local Authority project by wave".

Administrative Savings

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what administrative savings have been made by her Department in each of the last eight years. [34938]

Bill Rammell: I refer the right hon. Member to the information on gross and net controlled administration costs underspends for Whitehall Departments which is published in the Public Expenditure Outturn White Papers for the relevant years. These are available in the Library of the House.

Efficiency gains are being made as part of the Spending Review 2004 efficiency programme, as set out in the DfES Efficiency Technical Notes which are available on the Department's website.

After-school Care (Disabled Children)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding was allocated to the provision of after-school care for children with disabilities in (a) Staffordshire and (b) Tamworth constituency in each year since 1997; and what future funding has been allocated. [37823]

Maria Eagle: We are making funding available to all local authorities and schools up to 2008 to support them in setting up and embedding extended services in mainstream and special schools. The Government does not specify how much of this funding should be spent on disabled children. It will be for individual local authorities, in discussion with all schools in their area, to take a strategic approach to developing access to after school care through schools.

The Extended Schools prospectus issued in June 2005 makes it clear that children with disabilities or special educational needs must be able to access all new services, and schools have a responsibility to ensure this happens. The needs of children in particular schools will vary. Schools will need to work closely with parents to ensure that services are shaped around the needs of children and the wider community.

Annual Parents Meeting

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills for what reasons her Department decided to remove the obligation on governing bodies to hold an annual parents' meeting. [37659]

Jacqui Smith: The purpose of the annual parents' meeting was to provide an opportunity for a discussion of the manner in which the school had been conducted, and of any other matters relating to the school raised by the parents. Many meetings were very poorly attended and, despite adopting various innovative strategies to improve turnout, it still proved difficult, in many schools, to generate enthusiasm for attending the meetings. The new school profile will give parents a broader and deeper understanding of what a school is doing. The removal of the requirement to hold an annual parents' meeting allows governors to manage their own relationship and communications with parents, to better reflect local circumstances, this may include choosing to hold a meeting.

Removing the requirement to hold an annual parents' meeting also reduced the burden of legislative requirements on school governing bodies, granting greater freedom for school leadership to concentrate on continued improvements in performance.

Better Regulation Task Force

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress she has made on implementing the recommendations of the Better Regulation Task Force following its report of February 2004. [37978]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 15 December 2005]: Guidance has been given to local authorities that directors of Children's Services should have functions relating to child employment as part of their remit, as recommended by the Task Force. We are continuing to consider whether and to what extent the Task Force's other specific proposals can contribute to the key outcomes which we want to see for all children, as described in our Green Paper "Every Child Matters". In doing so, we will continue to be mindful of the need not to impose unnecessary burdens on employers or local authorities.

Chronic Back Pain

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps are being taken in her Department to help civil servants with chronic back pain. [38871]

Maria Eagle: My Department takes the health and welfare of all its employees very seriously and has in place a system of ergonomic assessment and subsequent adjustments to ensure that individuals, including those with chronic back pain, get the adjustments they need to work effectively within the Department.

Adjustments may involve adaptation to IT equipment or software, office furniture or workstation and in some cases adjustments to work objectives and working patterns may be agreed.

My Department contracts with an occupational health provider for medical advice and occupational health advisers visit all my Department's sites on a regular basis to support managers when dealing with staff with health issues and to help identify the most effective intervention in complex workplace ergonomic issues. Staff are reminded frequently of the need for good posture and use of repetitive strain injury guard software.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the cost of reducing primary school class sizes to 20 pupils. [37635]

Jacqui Smith: We have not commissioned any research of this type.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the cost of reducing secondary school class sizes to (i) 15 and (ii) 12 pupils. [37646]

Connexions

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of Connexions advisers have received disability awareness training. [37350]

Maria Eagle: All Connexions personal advisers are trained in using appropriate assessment frameworks for working with young people. This training includes working with young people with learning disabilities.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many specialist advisers for disabled people are employed by Connexions. [37351]

Maria Eagle: Connexions is a universal service and has a work force equipped to respond to the full spectrum of client needs. Some personal advisers specialise in work with young people with learning disabilities, but we do not collect data about personal advisers' individual specialisms.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions she has had with Connexions on their ability to meet the needs of disabled people in the provision of their services. [37352]

Maria Eagle: Government Offices are responsible for ensuring that quality and continuity of Connexions services is maintained. Government Offices agree each Connexions Partnership's plans for meeting the needs of young people in their area. This includes providing assessments relating to Section 140 of the Learning and Skills Act 2000 and assisting young people with learning difficulties and/or disabilities to obtain appropriate education, employment or training. Connexions Partnerships have a duty to carry out their responsibilities under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 and the Department has issued guidance to assist them in meeting their obligations.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total value is of (a) catering and (b) entertainment contracts let by her Department; and what value of such contracts has been let in each nation and region of the United Kingdom, including London. [37463]

Bill Rammell: The Department for Education and Skills total value of (a) catering: equals an annual subsidy of £51,740 (b) entertainment contracts: equals an expenditure of £478,029 on hospitality covering internal working meetings and lunches where external visitors or staff from other sites attend.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) salary bill was and (b) administrative costs were for her Department in (i) each region and (ii) London in 2004–05. [35867]

Bill Rammell: The administration budgets regime overseen by the Treasury relates to Whitehall Departments only. How administration costs are controlled in the devolved Administrations is a matter for them. We do not monitor regional or central London administration costs separately.

I refer you to the most recent Public Expenditure Outturn White Paper (Cm 6639) for provisional 2004–05 departmental administration costs outturn (£250 million) and the DfES Departmental Report (Cm 6522) which contains estimated 2004–05 pay bill outturn (£164 million).

Maria Eagle: The Department for Education and Skills owns (a) no land and (b) no property in Southend West constituency.

Departmental Research

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research projects commissioned by her Department are being undertaken; and what the publication arrangements are in each case. [32993]

Bill Rammell: 125 DfES commissioned research projects are currently being undertaken, including projects conducted by other Government Departments and organisations to which the DfES contributes. DfES publishes findings from the research it commissions in line with the requirements of the Freedom of Information Act, the aim being to do so within 12 weeks of the final project completion date as stated on our website. I have outlined the currently planned arrangements for all these projects.

Departmental Staff

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff are employed by her Department in each region of England; and if she will make a statement. [35896]

Maria Eagle: The figures requested are published in Civil Service Statistics. Table D covers permanent staff numbers (FTE basis) in each department and agency. Civil Service Statistics are available in the Library and at the following address on the Cabinet Office Statistics website:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_of_the_civil_service/statistics/civil_service_statistics/index.asp

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 542W, on departmental staff, how many temporary staff have been employed for each statutory time limit in each year since 2001; and how many of the posts they filled were subsequently filled by (a) temporary staff and (b) temporary staff who had been employed for the statutory time period allowed. [36221]

Maria Eagle: The numbers of temporary staff employed for a period of 12 months in the complete calendar years in question are:

	Number
2002	0

The number of posts subsequently filled by temporary staff within the Department and temporary staff who had been employed for the statutory time period allowed, is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 542W, what the (a) lowest cost per person, (b) highest cost per person, (c) median cost per person and (d) average cost per person was of employing (i) part-time, (ii) jobshare and (iii) full-time staff; and how many people were employed in each category in each of the last three years. [36222]

Maria Eagle: The cost information for (a) the lowest cost per person, (b) the highest cost per person, (c) the median cost per person and (d) the average cost per person was of employing (i) part-time, (ii) jobshare and (iii) full-time staff could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The numbers of people employed part time and full time in each of the last three years are in the following table.

Headcount

1 October	Part time	Full time
2005	580	3,467
2003	654	4,220

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many agency staff were employed by her Department in each of the last three financial years; in which part of the Department they were employed; on which projects they worked; what the cost was to the Department of employing them; and from which budget the funding came. [37367]

Maria Eagle: Statistics for temporary agency staff are recorded by days worked and the information for each of the last three financial years are detailed in the following table:

Calendar year	Days worked
2002	31,229
2003	27,087
2004	16,940

Agency staff are deployed across all directorates within the Department to meet business need.

Information on the projects that seconded staff have worked are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Costs to my Department for employing agency staff for the last three financial years are set out in the following table. Costs are borne from GAE budgets.

Financial year	Agency spend (£)
April 2002/March 2003	2,688,149.33
April 2003/March 2004	1,621,232.81
April 2004/March 2005	1,498,419.95

Departmental Website

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much the website www.teachernet.gov.uk has cost her Department since it was set up. [38016]

Bill Rammell: The ongoing annual cost to host the TeacherNet website (www.teachernet.gov.uk) is £360,000.

This website is shortly to be integrated with other online services and migrated onto a new technical infrastructure which will deliver better value for money.

Disabled People

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding was allocated to the provision of after-school care for children with disabilities in (a) West Yorkshire, (b) the Wakefield district and (c) Normanton constituency in each year since 1997; and what future funding has been allocated. [36747]

Maria Eagle: We are making funding available to all local authorities and schools up to 2008 to support them in setting up and embedding extended services in mainstream and special schools. The Government does not specify how much of this funding should be spent on disabled children. It will be for individual local authorities, in discussion with all schools in their area, to take a strategic approach to developing access to after school care through schools.

The Extended Schools prospectus issued in June 2005 makes it clear that children with disabilities or special educational needs must be able to access all new services, and, schools have a responsibility to ensure that this happens. The needs of children in particular schools will vary. Schools will need to work closely with parents to ensure that services are shaped around the needs of children and the wider community.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the initial activity undertaken by her Department in response to those recommendations in the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People where lead responsibility was assigned to all Government Departments. [37066]

Maria Eagle: The Office for Disability Issues (ODI) will report annually to the Prime Minister on cross-Government progress in implementing the Strategy Unit report, "Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People". The first report is due to be published by summer 2006. A central unit in my Department is currently drawing together activities in response to the recommendations and will be liaising with the Department for Work and Pensions in drawing up the report, which will also include an assessment of the initial activity undertaken by Government Departments to fulfil the responsibilities they have outside of the ODI remit.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what mechanisms she has identified to enable local authorities to switch spending on services for families with disabled children from later intervention to early intervention; and if she will make a statement. [37346]

Maria Eagle: Early intervention is central to our policies on services for families with disabled children including the Childcare Strategy, the National Service Framework and Every Child Matters. These documents are already in the public domain.

Through the implementation of the 10-year childcare strategy, we have prioritised services to disabled children and their families. In particular, the early support programme sets out to improve the delivery of services for disabled children aged 0–3 years and their families. The early support programme was developed with the full involvement of parents and professionals and has produced resource materials demonstrating multi-agency work and effective practice. The work has been piloted with 45 pathfinder authorities and the approach and principles can be adopted by every local authority.

The National Service Framework (NSF) for Children, Young People and Maternity Services sets national standards for the first time for children's health and social care (and their interface with education) which promote high quality, child-centred services and personalised care that meets the needs of children, young people and their families. Standard one of the framework is about promoting health and well-being, identifying needs and intervening early. It is being delivered by a range of practitioners including GPs, midwives, health visitors, dentists, early years workers, school nurses and teachers working together. It addresses the needs of children from pre-conception to adulthood and integrates pre-school and school aged health promotion and assessment.

Within the Every Child Matters agenda, a key driver for early intervention at local level is effective multi-agency work through children's trust arrangements. This includes better information sharing, enhanced coordination at the front line around the needs of the users, and the more flexible use of budgets. Supporting this transition to earlier intervention will be an important theme in the forthcoming comprehensive spending review.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will adopt a key performance indicator for provision by education services of equipment services for disabled people; and if she will make a statement. [37347]

Maria Eagle: I have established mechanisms for agencies to work together to provide equipment services for disabled children through the National Service Framework, Every Child Matters and Children's Trusts. These mechanisms allow education services, local authorities and health services to work together to provide equipment services for disabled children that meet local needs. Specifying a key performance indicator that just looks at provision by education services would therefore not capture the full picture of overall provision of equipment to disabled people.

Early Retirement

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many of her Department's employees have taken early retirement in each year since 1997. [34037]

Maria Eagle: The number of employees who have taken early retirement in each financial year since 1997 are shown in the table.

Financial year (April to March)	Number of employees
1997–98	101
1998–99	51
1999–2000	50
2000–01	61
2001–02	84
2002–03	57
2003–04	28
2004–05	325

Education Maintenance Allowance

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost is of the education maintenance allowance scheme in 2005–06; and what estimate she has made of the cost if the lower age limit were abolished. [35602]

Maria Eagle: The current budget for education maintenance allowance (EMA) payments in the financial year 2005–06 is £403 million. However EMA is a demand led programme which is funded through Annually Managed Expenditure by HM Treasury so final provision may be different.

Although we are able to estimate the percentage of 16–18 year olds eligible for EMA on income grounds, we do not have household income for young people under the age of 16—specifically those who have completed GCSEs a year or more early. Therefore, we are unable to estimate the cost of EMA if the lower age limit was abolished.

Education Model (Sweden)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what account she took of the Swedish education model when preparing the proposals in the White Paper Higher Standards, Better Schools for All. [37781]

Jacqui Smith: The proposals in the Schools White Paper, "Higher Standards better schools for All: More Choice for Parents and Pupils" are designed to meet the needs of schools In England. The proposals take into account developments since 1997, building on existing programmes such as the special schools and new approaches to leadership, federation and collaboration.

There are significant differences between the Swedish model and the proposals for trust schools set out in the White Paper. Trust will not be able to make a profit and there will be no "right to supply" for promoters wishing to set up a new school.

Educational Qualifications (Coventry, South)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of working age people in Coventry, South hold a qualification at degree level or equivalent or above. [37887]

Bill Rammell: From the 2004/05 Annual Local Labour Force Survey, the percentage of working age people in Coventry, South that hold a qualification at degree level or equivalent or above is 30.5 per cent. (18,000 people). This compares with 23.0 per cent. (734,000 people) in the West Midlands and 26.1 per cent. (7,948,000 people) in England.

Family Fund Trust

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she last reviewed the remit of the Family Fund Trust; and if she will make a statement. [37349]

Maria Eagle: Following open competition, the Department commissioned PricewaterhouseCoopers to carry out a triennial review of the Family Fund in April 2005.

The review considered the continuing need for the Family Fund; the future role of the Family Fund following devolution; the Fund's aims, objectives and priorities; the organisational management of the Fund; the financial management of the Fund; and the relationships of the Fund to the UK funding Government Departments.

The Department has discussed the findings of the review with the chair of trustees and chief executive of the Family Fund and with officials in the Governments of Wales, Northern Ireland and Scotland. The recommendations are being considered alongside recommendations in the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit report which relate to improving the life chances of disabled children.

Foster Carers (Abuse Allegations)

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance she (a) has issued and (b) plans to issue to (i) local authorities and (ii) other agencies on dealing with allegations of abuse against foster carers. [37328]

Maria Eagle: The Government takes the issue of allegations of abuse against all people working with children very seriously. Encouraging all organisations to have good systems and clear guidance in place forms a vital part of establishing safe environments for children and young people. Guidance about managing cases of allegations of abuse against all people who work with children will be set out in Chapter 4 and Appendix 4 of "Working Together to Safeguard Children" which we will publish early next year.

In addition, we are currently funding the development of materials aimed at highlighting some of the specific issues around allegations against foster carers. These include an information leaflet to inform foster carers and others about the process for handling allegations, as well as training materials which are designed for use at the pre-and post-approval stages of foster carer training.

Free School Meals

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils in (a) infant, (b) primary and (c) secondary schools in Dartford constituency (i) are eligible for and (ii) receive free school meals. [36718]

Jacqui Smith: The available information is shown in the table.

Further Education (Funding)

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many further education colleges are receiving no funding for some of their students owing to the threshold for these colleges having already been met. [38292]

Bill Rammell: My Department allocates funds for further education (FE) colleges to the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) which is the planning and funding body for post-16 education and training in England. For FE the LSC distributes funds regionally and local offices allocate funds to providers based on locally agreed development plans. I can confirm that the LSC will fund these plans. This guarantee that college plans will be funded has been widely welcomed by the sector as ensuring stability and provides confidence that colleges can make commitments for the year based on assured funding levels. This guarantee means that those colleges recruiting above their agreed plans cannot expect to receive additional funding in the current year over and above the levels they have agreed with the LSC.

Information on the number of students completing courses in the academic year is not available until after the end of that year. Consequently where colleges have delivered higher volumes in priority areas we would expect this to be reflected in their plans for the following year.

Head Teachers

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools were without a permanent head teacher for any period in the past 12 months. [38146]

Jacqui Smith: Information is not collected on the number of schools that were without a permanent head at any time in a 12 month period.

GCSEs

Mary Creagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the 50 schools with the lowest average GCSE scores; and which of these have received support from the London Challenge New Views programme. [38001]

Jacqui Smith: School level figures for 2005 are not available until the School and College Achievement and Attainment Tables are published in January 2006. The lowest 50 maintained mainstream schools by average uncapped point scores at GCSE and equivalent in 2004 are given in the following table. Hayes Manor (Hillingdon) and Mitcham Vale (Merton) schools have had the opportunity to benefit from the London Challenge New Views programme and are in italics in the table.

Higher Education

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of the relevant cohort in (a) Doncaster North, (b) Yorkshire and (c) England entered higher education in each year since 1995. [35601]

Bill Rammell: The latest available figures on participation by constituency and region were published by the Higher Education Funding Council for England in January in "Young Participation in England", which is available from their website at: http://www.hefce.ac.uk/pubs/hefce/2005/05_03/ This shows participation rates for constituencies and region for the years 1997 to 2000, and these are shown in the table.

Higher Education Funding Council for England.

The Department uses the higher education initial participation rate (HEIPR) to assess progress on increasing first-time participation of English students aged 18–30 in higher education towards 50 per cent: the latest provisional figure for 2003–04 is 43 per cent. The HEIPR is not calculated at constituency level.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research the Department has (a) undertaken and (b) commissioned on how to improve the stay-on rate in rural areas as part of the Aimhigher Strategy for Higher Education. [37894]

Bill Rammell: Aimhigher is subject to a full and detailed evaluation strategy, using a range of analytical techniques to assess the effectiveness of the programme. This includes surveying Aimhigher partnerships, to look at policy and practice at a local level. These partnerships are selected to be representative of Aimhigher partnerships nationally, and so include rural areas.

So far, the evaluation has not uncovered any issues relating to the effectiveness and operation of Aimhigher in rural areas as distinct from other localities. However, the design of the Aimhigher programme, with a focus on local delivery and priority setting, would allow partnerships to tailor their range of activities to suit local needs.

As part of the ongoing evaluation strategy, the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE), who jointly manage the evaluation, will be publishing two research reports in the new year which may shed some further light on this question:

(i) Findings from four area studies, including one rural area; and

(ii) Findings from a survey of providers, which may include comments on rural issues.

Incentive Packages

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the value is of (a) pay supplements, (b) bonuses and (c) other incentive packages that are payable in her Department on the basis of geographic location; how many people are in receipt of each payment; and what the total cost to her Department of each payment was in 2004–05. [35898]

Maria Eagle: My Department does not have (a) pay supplements, (b) bonuses and (c) other incentive packages that are payable on the basis of geographic location.

Below the Senior Civil Service, it has higher pay bands for staff working in London and lower pay bands for staff working elsewhere, with pay band differentials ranging from 6 per cent. for senior staff to 23 per cent. for junior staff.

Independent Schools (Trust Status)

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether payment will be made for school buildings and assets of independent schools that wish to become trust schools; and from what source any such payments would be funded under the arrangements proposed in the Schools White Paper. [37660]

Jacqui Smith: No payment will be made for existing school buildings and assets of independent schools that wish to become trust schools. When an independent school enters the state sector the ownership of the school does not change. A trust is established under Charity Law, or the existing trust is amended, to hold the site and buildings for the purpose of the maintained school for as long as it remains open.

Media Monitoring

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much her Department has spent on media monitoring activities in each of the last eight financial years. [35636]

Maria Eagle: The following table gives spend, by year, for media monitoring activities.

	Amount (£ million)
2000/01	0.2
2001/02	0.1
2002/03	0.2
2003/04	0.2
2004/05	0.2
2005/06 (year to date)	0.2

It would only be possible to provide earlier details of expenditure on media monitoring activities, at disproportionate cost.

New Offences

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what new offences have been created by legislation introduced by her Department since May 2003; and if she will make a statement. [36192]

Jacqui Smith: Three new offences have been created in legislation introduced by this Department since May 2003 and powers for the Secretary of State to create a further three in subordinate legislation have also been passed by Parliament in this period.

Two new offences are found in the Education Act 2005, sections 109 and 111.

Both these offences relate to unauthorised disclosure of information. The Education Act 2005 introduced provisions to allow tax and social security information to be shared for the purpose of deciding on or checking eligibility for education maintenance allowances and free school meals. Provision is then made for unauthorised disclosure of such information to be an offence.

Four new offences are found in the Children Act 2004, sections 45 and 63.

Section 45 of the Children Act 2004 gives the Secretary of State the power to set up through regulations a scheme for the registration of private foster carers and provides that the regulations may make provision which creates a number of offences. Section 45(3) says that regulations may provide that it is an offence for any person to knowingly make a statement which is false or misleading in a material particular in an application for registration as a private foster carer in accordance with the regulations.

Section 45(11) provides that the regulations may make it an offence for a person registered under those regulations without reasonable excuse to contravene or otherwise fail to comply with any requirement imposed on him in the regulations.

Section 45(12) provides that regulations may make it an offence for a person to foster a child privately while disqualified from being registered, unless certain exceptions apply.

No regulations have yet been made under section 45.

Section 63 of the Children Act 2004 enables the Inland Revenue to share tax credit, child benefit or guardian's allowance information (except where it relates to a person's income) with local authorities (or, in Northern Ireland, Health and Social Services Boards) for the purposes of inquiries and investigations relating to the welfare of a child; and makes it an offence for a staff member of an authority to disclose the information unless the disclosure is made: (a) in accordance with an enactment or order of court, (b) with the consent of person to whom the information relates, or (c) in a way that prevents identification of the person to whom the information relates.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what procedures are in place to help nursery workers report confidentially suspected child abuse perpetrated by others working in the same place of work. [37051]

Maria Eagle: Safeguarding and promoting the welfare of children are fundamental duties for maintained nursery schools and private and independent nurseries. Providers are required to comply with local child protection procedures and to have a written statement of the arrangements in place for the protection of children. The statement must state staff responsibilities for child protection and include procedures to be followed in the event of allegations being made against a member of staff or volunteer. The statement should be based on the procedures laid out in the Government booklet "What to do if You're Worried a Child Is Being Abused — Summary". This booklet lays out clearly the circumstances when information about child abuse should be passed on to the relevant authorities in confidence.

Office for Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether a Minister in her Department is planned to be nominated to take responsibility for liaison with the Office for Disability Issues; and if she will make a statement. [37065]

Maria Eagle: Anne McGuire, the Minister for Disabled People, has overall responsibility for the Office for Disability Issues (ODI). The Minister for Disabled People chairs a cross-government steering group which includes ministerial representatives from the Department of Health, Department for Education and Skills, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, Department for Transport, and Department of Trade and Industry. The Minister in this Department nominated to take responsibility for liaison with the ODI is Lord Adonis.

Ofsted Team Inspectors

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many individuals have been removed by Ofsted from the list of team inspectors in each of the last five years; and how many were reinstated. [36409]

Jacqui Smith: This is a matter for Ofsted. HM chief inspector, David Bell wrote to my hon. Friend today, and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Letter from David Bell, dated 19 December 2005:

Your recent parliamentary question has been referred to me, as Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools, for reply.

In sum, you asked how many individuals have been removed by Ofsted from the list of team inspectors in each of the last five years; and how many were reinstated.

In connection with inspections under Section 10 of the School Inspections Act 1996, team inspectors remained in the roll as long as they satisfied the conditions of their involvement: that they were fit and proper, competent and effective, to discharge the functions of the team inspector.

Team inspectors were also required to undertake mandatory training, as required by HMCI. Failure to complete such training resulted in team inspectors no longer being regarded as competent and effective and their removal from the roll. This explains the high 'removal' figures in 2001–02 and 2002–03 (non-completion of the mandatory training in evaluation of educational inclusion) and 2003–04 (non-completion of the mandatory training in the new framework for inspection).

Former team inspectors who were removed from the role for non-completion of the mandatory training were not excluded from re-applying to become a team inspector at a later stage. To do this, re-application through Ofsted's normal recruitment programme for training and assessment in inspection skills applied.

We do not have readily available information on the numbers of inspectors re-instated.

Individuals removed by Ofsted from the list of team inspectors in each of the last five years

Year[1]	Number of primary, secondary and special schools team inspectors removed from the role by Ofsted	Individuals re-instated
2000–01	1,611	n/a
2001–02	3,316	n/a
2002–03	549	n/a
2003–04	1,095	n/a
2004–05	114	[2]1

n/a = No data available.

[1] 2 September to 31 August.

[2] One team inspector was re-instated by Ofsted following a successful appeal to the DfES Appeals Tribunal against HMCI's decision to remove the team inspector from the roll in the year 2003–04.

A copy of this reply has been sent to Jacqui Smith and will be placed in the library of both Houses.

Outdoor Learning

Mary Creagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what assessment she has made of the burden on families of the costs associated with school trips; [37984]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 24 October 2005, Official Report, column 147W, on outdoor learning, when she expects the recommendations of the working group set up to examine exclusion and school trips to be made public. [37997]

Jacqui Smith: On 25 November 2004, the results of 'The Cost of Schooling' survey carried out by BMRB social research on behalf of the Department were published. The survey looked at the costs associated with schooling that parents have to meet, including those related to school trips. A copy of the report is available on the Department's research website.

When published in spring 2006, we expect the Manifesto for Education Outside the Classroom to reflect proposals made by the 10 manifesto working groups, including the group looking at exclusion and school trips.

Performance Indicators

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on progress with the consultation on new English and mathematics performance indicators on secondary school achievement and attainment tables. [36026]

Jacqui Smith: The 14–19 education and skills implementation plan states that we will be publishing a supplement to the 2005 achievement and attainment tables, due to be published in January 2006, showing a range of indicators reflecting achievements in English and mathematics. The supplement will show performance against the key target measure of 5+A*-C including English and mathematics GCSEs and invite views on whether there might be additional English and mathematics indicators published in the achievement and attainment tables to supplement this key measure. Around 450 schools who are helping us pilot other tables developments will be asked for their views at conferences in the new year and a questionnaire seeking views on the indicators including English and mathematics will be available online.

Personal, Social and Health Education

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if she will make personal social and health education a statutory subject in all primary and secondary schools in England; [37810]

(2) which recommendations made in the Personal, Social and Health Education in Schools: Time for Action report compiled by the Government's independent advisory groups on sexual health and teenage pregnancy she plans to implement; [37811]

(3) if she will ensure that sex education is taught as a compulsory subject in all faith-affiliated primary and secondary schools. [37812]

Jacqui Smith: There are no plans to make Personal, Social and Health Education (PSHE) statutory. The Government's focus is on improving the quality of PSHE teaching. Over the last three years we have funded the PSHE certificate, a continuing professional development programme which sets standards for the teaching of PSHE. Over 2,000 teachers have already gained certification and a further 1,800 teachers are undertaking the programme this year. We have also worked with the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority to produce new teaching and learning materials and assessment guidance for PSHE. We have also produced a DVD resource for teachers, "PSHE into Practice", which will support teachers' professional development in PSHE.

The Government normally responds to the annual report of the Independent Advisory Group on Teenage Pregnancy, which comments on and makes recommendations for the further development of the Teenage Pregnancy Strategy. The yet unpublished report 'Personal, Social and Health Education (PSHE) in schools: Time for Action' is a separate, ad-hoc report. When it is published the Government will consider its recommendations, but does not intend to publish a formal response.

All maintained schools, including those with a religious designation, are required to deliver the statutory elements of sex education, as set out in the National Curriculum Science Order, at primary and secondary levels. The DfES further recommends that all maintained schools use the PSHE framework to expand their provision and deliver a planned programme of SRE appropriate to the age, maturity and needs of pupils. This should be developed in consultation with the Governing Body and parents.

Primary Education (Gloucestershire)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent discussions she has had with Gloucestershire local education authority (LEA) on its reorganisation of primary education; and what guidance she is offering the LEA on proposals to close schools, with particular reference to small rural primary schools. [38109]

Jacqui Smith: The Secretary of State has had no recent discussions with Gloucestershire LEA on its reorganisation of primary education. Changes to school provision in an area are essentially matters for local decision. All local authorities have a statutory duty to ensure that there are sufficient places and that high quality education is provided in a cost effective way.

The Secretary of State has provided statutory guidance on the process that must be adhered to when considering any reorganisation of school provision. We recognise the importance of rural schools to their local area which is why we introduced the presumption against their closure in 1998. Although this does not mean that no rural school will ever close, the case for closure needs to be strong and clearly in the best interests of education in the local area.

Primary School Exclusions (South Norfolk)

Mr. Bacon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children were excluded from South Norfolk primary schools for not being ready to learn in each month since January 2001. [38269]

Jacqui Smith: The requested information is not collected centrally.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list those Private Members' Bills introduced under (a) Standing Order No. 14(6), (b) Standing Order No. 23 and (c) Standing Order No. 57 which were (i) supported and (ii) opposed by her Department in each session since 1997–98. [36191]

Maria Eagle: The information requested is not collected.

Public Relations

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the value was of (a) public opinion research and (b) public relations contracts awarded by her Department in (i) each (A) nation and (B) region of the UK and (ii) London in 2004–05. [35933]

Bill Rammell: In 2004–05 the Department for Education and Skills commissioned public opinion research worth £65,521. This research was on education and skills issues and formed part of the British Social Attitudes Survey, covering Scotland, Wales and all English regions (including London).

The Department also carries out a range of research to inform the development and evaluation of specific policies, some of which includes surveys of opinion. The Department publishes its research on the last Thursday of each month and research reports are available at www.dfes.gov.uk/research. The Departmen also awarded public relations contracts worth £695,324. The contracts covered campaigns to promote higher education (the "Aimhigher" campaign) and Foundation Degrees, as well as campaigns to tackle bullying and teenage pregnancy. These campaigns covered England (including London).

Qualifications

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of working age people in (a) Kettering constituency and (b) England hold a qualification at (i) degree level or equivalent and (ii) above degree level. [38096]

Bill Rammell: The following table shows analysis of the qualification levels of the working age population in Kettering constituency and England at degree level (level 4) and above degree level (level 5). This is presented alongside East Midlands data for comparison. Data comes from the Local Labour Force Survey for 2004–05.

Table 1: Proportion of the working age population holding a level 4/ level 5 qualification, as their highest qualification held

	Level 4	Level 5
Kettering	16.0	4.0
East Midlands	19.3	4.2
England	20.8	5.3

Note:
The working age population is defined as males and females aged 16–64 and 16–59 respectively.

Rates

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was paid by her Department in rates to each local authority in 2004–05; and how much was paid in (a) each region and (b) London in each year. [35986]

Bill Rammell: The following table lists how much was paid by the Department for Education and Skills in rates to each local authority in the UK in 2004–05; and paid in (a) each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK and (b) London.

Religious Services

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the statutory requirements are for schools to hold a daily religious service; and whether she plans to seek to amend the provisions. [38152]

Jacqui Smith: The current policy regarding collective worship is set out in the Department for Education and Skills circular 1/94. All registered pupils attending a maintained school, primary or secondary, should take part in a daily act of collective worship. This act of collective worship should be wholly or mainly of a broadly Christian character.

School Admissions

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many hon. Members responded to the consultation on revisions to the school admissions code of practice; and whether their views were incorporated into the summary of consultation responses published on 13 December. [38711]

Jacqui Smith: Two MPs, including my hon. Friend, responded to the consultation on the draft School Admissions Code of Practice and their views were taken into account. Their responses were included in the summary of responses.

School Choice

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of whether school choice requires over-provision of school places. [37783]

Jacqui Smith: Local authorities are responsible for planning school places in their areas. They have a duty to ensure that there are sufficient places to meet the needs of the local community and must also ensure that high quality education is provided in a cost-effective way. We expect authorities to take parental preferences into account in the planning process and, in providing for parental choice, we recognise that they will need to maintain some surplus places. The Audit Commission acknowledged this in their update to Trading Places published in January 2002.

School Governors

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many vacancies there were for (a) parent governors and (b) school governors in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [37661]

Jacqui Smith: Data on the number of governor vacancies are not routinely collected by the Department. However, individual local authorities may collect and hold their own information on the number of governor vacancies.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment her Department has made of the causes of variations (a) between regions and (b) within regions in vacancies for school governors. [38222]

Jacqui Smith: Data on the number of governor vacancies are not routinely collected by the Department. However, individual local authorities may collect and hold their own information on the number of governor vacancies. No assessment has been made of the causes of the regional variation and variations between areas in vacancies for school governors.

School Meals

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether school meals in each local education authority are (a) produced in-house, (b) outsourced and (c) outsourced but being brought back in-house; and, in respect of those being brought back in-house, by what date she expects this to be done. [37892]

Jacqui Smith: The Department for Education and Skills has not until now collected information about school meals arrangements in local authorities. We have however recently undertaken an audit of local school meals arrangements and my officials are currently analysing the data we have received from the 102 authorities that responded. The results of the survey will be available in January and will provide us with a fuller picture of school meals provision in those authorities, including which school dinners are produced in-house and which are outsourced. We will not however have information on which school dinners are outsourced but being brought back in-house, nor when this will happen, as this information was not collected in the survey.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the schools in the Stroud constituency which (a) have and (b) do not have their own kitchens, broken down by type of school. [37893]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 15 December 2005]: The school premises data that my Department receives from authorities identify numbers of kitchen/dining spaces in each school that are considered by authorities and schools to be lacking or unsuitable, but kitchens are not separately identified.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the schools in Kettering constituency which (a) have and (b) do not have their own kitchens, broken down by type of school; and how many pupils attend each school. [38149]

Jacqui Smith: The school premises data that my Department receives from authorities identify numbers of kitchen/dining spaces in each school that are considered by authorities and schools to be lacking or unsuitable, but kitchens are not separately identified.

School Science

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps are being taken to encourage more pupils to study (a) physics, (b) chemistry and (c) mathematics at A level. [37021]

Jacqui Smith: The Government's recent 14-19 Education and Skills White Paper reaffirms our commitment, as outlined in the 10-year Science and Innovation Investment Framework and our response to Professor Smith's inquiry into post-14 mathematics education, to encourage more young people to study physics, chemistry and mathematics at A level. We are taking this forward by improving teaching and learning across all school phases by:

introducing a newly structured A level, for first teaching from September 2004, making AS/A level mathematics more flexible and manageable; introducing a new programme of study for science at key stage 4, leading to new GCSEs. The new programme maintains the breadth, depth and challenge of the current curriculum, while catering for a wide range of young people's interests and aptitudes which will ensure that the science taught in schools inspires young people to pursue further study; developing a new two tier mathematics GCSE so that all young people have the opportunity to achieve a grade C; asking QCA to develop and test a new curriculum and assessment model for mathematics from entry level to level 3 which will incorporate changes resulting from work that QCA has been doing in response to recommendations in the Smith report; renewing and updating the Primary National Strategy framework for the teaching of mathematics, to ensure that it supports schools and settings to raise attainment still further;

reviewing science and mathematics at key stage 3, especially in relation to the new science programme at key stage 4 and the review of the Primary National Strategy; providing innovative and exciting continuing professional development for teachers and technicians through the national network of science learning centres; establishing a National Centre for Excellence in the teaching of mathematics, that will develop a continuing professional development framework for mathematics teachers and quality assure mathematics continuing professional development programmes;

introducing, from September 2004, a framework for the teaching and learning of mathematics in post-16 education;

agreeing to the expansion of the Mathematics in Education and Industry project with a view to establishing a network of centres to improve take-up and teaching of GCE further mathematics; improving teacher recruitment in science and mathematics by increasing the value of the teacher training bursaries for science and mathematics graduates and 'golden hellos' for new science and mathematics teachers; piloting courses designed to enhance subject knowledge of those who wish to do initial teacher training in physics, chemistry or mathematics but who do not have the necessary subject knowledge.

School Sports

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to encourage children to participate in sport in schools; and if she will make a statement. [38231]

Jacqui Smith: The Department for Education and Skills and the Department for Culture, Media and Sport are jointly implementing the national school sport strategy in England. In the five years to 2008 over £1.5 billion is being invested (including £686 million lottery funding) to implement the strategy. Spearheading action is the creation of a national network of sports colleges and school sport partnerships across England. To date, 80 per cent. of schools in England are already part of one of the 411 live partnerships and all schools will be within one by 2006.

The strategy is delivering an ambitious public service agreement target to increase the percentage of 5 to 16-year-olds who spend a minimum of two hours a week on high quality PE and school sport within and beyond the curriculum to 75 per cent. by 2006 and then 85 per cent. by 2008. The long-term ambition, by 2010, is to offer all children at least four hours of sport every week.

Good progress is being made and we are on track to deliver the target. The 2004/05 school sport survey results found that overall, 69 per cent. of pupils in the 11,498 schools involved, were participating in at least two hours of high quality PE and school sport a week. In 2003/04 this figure was 62 per cent.

Of course my hon. Friend would know that the issue of PE and sport in schools in Wales is a devolved matter.

Schools (Energy Provision)

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools are fitted with (a) solar panels, (b) photovoltaic roof tiles, (c) micro combined heat and power and (d) micro generation technologies. [35804]

Jacqui Smith: My Department does not hold data on numbers of schools with solar panels, photovoltaic roof tiles, micro combined heat and power, or micro-generation technologies. 184 schools have been helped from the microgeneration funding programmes administered by the Department of Trade and Industry. In supporting the expansion of the microgeneration sector, the Government place particular emphasis on renewable energy technology in school buildings.

Schools (Gravesham)

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding is planned to be made available to schools in Gravesham for anti-bullying campaigns. [37838]

Jacqui Smith: Funding for anti-bullying campaigns is not made available on either a local authority or school by school basis. Rather it is a matter for local authorities to decide how they distribute funds to schools through their locally agreed formulae.

Support for anti-bullying work is embedded in the behaviour and attendance strands of the National Strategies which have at least one consultant in place in each local authority. In addition support is also provided through DfES funded Anti-Bullying Alliance coordinators in each Government Office region.

At a national level the Department has funded a number of initiatives to tackle bullying. Since 1997 this has included events to disseminate good practice, plus development of guidance and resources for schools. We have supported an award scheme to share and celebrate the excellent work of schools and young people. We have funded the voluntary sector to embed effective practice and offer training and support to schools, young people and their parents. We have run public information campaigns encouraging children to 'tell someone' and to support their friends as well as recently launching two new DVD resources during this year's Anti-Bullying Week.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of whether the funding increase for schools in Gravesham will ensure that all the schools will be able to fulfil the planning, preparation and assessment initiative. [37839]

Jacqui Smith: We estimate that the full year costs of implementing the final phase of workforce reform from September 2005, including guaranteed time for planning, preparation and assessment for all teachers, will create an average pressure of 0.7 per cent. on the budgets of nursery and primary schools for 2006–07, on top of the 1 per cent. we allowed for in 2005–06. We have added that to our estimate of the universal, average cost pressures on schools in 2006–07 to give nursery and primary schools a guaranteed minimum increase in their core budgets of 4 per cent. per pupil next year. And we have earmarked £70 million within the Dedicated Schools Grant (DSG) to enable local authorities to meet the cost of the higher guarantee for nursery and primary schools. This funding will be consolidated into the DSG baseline for 2007–08.

Schools (Parental Involvement)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what evidence her Department has evaluated on whether parents wish to play a more active role in (a) establishing new schools and (b) attending parents' councils. [37848]

Jacqui Smith: We have received several inquiries from parents interested in setting up new maintained schools. Four parent groups have published proposals to establish new schools of which two have been successful.

A survey of parental involvement published last year showed that 72 per cent. of parents say they want to be more involved in their child's education but only 48 per cent. feel that the school makes it easy to get involved. The current vacancy rate for parent governors is around 10 per cent.—parents want to be more involved, but do not come forward to volunteer as parent governors.

Parent councils will be more accessible: they will be less formal, a lesser commitment and parents will be able to focus discussion on areas they are interested in. We funded a small-scale pilot project to look at experience and develop some good practice—the evaluation showed that the parent councils engaged parents who would not have had the confidence to raise concerns on their own or to be parent governors, that parents had views and ideas to share, and that schools and parents were keen to continue and embed the project.

Schools White Paper

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what duties (a) community schools, (b) trust schools, (c) special schools, (d) city academies, (e) pupil referral units, (f) federated schools and (g) foundation schools will have to admit (i) pupils with special needs with statements, (ii) pupils with special needs without statements and (iii) looked-after children under the proposals in the School White Paper. [37664]

Jacqui Smith: We have no plans in the White Paper to change schools' statutory duties in respect of the admission of mainstream or statemented pupils.

For mainstream admissions, all maintained schools (including federated and trust schools) are required to comply with existing admissions legislation and have regard to the School Admissions Code of Practice.

For statemented pupils, admission to maintained schools is through the school being 'named' on the child's statement. Schools will remain under a statutory duty to admit children with statements which name their school. Local authorities can also arrange admission to pupil referral units and non-maintained special and independent schools through the statement.

Academies are required by their funding agreements to consent to being named in a child's statement. They are also required to comply with mainstream admissions law and to have regard to the School Admissions Code of Practice.

We have also recently amended legislation to ensure that priority is given to the admission of looked after children to all maintained schools as one of the most vulnerable groups in the community. Regulations will come into force in the new year.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether (a) pupil referral units and (b) special schools will be able to apply for trust status under the proposals in the Schools White Paper. [37665]

Jacqui Smith: The White Paper does not propose arrangements to allow pupil referral units to become eligible to apply for trust status.

For special schools, the White Paper acknowledges that trust status for special schools raises a number of complex issues. We will continue to work with schools and other partners to decide the best way forward.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether (a) trust schools that were previously independent and (b) other trust schools will be permitted to become independent under the arrangements proposed in the Schools White Paper. [37669]

Jacqui Smith: The White Paper proposes no arrangements that will enable maintained schools to move from the maintained sector to the independent sector. Trust schools will be maintained schools, and as such will be subject to the same rules as other maintained schools. The 'independence' the White Paper proposals envisage relates to greater freedom of operation within the maintained sector.

Science Teaching

Mary Creagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers have attended (a) the regional science learning centres and (b) the National Science Learning Centre since they opened. [37999]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not collected by DfES. One of our key performance indicators is the number of teacher training days delivered by the centres. Figures for 2005 will be available in January 2006.

Secondary School Places

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of demand for secondary school places in the next 10 years. [37663]

Jacqui Smith: The number of 11 to 15-year-olds in all schools in England is projected to fall from 3,255,000 in 2005 to 2,908,000 in 2015. Excluding independent schools and non-maintained special schools, the number of pupils aged 11 to 15 is projected to fall from 3,020,000 in 2005 to 2,702,000 in 2015.

The Learning and Skills Council will fund an additional 50,000 school, college and work based learning places for 16 to 19-year-olds by 2008. Beyond 2008 numbers are expected to remain broadly constant as participation increases towards our aim of 90 per cent. of 17-year-olds by 2015 but the overall 16 to 19-year-old population falls. The exact number of places in secondary schools will depend on the choice of institution made by young people.

Secondments

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many seconded staff were transferred into her Department in each of the last three financial years; in which part of the Department they were employed; on which projects they worked; what the cost to the Department was of employing them; and from which budget the funding came. [37368]

Maria Eagle: Statistics for seconded staff in each of the last three financial years are detailed in the following table:

Financial year	Number of inward secondees
2002/03	73
2003/04	85
2004/05	94

Seconded staff are deployed across all directorates within the Department to meet business needs.

Information on the projects that seconded staff have worked are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Costs are borne from both running and programme budgets.

Sector Skills Bodies

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 8 November 2005, Official Report, column 452W, on the Learning and Skills Council, what proportion of the £40 million savings announced in the Learning and Skills Council press release of 16 September will be redirected to learners in (a) 2005–06, (b) 2006–07 and (c) 2007–08. [36394]

Bill Rammell: The LSC is currently consulting on the detail of it's restructuring exercise which will result in savings in administration costs. I expect that these savings will start to become available from 2007–08. Once the consultation is completed my Department and the LSC will agree where these savings should be directed to meet our priorities and a full profile for the release of savings.

Sixth Forms

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children under 16 years of age entered sixth form in the last year for which figures are available. [35598]

Jacqui Smith: In January 2005 there were approximately 780 pupils aged under 16 in school sixth forms[1], that is in National Curriculum Year Group 12,13 or 14; the corresponding figure for January 2004 was 830.

Young people under 16 years of age might also be enrolled elsewhere in the Further Education (FE) sector. It is not possible to state which are enrolled in school sixth forms, recorded on the Pupil Level Annual School Census (PLASC), and which are also enrolled in other FE recorded separately on the Individual Learner Record (ILR). It is likely that the vast majority of learners aged under 16 recorded on the ILR attend colleges in addition to school rather than instead of school.

The ILR for 2003/04 shows 76,200 academic age 14 or 15-year-olds in FE, of which 60,200 enrolled with General Colleges of Further Education (GFEC); 3,000 in Special Colleges for Agriculture and Horticulture; and 1,500 in Sixth Form Colleges (SFC).

[1] Schools are defined as having a sixth form if there is one or more pupils in National Curriculum Year Groups 12, 13 or 14

Surplus School Places

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether her Department has plans to fund surplus school places under the proposals in the Schools White Paper. [38244]

Jacqui Smith: Local authorities are responsible for planning school places in their area. They have a duty to ensure that there are sufficient places to meet the needs of the local community and must also ensure that high quality education is provided in a cost-effective way.

Where schools expand or new schools are created to meet parental demand we expect local authorities to act decisively to remove surplus places in schools which are not popular with parents and to ensure educational resources are used in the most efficient way possible. This year, we are allocating over £5.5 billion of capital funding to schools and authorities. This funding can support local school reorganisation, including those directed to the removal of surplus places.

Building Schools for the Future aims to renew all secondary schools over 15 waves of investment starting from this year. When authorities are prioritised in this programme, they must develop a strong strategic vision for the delivery of secondary education in their area. Additional funding for primary schools has been announced from 2008–09. Further details of this programme will be announced next year.

Trust Schools

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in what way the financial arrangements for a trust school will differ from those in place for foundation schools. [38062]

Jacqui Smith: Trust schools will be funded on exactly the same basis as other maintained schools, including foundation schools. They will receive multi-year revenue budgets from their local authority under the new school funding arrangements we are introducing from April 2006. They will receive direct capital funding on the national formula and have access to the substantial funding allocated to their authority and through the Building Schools for the Future programme.

Trust schools will also be subject to the same financial controls, including audit arrangements, as apply currently to maintained schools, through each local authority's statutory Scheme for Financing Schools.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the legal duties and responsibilities of governors of trust schools will be under the proposals in the Schools White Paper. [37662]

Jacqui Smith: Under the proposals contained in the "Higher Standards, Better Schools For All" White Paper, the duties and responsibilities of governing bodies of trust schools will be the same as those of the governing bodies of foundation schools.

The governing body of trust schools will, as do all governing bodies of maintained schools, have a legal duty to conduct the school with a view to promoting high standards of educational achievement. Their responsibilities include setting the strategic direction, objectives, targets and policies for the school, approving the school budget and reviewing progress against the budget, plans and targets, acting as a critical friend to the head teacher by providing support and challenge and appointing the head teacher. Governing bodies in trust schools will also employ their staff and be their own admissions authority, this is the same as in voluntary aided and foundation schools.

University Entrants

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of pupils from (a) the Forest of Dean constituency and (b) Gloucestershire went on to university in each of the last five years. [36246]

Bill Rammell: The latest available figures on participation by constituency and region were published by the Higher Education Funding Council for England in January in "Young Participation in England", which is available from their website at: http://www.hefce.ac.uk/pubs/hefce/2005/05_03/. This shows participation rates for constituencies and region for the years 1997 to 2000, and these are shown in the table.

The Department uses the Higher Education Initial Participation Rate (HEIPR) to assess progress on increasing first-time participation of English students aged 18–30 in higher education towards 50 per cent.: the latest provisional figure for 2003/04 is 43 per cent. The HEIPR is not calculated at constituency level.

Volunteering

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to promote the involvement of young people in volunteering. [38144]

Maria Eagle: The Youth Green Paper "Youth Matters" sets out a number of broad areas of activity designed to encourage young people to volunteer and contribute to their community. It aims to test out more varied approaches to volunteering, in line with the Russell Commission's recommendations.

This includes, for example, expanding peer mentoring. The Chancellor has recently announced in his pre-Budget report a new investment aimed at introducing and evaluating more structured and formalised approaches to peer mentoring in schools. We will also be promoting more active citizenship approaches in schools, further and higher education and more volunteering in public services. We are building on the experience of Millennium Volunteers and the Young Volunteer Challenge to develop more flexible approaches to volunteering and to expand longer term volunteering opportunities.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Weir: To ask the Leader of the House how much was spent on external consultants and advisers by his Office in each year since May 1997. [39098]

Mr. Hoon: The information is as follows:

Consultants:
The Office of the Leader of the House of Commons employed one consultant on IT issues during August 2005 at a cost of £3,760.

Advisers:
The Office of the Leader of the House of Commons has not employed any external advisers since May 1997.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Leader of the House how much was spent on advertising by his Office in each year since May 1997. [39100]

Mr. Hoon: None. The Office of the Leader of the House of Commons does not spend any money on advertising.

PR Companies

Mr. Weir: To ask the Leader of the House if he will list the public relations companies that have had contracts with his Office since May 1997. [39099]

Mr. Hoon: The Office of the Leader of the House of Commons has not had any contracts with public relations companies.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Barristers

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will list the 10 barristers instructed to advise and represent in court his and other Departments through the Department who received the highest sums in the last financial year; how much each received in each case; and if he will make a statement. [23497]

The Solicitor-General: The Attorney-General is responsible for appointment and operation of the civil panel of Junior Counsel and First Treasury Junior Counsel. Government Departments instruct barristers on the Panel Departments may instruct Panel Counsel to provide advice outside the sphere of litigation. There is no central record of this and disproportionate cost would be incurred in collating this information from all Departments.

The 10 barristers instructed by the Inland Revenue, the then HMC&E DEFRA, DWP/DH and Treasury Solicitor who were paid the highest sums in the financial year ending 31 March 2005 to conduct civil litigation on behalf of the Crown and the amounts paid are:

Counsel	Amount paid in last financial year including VAT (£)
Philip Sales	619,633.76
David Ewart	347,578.46
Jonathan Crow	287,883.78
Julie Anderson	242,518.46
Nicholas Moss	226,758.28
Jennifer Richards	199,459.75
Leigh-Ann Mulcahy	185,270.28
Lisa Giovannetti	184,739.87
David Barr	182,048.38
Robin Tam	163,819.71

A number of qualifications need to be added to these figures:

The amount paid to barristers in one financial year is not necessarily reflective of the work carried out during that year. Payment may take place during or sometime after the work and different Departments have different payment practices.

The figures must be interpreted carefully and do not represent the personal earnings of the barristers listed—figures are inclusive of VAT and disbursements incurred. After VAT has been deducted, banisters will typically pay 25–30 per cent. of fees in professional expenses, Additionally, barristers face the same expenses as any other self-employed person, including income tax and national insurance contributions.

The Crown pays barristers at a fixed hourly rate for work payable, for example, only when hearings take place, and does not use a brief fee system.

Not all payments could be verified with the individuals concerned. Cases in dispute, where records of payments held by the Departments differ to those held by the practitioners, have been included. Where possible, amounts have been verified by practitioners and adjusted where necessary.

The Crown, under the Panel Counsel system, has access to some of the very best advocates, who are appointed on merit following fair and open competition and represent excellent value for money.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General who the director of (a) the Crown Prosecution Service, (b) the Crown Prosecution Service in Southend and (c) the Essex Crown Prosecution Service is; what relevant specialist qualifications each holds; and what the career of each has been to date. [37761]

The Solicitor-General: Ken Macdonald QC is the Head of the Crown Prosecution Service and the Director of Public Prosecutions. He is a barrister and was called to the Bar in 1978. He was appointed Queen's Counsel in 1997. He joined the CPS on 1 November 2003.

The District Crown Prosecutor for the South East Prosecution Team in Southend is Diane Stenning. She joined the CPS as a Legal Trainee in 1991 and was admitted as a solicitor in 1993. She transferred to CPS Essex in 1998.

The post of Chief Crown Prosecutor for CPS Essex is currently vacant. From 1999 until September 2005 this post was held by John Bell. He was admitted as a solicitor in 1974 and until the formation of the CPS in 1986 was employed by the Durham Police Authority. The post is currently being held on a temporary basis by Paula Abrahams. She was called to the Bar in 1987 and joined the CPS in the same year as a newly qualified lawyer.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General what action he takes to prevent the bringing of inappropriate (a) higher and (b) lesser charges by the Crown Prosecution Service. [38033]

The Solicitor-General: Crown prosecutors must apply the Code for Crown Prosecutors and the Director of Public Prosecution's Guidance on Charging to determine if a case proceeds and, if so, on what charge.

Statutory Charging was brought in by the Criminal Justice Act 2003. As a result, dedicated experienced prosecutors now work with the police on cases from start to finish. They advise the police on lines of inquiry and advise on the evidence that should be gathered. In all but minor cases, the prosecutor decides the charge and will review the case continually. Fewer charges will be amended, and fewer charges will be dropped.

Statutory Charging arrangements are being implemented in phases across the 42 Criminal Justice Areas by a joint national CPS/ACPO team. To date, 28 areas operate Statutory Charging. The remaining 14 areas are operating Shadow Charging schemes (whereby charging is operated on a non-mandatory basis, mirroring as closely as possible Statutory Charging arrangements between 9 am and 5 pm Monday to Friday). These remaining areas are scheduled to move to Statutory Charging by April 2006.

Public Interest

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Solicitor-General what criteria are used to determine matters of public interest in criminal cases. [38704]

The Solicitor-General: Normally, in any case where there is sufficient evidence to afford a reasonable prospect of conviction the public interest would require prosecution. However, in each case the prosecutor will weigh the considerations in favour of prosecution against those that considerations against prosecution. The Code for Prosecutors published by the Public Prosecution Service, and which is available on their website at www.ppsni.gov.uk and copies of which are kept in the Library, set out examples of what those considerations may be. The list is not exhaustive.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Solicitor-General how many cases since 1997 have been discontinued in Northern Ireland on the basis of the public interest; and what the charges were in each case. [38725]

The Solicitor-General: This information was not kept by the Department of the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland and could be compiled only at disproportionate cost by the individual examination of all files discontinued since 1997. This information has started to be kept by the Public Prosecution Service. The only figures currently available are for the areas of Fermanagh and Tyrone and for Greater Belfast and are for the period 1 April to 30 September 2005. Prosecution decisions in respect of 7,327 individuals were taken over that period. Of that number 1,510 resulted in decisions of no prosecution and, of that number, 164 (10.9 per cent.) were made on grounds of public interest. This represents 2.2 per cent. of the total number of individuals dealt with.

Details of each case could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Solicitor-General how many cases have been discontinued on grounds of the public interest in England and Wales in each year since 1997; and what the charges were in each case. [38727]

The Solicitor-General: Figures on the reasons for discontinuance, including the number dropped on the grounds of the public interest, are available only with effect from April 2004. The following table shows this information for 2004–05, and for 2005–06 up until 15 December 2005.

The Crown Prosecution Service does not hold records of the outcome of each individual charge. However, a record is maintained of the principal offence with which each defendant was charged, divided into 12 categories. The table also shows discontinuances on public interest grounds in each of these 12 groupings.

The table both shows the volume of these outcomes, and expresses them as a proportion of all completed cases during the two years.

Spy Ring (Stormont)

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Solicitor-General if the Government of the Irish Republic was (a) consulted and (b) informed of the decision to withdraw the prosecution of those charged with running a spy ring at Stormont in 2002. [38709]

The Solicitor-General: There was no consultation with the Irish Government in respect of the decision to end this prosecution. They were informed the day of the hearing at which the charges were withdrawn.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Solicitor-General on how many occasions (a) the Director of Public Prosecutions and (b) the Senior Crown Counsel discussed with the Attorney-General the prosecution of the case against those charged with running a spy ring at Stormont in 2002. [38710]

The Solicitor-General: In the exercise of his statutory duty of superintendence, the Attorney-General is kept informed by the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland of significant cases through correspondence, meetings and by telephone, both direct and through officials. Information on the exact number of times this case was raised is not available.

The Attorney-General did not discuss this matter directly with the Senior Counsel instructed to prosecute this case although he had sight of counsel's advice as part of the papers provided to him by the Director.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Appeals Service

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the national targets are for the Appeals Service; and what the performance of relevant offices in South Devon has been against those targets. [34032]

Mrs. McGuire: This is a matter for Christina Townsend, Chief Executive of the Appeals Service. She will reply to the hon. Member.

Letter from Christina Townsend, dated 19 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question what the national targets are for the Appeals Service; and what the performance of relevant offices in South Devon has been against those targets.

The information you have asked for is not available in the format requested, as the Appeals Service does not have specific appeals processing offices in the South Devon area but instead have eight Regional processing centres across the country. Our Cardiff office, which handle appeals for the whole Wales and South West Region, administers appeals for the South Devon area.

Each year, the Secretary of State sets targets for the overall performance of the Appeals Service. These targets are shown in the table below together specifically with our Cardiff office's performance against those targets for 2004–05.

Appeals Service Secretary of State target for 2004–05	Cardiff Appeals Processing Office performance
The number of cases over 24 weeks old as at 1 April 2004 will be reduced by at least 15 per cent. by 31 March 2005	A 25 per cent. reduction in older cases was achieved
For cases returned by the Commissioner, the average waiting time for an appeal to be re-heard will be no more than 8 weeks from the date of return to the Appeals Service[1]	6.5 weeks
The average waiting time for an appeal to be heard will be no more than 11 weeks from the time of receipt by the Appeals Service[2]	11.3 weeks

[1] Excludes cases requiring further evidence.
[2] Excludes stayed cases awaiting decision in lead cases in a higher court (the effective date will commence from withdrawal of stay being notified).

I hope this reply is helpful.

Asbestos

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the terms of reference were for the research carried out by the Health and Safety Executive in relation to the risks of exposure to asbestos when removing textured coatings; and if he will make a statement. [34767]

Mrs. McGuire: The aim of study HSL/2005/32 "An investigation into the airborne fibre releases during the removal of textured coatings from domestic premises", commissioned by the Health and Safety Executive from the Health and Safety Laboratory, was to measure the airborne fibre and asbestos concentrations released during the removal and repair of damaged chrysotile containing textured coatings, at some 40 sites.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will ask the Health and Safety Executive to carry out further tests on the proposed new methods of work when undertaking the removal of textured coatings to assess the risk of exposure to asbestos before taking a decision on whether to remove textured coatings from the list that only licensed contractors are able to remove. [34768]

Mrs. McGuire: HSE has commissioned new research from the Health and Safety Laboratory (HSL) on the exposure levels arising from work to remove textured coatings containing asbestos that is carried out in line with the methods and control measures set out in the Health and Safety Commission's (HSC's) draft Approved Code of Practice. The results will be taken into account as part of the HSC's consultation process and consideration of the revised asbestos regulations.

Benefits

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what percentage of people aged over 60 years are receiving housing benefit and/or council tax benefit (a) with pension credit and (b) without pension credit. [37435]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available in the format requested.

The available information is in the following tables.

Housing benefit (HB) and council tax benefit (CTB) recipients aged 60 and over and pension credit (PC) recipients: May 2005

	HB		CTB		PC
	Caseload	Percentage population	Caseload	Percentage population	Caseload	Percentage population
Great Britain	1,518,100	12.4	2,444,500	19.9	2,680,200	21.8

Housing benefit (HB) and council tax benefit (CTB) recipients aged 60 and over also in receipt of pension credit (PC): May 2005

	HB[1] and PC		CTB[1] and PC
	Caseload	Percentage population	Caseload	Percentage population
Great Britain	1,237,500	10.1	1,972,100	16.1

[1] Figures may include a small number of men aged 60 to 64 in receipt of income-based jobseekers allowance.

Notes:
1. The data refers to benefit units, which may be a single person or a couple.
2. Caseloads have been rounded to the nearest hundred and percentages have been given to one decimal place.
3. For HB/CTB, figures for any non-responding authorities have been estimated.
4. Housing benefit figures exclude any extended payment cases.
5. Council tax benefit totals exclude any second adult rebate cases.
6. Pension credit replaced MIG on 6 October 2003 and extended IS entitlement to customers aged 60 plus.
7. Countries are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant ONS postcode directory.
8. Population percentages have been calculated using 2004 ONS mid-year population estimates.
9. 'Aged 60 and over' is defined as benefit units where the claimant and/or partner are aged 60 and over. Therefore figures will contain some claimants aged under 60 where there is a partner aged over 60 years.
10. Percentages of the population are based on the population aged 60 plus.

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what indicators will be used to assess progress towards his Department's aims to simplify the benefits system. [38572]

Mr. Timms: In its recent report on complexity in the benefits system, the National Audit Office acknowledged that the Department has taken a number of steps to tackle complexity. We are setting up a dedicated benefit simplification team which will seek to build on these steps. It will also investigate whether it is possible to produce a reliable set of indicators to measure progress.

British Muslims

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what arrangements are in place to monitor the work of organisations in receipt of public money whose programmes are designed to increase the ability of British Muslims to enter the labour market; [37926]

(2) how many organisations in receipt of public money whose work involves promoting the participation in the labour market of British Muslims (a) do not publish an annual report, (b) had their accounts queried by auditors and (c) did not submit their accounts on time in each of the last 10 years. [37931]

Margaret Hodge: We have an ethnic minority employment strategy in place to help people from ethnic minority groups improve their access to the labour market; this includes Muslims, three quarters of whom come from Asian backgrounds, and people from other faith communities. The high level strategy is monitored through our public service agreement (PSA) target and by the Ethnic Minority Employment Task Force.

Contracts let by Jobcentre Plus are subject to formal contract management processes involving provider self-assessment and quarterly Jobcentre Plus reviews. The Adult Learning Inspectorate (ALI), responsible for all post-19 learning provision in England, operates a four-year inspection cycle; each Jobcentre Plus provider is inspected once within the cycle and graded on a four-point scale. All ALI reports are published. The Scottish Inspectorate and ESTYN perform similar functions in Scotland and Wales.

DWP sponsors three Invest to Save Budget (ISB) Ethnic Minority Employment pilots, run by Voluntary and Community Sector organisations. ISB funding comes from HM Treasury; before they agree to part-fund bids, the Home Office takes up references and ensures that the lead organisation meets standard financial requirements. The pilots are then monitored by HM Treasury and DWP through six-monthly reports.

Buncefield Oil Depot

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library a copy of the Health and Safety Executive reports relating to the improvement notice, and subsequent compliance, served against British Pipeline Agency Ltd. at the Buncefield Terminal. [38330]

Mrs. McGuire: Yes, copies of the relevant extracts of documents will be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Details of the improvement notice in question are already available on HSE's website.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library a copy of the Health and Safety Executive guidance relating to safety and security in fuel depots. [38331]

Mrs. McGuire: Copies of the written relevant guidance document are already publicly available, but I will place a copy in the Library.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidance the Government have given to emergency planning authorities with regard to safety and security in and near fuel depots. [38332]

Mrs. McGuire: Sites which store or use large quantities of flammable substances such as fuels are subject to the Control of Major Accident Hazards Regulations 1999 (COMAH).

Guidance on emergency planning for sites subject to the COMAH Regulations (Emergency Planning for Major Accidents, HSG191) has been issued by the Health and Safety Executive in its role as joint Competent Authority. More general guidance on the COMAH regulations, which includes further advice on emergency planning, has also been published by HSE (A Guide to the Control of Major Accident Hazards regulations 1999, L111). The Cabinet Office has also prepared guidance on dealing with major emergencies (Dealing With Disaster, ISBN 185 893 9208).

Burslem Job Centre

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what discussions he has had on the future use of the Burslem Job Centre; [37716]

(2) what assessment he has made of the (a) cost and (b) ease of access for people using the Burslem Job Centre of using other centres; and if he will make a statement. [37733]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 19 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions concerning what discussions he has had on the future use of the Burslem Job Centre; and what assessment he has made of the (a) cost and (b) ease of access for people using the Burslem Job Centre of using other centres. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Once Burslem Jobcentre has closed, full responsibility for the property rests with the owners Land Securities Trillium.

Prior to the decision to close Burslem Jobcentre, a full feasibility study was conducted which mapped customers by postcode against existing public transport routes. Burslem and the surrounding area are well served by public transport. The longest journey time for current Burslem Jobcentre customers to one of the other surrounding Jobcentre Plus offices is 20 minutes, costing £2 return.

I hope this is helpful.

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many staff are based at Burslem Job Centre; and what plans there are to transfer them; [37717]

(2) how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time workers are employed at Burslem Job Centre. [37720]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 19 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions asking how many staff are based at Burslem Job Centre and what plans there are to transfer them; and how many (a) full and (b) part time workers are employed at Burslem Job Centre. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

There are currently twenty-three staff based at Burslem Jobcentre. These staff will be redeployed to other Jobcentre Plus sites, by means of preference exercises. A preference exercise allows an individual to select a location that is most suitable to them to travel to or a job role they are particularly interested in. Staff are also able to apply for vacancies in other offices in the Department for Work and Pensions as they become available.

Of the twenty-three staff currently based at Burslem Jobcentre, twenty are full time workers and three are part time.

I hope this is helpful.

Carers Allowance

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he takes to ascertain whether persons claiming carers' allowance (a) as live-in carers are carers or cohabitees and (b) are capable of and competent to act as carers, and are acting as such. [38059]

Mrs. McGuire: The administration of carer's allowance is a matter for the chief executive of the Disability and Carers Service, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Terry Moran, dated 19 December 2005:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what steps he takes to ascertain whether persons claiming carers allowance (a) as live-in carers are carers or cohabitees and (b) are capable of and competent to act as carers and are acting as such.

The Minister for Disabled People, Anne McGuire MP, promised you a substantive reply from the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service.

To be entitled to Carer's Allowance (CA) a customer must be "regularly and substantially" caring for a severely disabled person for at least 35 hours a week. All customers who claim CA are required to sign a statement confirming that they do that.

The conditions of entitlement for CA do not specify that the carer must live with the disabled person therefore no checks are carried out on this when claims for CA are received.

From 5th December 2005, CA claim packs contain a statement that allows the disabled person, or someone acting on their behalf, to acknowledge that someone is claiming CA for caring for them, to confirm whether 35 hours caring is taking place, to acknowledge that their benefits may be affected by the CA claim, and to understand that their Disability Living Allowance and Attendance Allowance records will be checked in order to process the CA claim.

The disabled person, or someone acting on their behalf, must sign the statement before the claim to CA is processed.

I hope this is helpful.

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in the Leeds West constituency have been in receipt of the carer's allowance in each year since it was introduced. [35124]

Mrs. McGuire: The administration of carer's allowance is a matter for the chief executive of the Disability and Carers Service, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Child Poverty

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the impact of housing costs on child poverty; and if he will make a statement. [24226]

Margaret Hodge: Specific information regarding low income for Great Britain is available in "Households Below Average Income 1994/95–2003/04". The threshold of below 60 per cent. contemporary median income is the most commonly used in reporting trends in low income. Figures are provided for children based on distributions sourced from the Family Resources Survey using two definitions of net disposable income. One uses a concept before, and one after, housing costs have been deducted from household income. Housing costs include rent, mortgage interest payments, water rates or water charges, structural insurance, ground rent and service charges.

However, poverty is about more than low income. It is also about health, education, housing and the quality of the environment. The seventh annual Opportunity for all report, published recently, sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and presents information on the indicators used to measure progress against this.

Housing is an important part of the Government's strategy on poverty and social exclusion. Opportunity for All monitors the proportion of children in non-decent homes, and also includes an indicator monitoring the proportion of families with children in temporary accommodation.

The document 'Measuring child poverty' published in December 2003 outlines the Government's measure of UK child poverty for the long-term. This includes a material deprivation measure which will capture children in families with high unavoidable costs, such as housing costs or childcare, which can adversely impact on living standards and leave people with low disposable incomes. Because it incorporates a new—higher—relative income line it will count some children as in poverty for the first time. The quality of housing will be directly measured as part of the material deprivation indicators, and will include housing that is poorly repaired, overcrowded or cold.

Copies of all documents are available in the Library.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress has been made towards meeting the Government's 2005 child poverty targets in Tamworth constituency; and if he will make a statement. [37820]

Margaret Hodge: The Government's target, set in the 2002 Spending Review, is to reduce the number of children in low-income households by at least a quarter by 2004–05, as a contribution towards the broader target of halving child poverty by 2010 and eradicating it by 2020.

As set out in Household Below Average Income (HBAI), between 1998–99 and 2003–04 (the latest data available) the number of children living in relative low-income households fell by 500,000 on a before housing costs basis and by 600,000 on an after housing costs basis.

The Government are broadly on track to meet their 2004–05 target. Final data for the 2004–05 target will be available in spring 2006.

The data source does not allow us to provide robust estimates below regional level.

Chronic Back Pain

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps are being taken in his Department to help civil servants with chronic back pain. [33872]

Mrs. McGuire: When faced with staff who suffer chronic back pain, a line manager is required to consider and, where appropriate, make reasonable adjustments. They will take into account the nature and severity of the disability or the underlying medical condition, and the treatment being received.

In addition, the Department provides support to individuals who suffer medical conditions, which may be affected by their working environment. Our Occupational Health Provider carries out full workplace assessments and adaptations (for example a special chair) are put in place as a result of recommendations they make. In order for this process to be streamlined, a pilot is currently under way involving all parties; Occupational Health, facilities managers, procurement and equipment suppliers, to put in place adaptations in the shortest possible time. The Department does not take a legalistic approach to the Disability Discrimination Act, in that, anyone identified as needing a workplace adaptation will be accommodated where it is reasonable to do so.

Child Support Agency

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans there are to apply retrospection to Child Support Agency cases pre-dating 3 March 2003 where a non-resident parent is found to be liable for lower child maintenance payments under the new system of calculating child maintenance. [36874]

Mr. Plaskitt: There are no plans to apply any retrospection to any Child Support Agency cases when they are moved to the new scheme.

Department IT

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent action he has taken to ensure that departmental staff involved with the restructuring of IT provision within his Department have the necessary skills. [28709]

Mrs. McGuire: In order to deliver its ambitious programme of business transformation and modernisation, so that welfare reform can be delivered more efficiently to its customers, my department is acting to recruit key staff to improve its in-house skills.

Following open competition the Department has made more than 90 professional appointments, providing the Department with IT capability to match the best in industry. The Department has appointed a Chief Information Officer (CIO) with extensive experience in the delivery of major IT and business change programmes. The CIO aims to ensure the delivery of effective, reliable and value for money information systems and services. Other appointments have been made at Director level, in the areas of project management, programme management, portfolio management, IT strategy and development and commercial management.

In addition the Department is establishing robust competency frameworks for all its IT specialists. These frameworks are aligned with Professional Skills for Government established by the Cabinet Office and the Transformational Government strategy published on 2 November 2005.

Departmental Staff

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the 10 highest-paid employees in his Department, broken down by (a) job title and (b) salary including bonuses; and whether the individual concerned is (i) a civil servant and (ii) a contractor in each case. [27437]

Mrs. McGuire: The 10 highest-paid employees in my Department by job title and pay range are shown in the following table:

Job title	Pay range

Disability and Carers Service

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether a Minister in his Department is planned to be nominated to take responsibility for liaison with the Office for Disability Issues; and if he will make a statement. [37081]

Mrs. McGuire: The Office for Disability Issues is a cross-government unit which reports to the Minister for Disabled People in this Department, who has lead responsibility, in collaboration with colleagues across Government, for driving forward the Government's 20 year strategy to deliver substantive equality for disabled people.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the national targets are for the disability and carers service; and what the performance of offices in South Devon is in relation to those targets. [36575]

Mrs. McGuire: The administration of disability and carers service is a matter for the chief executive of that agency, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Terry Moran, dated 19 December 2005:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the national targets are for the Disability and Carers Service; and if he will publish the performance of offices in South Devon in relation to those targets.

The Minister for Disabled People, Anne McGuire MP, promised you a substantive reply from the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service.

The information available on DCS national targets for 2005–2006 is in the following table:

Event	National targets 2005–06
DLA Normal Rules Claims	39
DLA Reconsiderations	35
DLA Appeals	37
DLA Decision Maker Accuracy	90%
AA Normal Rules Claims	22
AA Reconsiderations	35
AA Appeals	35
AA Decision Maker Accuracy	90%
CA Claims	22
CA Appeals	35
CA Decision Maker Accuracy	96%

Note:

For DLA/AA Claims, Reconsiderations, Appeals and CA Claims and Appeals the national target is an Actual Average Clearance Target (AACT), given in working days. The AACT is calculated by, adding up the total cumulative days taken to clear all cases and dividing this by the total number of cases cleared.

No AACT data is available specifically for the South Devon area. However, the information in the table below provides the year-to-date (YTD) performance, against the national targets, for Bristol Disability Benefits Centre (DBC).

Event	Bristol DBC YTD AACT
DLA Normal Rules New Claims	34.4
DLA Reconsiderations	26.4
DLA Appeals	25.6
AA Normal Rules New Claims	20.7
AA Reconsiderations	24.1
AA Appeals	25.6

Notes:

1. Bristol DBC deals with the whole of South West of England from Gloucester in the north, Swindon and Bournemouth to the east, through to the Isle of Scilly.

2. Decision Maker accuracy is only reported at national level.

The DCS does not publish performance figures for offices in South Devon, as there are no DCS offices in the South Devon area. The performance against targets for Bristol DBC is available in its Customer Service reception area. Overall DCS performance against targets is reported in the 'DCS Annual Report and Accounts' that is available in the Libraries of both Houses.

I hope this is helpful.

[35347]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The requested information is in the table.

Disabled People

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what representations he has received on the UK's involvement with the draft UN Convention on the Rights of Disabled People; and if he will make a statement. [34879]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department receives occasional correspondence on the draft UN Convention. We have also established a mechanism for regular review meetings with UK non-governmental organisations representing disabled people to keep them up to date with progress and seek their views on draft text. Additionally, the UK's involvement in the Convention is often discussed during regular meetings between departmental Ministers and disability organisations.

Employment Zone (Tower Hamlets)

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reasons new deal 25 plus in the London borough of Tower Hamlets has been replaced with the Employment Zone. [36367]

Margaret Hodge: Employment Zones are about finding the best way of helping jobless people find work and focus on those areas facing the most severe labour market problems. Areas like Tower Hamlets were chosen for Employment Zones because they had the highest unemployment rates in the country and the highest share of people unemployed for two years or more.

By harnessing the skills and expertise of the organisations and partnerships involved in Employment Zones we are able to provide more innovative ways of helping people into jobs. We are also providing additional help to reduce the high level of long-term unemployed jobseeker's allowance claimants in Tower Hamlets, beyond that which had been available under new deal 25 plus.

Finance Director

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions who the director of finance in his Department is; what relevant specialist qualifications he or she holds; and what the details of his or her career to date are. [26399]

Mrs. McGuire: The Finance Director General for the Department for Work and Pensions is John Codling. He is a CIPFA qualified accountant. John joined the Benefits Agency as Finance Director in April 1998. He was subsequently appointed the DSS Finance Director in May 2000 and then Finance Director General for DWP in 2001. Before joining the Benefits Agency John was Finance Director of the Funding Agency for Schools and before that held a series of senior posts in the Health Service and Local Government in both England and Scotland.

Financial Assistance Scheme

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects the first payments to be made by the Financial Assistance Scheme. [38288]

Mr. Timms: The first payments by the Financial Assistance Scheme to members of the ASW (Cardiff) pension scheme, the first scheme to provide us with the required details, have been issued and should be in individuals' bank accounts by Wednesday 21 December.

Firework Storage Sites

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Health and Safety Executive, when considering whether applicants for licensed firework storage sites are fit and proper persons, takes into account the criminal record of applicants other than their record with relation to explosives legislation. [36387]

Mrs. McGuire: The Manufacture and Storage of Explosives Regulations 2005 permit a licensing authority to refuse a licence where it takes the view that the applicant is not a fit person to store explosives. This means that the licensing authority does not have confidence in the applicant's ability or willingness to store the explosives safely.

In considering this issue the authority will primarily consider previous breaches of health and safety legislation but it can also take into account breaches of other relevant legislation where this reflects on the ability of the applicant to store safely and its willingness to comply with health and safety legislation.

HSE does not have access to the police criminal records and is not therefore able to run criminal records checks.

Gas Industry Levy

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent discussions he has had with (a) Ofgem, (b) the Health and Safety Commission and (c) the Council of Registered Gas Installers on the proposals from the Health and Safety Commission in 2000 for a levy on the gas industry to fund (i) a watchdog to promote carbon monoxide awareness and (ii) equipment for gas emergency services to test for carbon monoxide; and if he will make a statement. [34746]

Mrs. McGuire: None. However, my noble friend the Lord Hunt is due to meet both the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) and CORGI early next year when these issues are on the agenda.

The Health and Safety Commission's Fundamental Review of Gas Safety in 2000 recommended a levy on the gas industry for research and publicity, not specifically for a watchdog to promote carbon monoxide awareness.

Household Incomes

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent assessment has been made of the (a) comprehensiveness and (b) accuracy of advice given by Jobcentres on the effect on household incomes of coming off the unemployment register and engaging in part-time work. [34097]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 19 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning what recent assessment has been undertaken of the comprehensiveness and accuracy of the advice given by jobcentres on the effect of household incomes of coming off the unemployment register and engaging in part time work. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

I am not aware of any such assessment within the past year.

Jobcentre Plus advisors use a networked version of the Departmental Integrated Benefits Information System (IBIS) computer system to help them provide 'Better-off in work advice to customers. This IT tool provides a comprehensive calculation across the full range of income-based benefits and tax credits. The user either enters the amount of benefit known to be in payment, or lets the system calculate current entitlements based on the information provided by the customer. The system then allows a 'what if scenario to be entered to compare to the current position, and this will most typically involve a customer's prospective job details. Such events often involve a number of consequential changes such as the addition of travelling expenses and childcare and the IBIS system prompts for all of these to be considered and captured where appropriate.

Once all of the additional information has been entered for the prospective change, the system performs another series of calculations to show estimated entitlements. It also performs a financial comparison between the current actual position and the (typically) in work estimate. This is known as the Better Off calculation and shows a customer exactly how much per week they will gain or loose by taking a particular job.

With regard to accuracy, we take this very seriously and regularly update the IBIS system in line with, for example, changes to benefit rates. When we have investigated cases where the advice may have appeared incorrect, we have generally found this to have been caused either by incorrect or incomplete information being supplied by the customer, or when circumstances have changed between the advice being given and, for example, the take up of a job.

Household Poverty

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of households were in poverty (a) before housing costs and (b) after housing costs in the most recent year for which figures are available; and how many in each case were (i) local authority tenants, (ii) housing association tenants, (iii) private tenants, (iv) owner occupiers with a mortgage and (v) those who own outright. [38319]

Margaret Hodge: Poverty is about more than low income. It is also about health, housing, education and the quality of the environment. The seventh annual 'Opportunity for all' report (Cm 6239), published in October 2005, sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and presents information on the indicators used to measure progress against this strategy .

Specific information regarding individuals living in low income households is available in "Households Below Average Income 1994/95–2003/04", available in the Library. The threshold of below 60 per cent. contemporary median income is the most commonly used in reporting low income.

Information on the percentage of households in relative low income, and the number of households in low income by tenure type is presented in the following table for 2003–04. A relative low income household is defined here as a household with income below 60 per cent. of contemporary median income.

	Before housing costs	After housing costs
Percentage of households in low income	17	21
Number of households in low income by tenure type
(i) local authority tenants	800,000	1,300,000
(ii) housing association tenants	400,000	800,000
(iii) private tenants	400,000	800,000
(iv) owned with a mortgage	800,000	1,000,000
(v) owned outright	1,700,000	1,200,000
(vi) other	100,000	100,000
Total number of households in low income	4,300,000	5,200,000

Notes:
1. Tables show percentages rounded to the nearest percentage point, and numbers rounded to the nearest 100,000.
2. Figures may not sum due to rounding.

Income Support

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average length of time taken by the Department is to process requests for appeals in relation to income support awards. [36328]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The administration of the Appeals Service is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Appeals Service, Christina Townsend. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Christina Townsend, dated 19 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question regarding the average length of time taken by his department to process requests for appeals in relation to income support awards.

I refer the Honourable member to my letter dated the 21st November 2005, a copy of which can be found on the House of Commons Hansard within the Written Answers section, column 1669W.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Margaret Hodge: The information is in the table.

Jobcentre Plus

Sir Malcolm Rifkind: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will list the (a) private companies and (b) voluntary organisations that deliver Jobcentre Plus contracts; [27868]

(2) what percentage of outsourced employment services contracts are delivered by (a) private companies and (b) voluntary organisations; and what the value is in 2005–06 in each case. [27869]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 19 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions requesting a list of organisations that deliver Jobcentre Plus contracts broken down into private and voluntary sector organisations, and what percentage of outsourced employment services contracts are delivered by these organisations and their contract value for 2005–06. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

A list of organisations which have Jobcentre Plus contracts has been placed in the library. Unfortunately, we are currently not able to breakdown this list of providers between private and voluntary organisations. This information could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

However, Jobcentre Plus is currently implementing a new system which will enable information on programmes and providers to be obtained and collated more readily. The decision to set up this improved database came as a recommendation from the Jobcentre Plus Programme Procurement Review. Jobcentre Plus has set up a new externally administered accreditation service which will capture comprehensive information on all contractors and their sub contractors, broken down by programme and by type of organisation e.g. private company, voluntary body etc. This new system should be largely complete by April 2006.

With regard to your request for information regarding contract value, the total available budget for all Jobcentre Plus provision for 2005–06 is £1.1 billion. The actual expenditure on all these demand led contracts will, of course, depend on the volume of customers who actually take up the opportunities available within the various programmes. It will not be possible to break down expenditure by category of provider until the new database is available from April 2006.

I hope this is helpful.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claimants live more than five miles from an integrated Jobcentre Plus customer-facing office. [34250]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 19 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning how many claimants live more than 5 miles away from an integrated Jobcentre Plus customer facing office. This falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

We do not hold information on the distance our customers have to travel to their nearest Jobcentre Plus office.

In planning the new network of Jobcentre Plus offices, local managers take into account many factors including population spread, availability and cost of public transport, and the distance between offices. We aim to locate our new offices where there are good transport links.

Inevitably as the office network changes, there will be some customers who will find they will have to travel further. Jobcentre Plus is actively working with local partners to ensure that these hard to reach communities have access to services. In many locations, particularly rural locations, we are often able to provide outreach facilities, ensuring access to job vacancies, advice and information through third party premises.

In practice this means that with our new network, very few of our customers would have to travel more than 5 miles to access Jobcentre Plus services, other than in the most remote rural areas. Customers are now using our offices differently. More of our face-to-face customer contact is on an appointment basis and information on job vacancies is readily available by telephone and Internet. This enables staff in our offices to focus on those customers in greatest need of support.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how Jobcentre Plus has performed against its customer service targets in each year since 2001. [35359]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 19 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning how Jobcentre Plus has performed against its customer service targets in each year since 2001. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus was created in April 2002 bringing together the former Employment Service and those parts of the former Benefits Agency delivering services to working age people.

Jobcentre Plus's performance against its targets is published each year in our Annual Report and Accounts, copies of which can be found in the House of Commons Library. Performance against our Customer Service Target for the last three operational years and current operational year is in the table below.

For the operational year 2004/05, social security offices were included in the data capture process for the Customer Service Target. These offices had not previously been assessed under the Mystery Shopper component of the target. There were training initiatives underway at the time to up skill the staff. This was against a background of reducing headcount and the continued rollout. The expected progress on rollout was not achieved in 2004/05, and therefore the target achievement level was not upgraded in 2005/06.

Customer service

Percentage

	Target	Achievement
2002–03	79	85
2003–04	83	83.4
2004–05	81	83.2
2005–06	81	84.8

Note:
For 2005–06 the performance achieved is up to end of September 2005.

I hope this is helpful.

New Deal

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on the New Deal in Beverley and Holderness in each year from 1997–98; and what the estimate is for each year to 2008–09. [38122]

Margaret Hodge: Figures for expenditure and estimates for New Deal spend/forecast are not available at constituency level.

New Registrations (Slough)

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people from the new EU member states have joined the new deal scheme in Slough in each of the last five years; [38508]

(2) how many people registered for the new deal in Slough in each of the last five years for which data are available. [38512]

Margaret Hodge: Information is not collected on the nationality of those starting new deal.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions by how many years qualifying national insurance contributions would have to be reduced in order that 90 per cent. of newly retired women would receive a full basic state pension in their own right. [23680]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available in the form requested.

Home responsibilities protection (HRP) reduces the number of qualifying years needed for a full basic state pension by up to half, so the precise number of years an individual requires will vary according to the number of years of HRP awarded. However, departmental administrative data indicates that if a full basic state pension were paid to those who have the equivalent of at least 10 qualifying years, approximately 85 per cent. of newly retired women in March 2005 might receive the full basic pension. This may overestimate the reduction in qualifying years needed for a particular proportion of newly retired women to receive a full BSP in their own right, due to the way in which HRP interacts with qualifying years.

Women's basic state pension records are continuing to improve with the combined effect of increased labour market participation and HRP, so in the future a much more modest reduction in qualifying years might be needed to achieve the same outcome. We estimate on the basis of the current system that by 2025 men and women reaching age 65 will have similar basic state pension entitlements.

Notes:

1. The answer is based on 2004–05 departmental administrative data which provides information about the amount of basic state pension (BSP) in payment.

2. The answer includes an approximation of the proportion of women at state pension age in March 2005 who made a late claim or deferred their state pension entitlement.

3. Currently women normally need 39 qualifying years for a full BSP and 10 qualifying years to get the minimum BSP, at least one year must derive from paid NICs. In 2020, when SPA for women is raised to age 65, the number of qualifying years for women will equalise with men, increasing to 44 for the full BSP and 11 qualifying years for the minimum BSP (which is 25 per cent. of the required qualifying years for a full BSP over a person's working life). The administrative data does not hold information on the entitlements of those who fail to qualify for the minimum BSP.

4. The figure is based on those women with the equivalent of 10 or more qualifying years. This includes women who have at least 10 qualifying years from paid NI contributions, or a combination of contributions and NI credits as well as women who have some home responsibilities protection HRP on their record. For example, a women with 19 years of HRP and 5 years of paid contributions is entitled to the same amount of BSP as a person with 10 years of paid contributions only.

5. The data set does not break down how the BSP is accrued (for example the number of years of paid contributions, credits or HRP). For this reason, the answer should be treated as approximate only.

6. The answer is based on women aged 60 in March 2005 resident in Great Britain.

Pathways to Work

Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people (a) aged over 50 and (b) aged under 50 (i) joined Pathways to Work, (ii) subsequently found work, (iii) joined New Deal for Disabled People (excluding people in Pathways to Work pilot areas) and (iv) subsequently found work (excluding people in Pathways to Work pilot areas) in the last year for which figures are available. [26194]

Margaret Hodge: The information requested is in the tables.

Pension Reform

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what changes in public expenditure he expects to arise as a result of the state retirement pension age for women rising to 65 years. [33438]

Mr. Timms: The Government's long-term projections of benefit spending following the pre-Budget report of 5 December give total United Kingdom benefit spending on pensioners as £104.1 billion in 2020 compared with £77.3 billion in 2005. All figures are given in 2005–06 prices.

If women's state pension age were to remain at 60, then benefit expenditure on pensioners would be £13.7 billion higher. This saving is offset by extra costs of £3.5 billion on benefits for those of working age. Hence the change of the state retirement pension age to 65 years for women, with associated rises in the qualifying age for benefits such as pension credit or winter fuel payments, is expected to lead to a net saving in benefit expenditure of £10.1 billion in the year 2020 (figures do not sum exactly due to rounding).

Pensioners

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the administration costs were of the (a) pensioners' Christmas bonus, (b) the over-80s age top-up to the basic pension and (c) winter fuel allowance in 2004–05; and if he will make a statement. [20012]

Mr. Timms: We estimate that the cost of paying winter fuel payment, worth £1.9 billion to 11.4 million customers in 2004–05, was £23.2 million. The costs of administering the Christmas bonus and over-80 payment are not separately identifiable.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of pensioners receive (a) a contracted-out pension and (b) SERPS or S2P; and what estimate he has made of the average amount received by these pensioners. [35371]

Mr. Timms: Information on the numbers and amounts of contracted-out pensions is not available. The only available information relates to deductions from additional State Pension in respect of periods of contracting-out from SERPS prior to April 1997.

The total number of people receiving an additional State Pension which is subject to a contracted-out deduction is over 4 million representing 37.6 per cent. of all people receiving State Pension.

The total number of people receiving an additional State Pension under SERPS and/or S2P is just over 7 million representing around 61 per cent. of all people receiving State Pension. For those in receipt of additional State Pension the weekly average amount is £18.80.

Notes:

1. Data is taken from 5 per cent. extract of Pension Service Computer System as at 31 March 2005, therefore figures are subject to a degree of sampling variation. They are also adjusted to be consistent with the overall February caseload from the WPLS.
2. Caseload figures are rounded to the nearest million.
3. Amounts are rounded to the nearest 10p.

Pensions Service

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the national targets are for The Pension Service; and what the performance of offices in South Devon is in relation to those targets. [36576]

Mr. Timms: The annual targets for The Pension Service are published each year in the agency's Business Plan. Copies of The Pension Service's Business Plan 2005–06 are available in the House of Commons Library.

Customers based in the Plymouth and Torbay areas are dealt with by Bath Pension Centre.

Performance Development System

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the annual administrative costs of the Performance Development System in the Department were in each of the last three years. [38742]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested is not available.

Personal Capability Assessment

Roger Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Government are conducting a review of the Personal Capability Assessment; and if he will make a statement. [36798]

Margaret Hodge: The Personal Capability Assessment is acknowledged as being one of the most comprehensive benefit assessment processes in use anywhere in the world. Of course, in common with all our services, its effectiveness is under constant review as we seek to continuously improve.

In developing our proposals for welfare reform we are reviewing whether the process can be further developed to contribute more to supporting an individual's recovery and return to work. Any proposals emerging from this review will be detailed in our Welfare Reform Green Paper, which will be published in due course.

Poverty

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) of 21 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1682–86W, on poverty, if he will break down the information by (a) region and (b) county. [34398]

Margaret Hodge: Specific information regarding low income for Great Britain is available in "Households Below Average Income (HBAI) 1994/95–2003/04", available in the Library. The threshold of below 60 per cent. of median household income is the most commonly used in reporting trends in low income.

The data source does not allow us to provide robust estimates below regional level. Estimates at a regional level can be provided using data from 1994/95.

Information on the number of children living in relative low income for Scotland, Wales and by Government Office Region from 1994–95 onwards has been placed in the Library.

The figures are for absolute and relative incomes. Absolute low income is defined here for individuals as living in a household with income below 60 per cent. of 1996–97 median income which has been adjusted for inflation. Relative low income is defined here for individuals as living in a household with income below 60 per cent. of contemporary median.

Secondments

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what advisers to the Prime Minister have been seconded to work for the Department during the past year; and if he will make a statement. [31856]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 28 November 2005]: No advisers to the Prime Minister have been seconded to work for my Department during the past year.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what training is given to (a) policy officials and (b) lawyers in his Department responsible for drafting statutory instruments; and if he will make a statement. [33657]

Mrs. McGuire: Statutory Instruments are drafted by departmental lawyers based on instructions from policy divisions. Where SIs amend primary legislation, parliamentary counsel are consulted.

As members of the Government Legal Service (GLS), departmental lawyers receive extensive training on the preparation and drafting of statutory instruments. This consists of a combination of lectures and practical exercises run by experienced practitioners in the GLS, coupled with training given by legal advisers who advise the parliamentary scrutiny committees. In addition, senior managers in the GLS take a close interest in the quality of SIs and provide frequent feedback and on the job training to those with lead responsibility for drafting. This is an ongoing process and part of the continuing education of government legal advisers.

Winter Fuel Payment

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost was of administering the winter fuel payment in 2004–05. [32726]

Mr. Timms: We estimate that the cost of paying winter fuel payment, worth £1.9 billion to £11.4 million customers in 2004–05, was £23.2 million.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioner households are eligible for the winter fuel allowance in Lancashire. [37732]

Mr. Timms: Last winter there were 175,150 pensioner households in Lancashire that received a winter fuel payment. We expect the number to be similar for this winter.

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest 5.
2. Any residence found to have four or more occupants is not included in these figures as it is assumed to be a Residential Care or Nursing Home.
3. Local authorities and parliamentary constituencies are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant ONS postcode directory.

Information Directorate, 100 per cent. sample.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the number of pensioner householders in Wakefield district who are eligible for assistance with winter fuel payments. [38329]

Mr. Timms: It is not possible to provide an estimate of the number of pensioner householders who are eligible for a winter fuel payment. Last winter 62,010 householders in the Wakefield local authority received a winter fuel payment. We would expect the number to be similar for this winter. The figures for winter 2004–05 are also available in the Library.

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest five.
2. Local authorities and parliamentary constituencies are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant ONS postcode directory.

TREASURY

Cash Machines (Northern Ireland)

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 7 December 2005, Official Report, column 1376W, on cash machines, how many cash machines in Northern Ireland charged customers to withdraw money in each of the last 10 years. [38602]

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what percentage of households in each (a) London borough and (b) constituency were on the electoral register on 1 January; and if he will make a statement. [36462]

Ms Harman: I have been asked to reply.

Treasury has transferred this question to my Department as we deal with Electoral Policy.

The most recent published statistics on electoral registration are for 1 December 2004. Following, there are two tables showing:

1. The number of local government electors in each London borough; and

2. The number of parliamentary electors in each London constituency.

Please note that these statistics relate to individual electors rather than to households. Estimates on the percentage of individuals and households registered are not available at constituency or borough level.

Equitable Life

Sir John Butterfill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with the Parliamentary and Health Service Ombudsman on the report of her investigation into the prudential regulation of Equitable Life. [37287]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Parliamentary Ombudsman's investigation into the prudential regulation of Equitable Life is, like all such investigations, being conducted in private. The Treasury is co-operating fully with the investigation.

Sir John Butterfill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has received information from the Parliamentary Ombudsman on a publication date for her report on the prudential regulation of Equitable Life; whether he has made representations to the Parliamentary Ombudsman on this subject; and if he will make a statement. [38761]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The timetable for the completion of the Parliamentary Ombudsman's investigation into the prudential regulation of Equitable Life is a matter for her.

The Treasury is co-operating fully with the Ombudsman's investigation which, like all such investigations, is being conducted in private.

Gift Aid

Greg Clark: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost is to the Government of administering the gift aid scheme per pound of tax relief received by charities. [38574]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: HM Revenue and Customs does not distinguish the costs of administering gift aid from other activities in relation to charities and charitable giving.

National Insurance (Musicians)

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what impact assessment was conducted in relation to the requirement on music sector companies to pay class 1 national insurance contributions if they employ freelance musicians; and if he will make a statement. [38031]

Dawn Primarolo: The Department of Social Security was responsible for the policy on national insurance contributions and changes to legislation covering actors and musicians that were introduced on 17 July 1998. The changes were made following prior consultation with Equity and the Musicians Union and other organisations.

Pensions

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the amounts payable in the basic pensions in the year 2006–07 for (a) individuals and (b) couples if pensions had been increased by the levels of earnings inflation since 1997. [36411]

State Pension (couples per week)	145.25

Notes:
1. Figures are based on the April 1997 rate of State Pension uprated in line with the non-seasonally adjusted September Average Earnings Index including bonuses for 1997, and subsequent years, and take account of the convention that rates of State Pension are rounded to the nearest 5 pence.
2. The couples rate is taken to be the value of a full Category A Pension combined with the value of a full Category B Pension.

Red Diesel

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what derogation there is within the EU for the use of red diesel by pleasure craft; and if he will seek to extend the derogation. [37895]

John Healey: The Energy Products Directive (EPD) prohibits the use of rebated gas oil in leisure boats for private use, but the UK enjoys a derogation from this provision. This derogation expires at 31 December 2006 and can be renewed only with the unanimous agreement of the council.

We confirmed in the pre-Budget report that we are minded to apply for an extension of this derogation. We will issue an initial regulatory impact assessment on the effects of ending the derogation early next year and this document will be used as the basis for further information gathering and discussions.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of revenue from stamp duty on property in each of the next three financial years. [38211]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Estimated and projected revenues for total stamp taxes in 2005–06 and 2006–07 are published in Table B14 of the pre-Budget 2006 report. The component of the duty attributable to land and property (Stamp Duty Land Tax) is given in the following table:

£ billion

	Stamp duty land tax
2005–06	7.0
2006–07	7.8

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 83W, on tax credits, how many recommendations have been made by HM Revenue and Customs internal audit relating to fraud since 2003–04. [37981]

Dawn Primarolo: Internal Audit's role is to provide an independent and objective opinion to the Chairman and Audit Committee on risk management, control and governance. Over the course of the year it will report to the Chairman and Audit Committee on a whole range of issues including fraud and compliance and make recommendations where appropriate.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the cost of tax credits between 2003–04 and 2013–14 if (a) the yield from recovered overpayments is excluded from the calculation and (b) the reforms announced in the pre-Budget report were not introduced; [37982]

(2) what estimate he has made of the yield from recovered tax credit overpayments between 2003–04 and 2013–14 if (a) the pre-Budget reforms were not introduced, (b) the pre-Budget reforms are introduced and (c) the income disregard is raised to £25,000 from 2006–07. [37983]

Dawn Primarolo: The likely scale of behavioural change resulting from no longer recovering any overpayments could have significant costs to the Exchequer; no estimates are available of this cost.

The effect of the tax credit package is contained within table 1.2 of the 2005 pre-Budget report.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Agency Staff

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff were employed by non-departmental public bodies and agencies for which he has responsibility in 2004–05 in (a) total and (b) each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK and (c) London. [35937]

Dr. Howells: Our non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) employ a total of 7,715 staff.

The detailed figures are as follows:

four full-time and one part-time for the British Association for Central and Eastern Europe;

0 for The Government Hospitality Advisory Committee for the Purchase of Wine; four full-time and two part-time for the Great British China Centre;

0 for the Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission;

69 for the Wilton Park Academic Council;

7,613 (in the UK and abroad) for the British Council;

two part-time for the Foreign Compensation Commission;

12 for the Westminster Foundation for Democracy; eight for the Diplomatic Service Appeals Board.

All of the UK-based staff are located in London except in the case of The British Council and The Wilton Park Academic Council. The British Council has 45 staff in Scotland, 5.8 in Wales and 29 in Northern Ireland. Within the UK there are five staff in the East of England, three in the East Midlands, three in the West Midlands, three in Yorkshire and Humber, two in the North East, three in the South West, four in the South East and 575 in London. All 69 of the staff at The Wilton Park Academic Council are based in the South-East of England, in Sussex.

Airspace (Extraordinary Renditions)

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date (a) he and (b) his officials first became aware of allegations that the United States was using civil aircraft for the purpose of the rendition of terrorist suspects. [37966]

Dr. Howells: As the US Secretary of State, Condaleezza Rice, made clear in her statement of 5 December 2005, the United States and other countries have for decades used "renditions" to transport terrorist suspects from the country in which they were captured to their home country or to other countries where they can be questioned, held or brought to justice. As to the current allegations about rendition, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and his officials became aware of them when they appeared in the media.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he (a) has written and (b) intends to write to the US Administration to ask whether UK airspace has been used for the purpose of the extraordinary rendition of anyone accused of terrorist activities since 11 September 2001; and if he will make a statement. [37280]

Dr. Howells: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to the right hon. and learned Member for North-East Fife (Sir Menzies Campbell) on 12 December 2005, Official Report, columns 1652–53W.

Albatrosses

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what penalties can be imposed on people who are found to be responsible for deaths to albatrosses in the waters around (a) South Georgia, (b) the South Sandwich Islands and (c) the British Antarctic Territory; and whether there are plans to change these penalties. [36085]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The incidental mortality of albatrosses and petrels in the waters of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands (SGSSI) is now virtually zero, following a very successful campaign to employ effective mitigating measures on fishing vessels.

Penalties do exist under the SGSSI Fisheries (Conservation and Management) Ordinance 2000, as amended, and the Falkland Islands Dependencies Conservation Ordinance 1975. These include a maximum fine of £250,000 for fishing vessels which breach fishing licence conditions, and a fine of £150 for those who kill, wound, capture, molest or export any native bird (including albatrosses or petrels). The latter penalty will be increased as part of the current revision of South Georgia legislation.

Within the British Antarctic Territory, whose territorial sea lies within the Antarctic treaty area, penalties could only be imposed on UK nationals or those operating British-registered vessels. However, longlining vessels, which pose the greatest risk to albatrosses and petrels, are not permitted to fish in British Antarctic Territory waters. Penalties exist under the British Antarctic Territory Fauna and Flora (Conservation) Ordinance 1990. The maximum statutory penalty is £5,000. There are no plans to change this figure.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken to protect the albatross populations in (a) South Georgia, (b) the South Sandwich Islands and (c) the British Antarctic Territory; and how much funding was allocated to their protection in each place in each of the last eight years. [36086]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Albatrosses are protected under the South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands Fisheries (Conservation and Management) Ordinance 2000 and the Falkland Islands Dependencies Conservation Ordinance 1975; various Conservation Measures of the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources (CCAMLR) and the Agreement for the Conservation of Albatrosses and Petrels (ACAP).

The British Antarctic Survey are continuing with a long-term study of the breeding success of albatrosses at South Georgia. The birds are tracked by satellite to discover how they disperse at sea away from the Islands, and where they are at most risk of being killed by Illegal, Unregulated and Unreported (IUU) fishing outside South Georgia waters.

The Government of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands (GSGSSI) ensures long-term monitoring of populations around the Island, manages tourism in such a way as to protect the breeding birds, and works with CCAMLR and the fishing industry to protect albatross species at sea.

Scientific observers are placed on all longline fishing vessels and most trawlers to develop mitigation methods and monitor their success. This has cost the GSGSSI an average of over £500,000 per annum over the last three years. In addition, specific projects ashore that contribute to albatross protection have cost GSGSSI £10,400 in 1999; £42,167 in 2000; £55,000 in 2001; £39,946 in 2002; £55,513 in 2003; £83,575 in 2004, and are estimated to be £100,000 in 2005. It is accepted by CCAMLR, Birdlife International and the IUCN (World Conservation Union) that incidental seabird deaths in the South Georgia fisheries are now negligible.

There are no breeding albatrosses on any of the South Sandwich Islands. Their protection at sea is included in the work of GSGSSI as described.

All Antarctic fauna are protected under the Protocol on Environmental Protection to the Antarctic Treaty. This is enacted into UK legislation through the Antarctic Act 1994, which prohibits any interference with Antarctic fauna without a specific permit.

The Government of the British Antarctic Territory has undertaken a number of environmental projects to reinforce the protection of vulnerable species in Antarctica. These have included the development of Antarctic Specially Managed and Protected Areas, under the Protocol on Environmental Protection to the Antarctic Treaty. These projects were not, however, specific to albatross and petrel species.

Assets (Corruption)

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what value of illicitly acquired assets of a foreign state recovered by British authorities has been returned to the victim state in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [35404]

Ian Pearson: The Government welcome the new powers granted under the United Nations Convention Against Corruption which will make it easier for states to restrain funds. International co-operation is currently directed by existing legislation. However, these procedures have proved to be a barrier to providing effective assistance and as such there is no record of return of assets. The power of British authorities to seize assets will be strengthened when an Order in Council comes into force under the Proceeds of Crime Act (2002) in January 2006. The 2002 Act also provides for domestic action to be taken by way of civil recovery proceedings. I cannot comment on ongoing live cases and to date no assets have been returned.

Bangladesh

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions the UK Government have had with the Government of Bangladesh regarding that government's human rights record. [37813]

Dr. Howells: We regularly raise human rights with the Government of Bangladesh. I visited Bangladesh from 14 to 16 November 2005. I underlined the UK's commitment to, and support of, human rights in Bangladesh during my discussions including with human rights campaigners and representatives of religious and ethnic minorities and in a widely reported high profile speech.

The British high commission in Dhaka is actively engaged in the promotion of human rights. On 10 December 2005, in a speech to mark World Human Rights, the high commissioner called publicly on political and religious leaders in Bangladesh to defend minority rights, and to work to eradicate unlawful killings. The British high commission routinely monitors and often raises human rights with the Government of Bangladesh, both bilaterally and together with EU partners. As the EU Presidency, our high commission has specifically lobbied Ministers and officials on minority rights, the persecution of human rights defenders, freedom of the media and the observance of human rights by law enforcement agencies. They have also helped to raise awareness in Bangladesh of the plight of indigenous peoples, refugees and of human rights in wider civil society. The high commission also has regular contacts with human rights non-governmental organisations (NGOs) and other activists in Bangladesh, and provides funding to NGOs for human rights based programmes.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the human rights situation in Bangladesh. [37814]

Dr. Howells: We continue to have serious concerns about the human rights situation in Bangladesh including human rights abuses by the rapid action Battalion; the use of the death penalty, combined with legal and penal systems that do not have the appropriate probity or capacity; gender, ethnic and religious discrimination; the safeguarding of the rights of children and the disabled and the protection of vulnerable groups from exploitation. The British high commission in Dhaka regularly raise human rights issues with the Government of Bangladesh and provide funding to non-governmental organisations for human rights programmes.

Brazil

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's policy towards British citizens held without representation in Brazil. [37872]

Dr. Howells: Foreign and Commonwealth Office policy for all our overseas posts is for consular staff to visit detained British nationals if the detainee wishes them to do so. During visits to detainees, consular staff monitor their welfare, and can provide information on the local legal system and a list of local lawyers. However, consular staff are not qualified to give legal advice, nor can we pay for or provide legal representation.

If a detainee indicates, either at a first meeting or subsequently, that they do not wish to receive consular assistance, our staff will respect the detainee's wishes.

There are currently 37 British nationals in detention in Brazil. We do not keep records for any country of how many detainees have specifically asked not to receive consular assistance, so are unable to give a number for those not being assisted in Brazil.

Bribery (OECD Working Group)

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress the Government will report to the OECD Working Group on Bribery on how the United Kingdom is implementing the Working Group's Phase 2 review recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [36845]

Ian Pearson: The UK's oral report on progress against the phase 2 review recommendations will take place at the meeting of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development Working Group on Bribery in March 2006. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) is co-ordinating the inputs of those Government Departments involved in responding to the recommendations. This process will continue until the presentation of the UK's final written report in March 2007. The FCO is currently collating information in preparation for the oral report in March 2006. When this has been completed, a progress report will be published.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library the briefing documents drawn up by his Department for the oral report the UK will make to the OECD Working Group on Bribery in relation to the Working Group's Phase 2 review recommendations. [36846]

Ian Pearson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave today (UIN 36845).

British Antarctic Territory

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last visited (a) South Georgia, (b) the South Sandwich Islands and (c) the British Antarctic Territory; and whether he has any plans to do so. [36091]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has never visited these Territories, nor does he have any plans at present to do so.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to (a) encourage tourism to (i) South Georgia, (ii) the South Sandwich Islands and (iii) the British Antarctic Territory and (b) to restrict the impact of tourism on the wildlife in those areas. [36092]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Government of South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands (GSGSSI) encourages visits by tourist cruise vessels to South Georgia by attending the annual meeting of the International Association of Antarctica Tour Operators (IAATO), by providing services to shipping, by supporting the South Georgia Museum Trust and by preserving the wildlife and environment that attracts tourists. There are no facilities for tourists in the South Sandwich Islands.

The Antarctic Treaty, to which the UK is a Consultative Party, designates Antarctica as a continent for peace and science. While the Government considers sustainable tourism a legitimate activity in Antarctica, they do not promote tourism to the British Antarctic Territory.

The GSGSSI takes very seriously its responsibilities in restricting the impact of tourism on wildlife in South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands (SGSSI). A strict permitting process is in place, and visits to the Islands require the permission of the Commissioner for SGSSI. No cruise ship may land passengers other than at Grytviken/King Edward Point without being a member of IAATO. All IAATO vessels follow the Antarctic Treaty Environmental Protocol guidelines while at GSSI. Expeditions to SGSSI are vetted by an independent panel of experts, which considers the potential impact on wildlife and the environment. The GSGSSI has banned the use of helicopters for the purpose of tourism, and any other flying is strictly regulated. The GSGSSI has closed many areas of South Georgia to tourists in order that wildlife should remain undisturbed.

The UK has actively promoted measures to restrict the impact of tourism on Antarctic flora and fauna through the Antarctic Treaty System. These have included, for example, the development of Site Guidelines for visitors to key Antarctic tourism sites, and new requirements to ensure adequate insurance and search and rescue provision for Antarctic expeditions.

British Embassies (Overnight Visitors)

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what system is in place to log (a) day and (b) overnight visitors to the British embassies in (i) France, (ii) Germany, (iii) Iran, (iv) Italy, (v) Russia, (vi) Saudi Arabia, (vii) North Korea, (viii) Zimbabwe and (ix) the US. [32742]

Ian Pearson [pursuant to the reply, 2 December 2005, Official Report, c. 871W]: I regret that an inaccurate answer was given to part of the hon. Member's question, regarding the system for logging in visitors to the embassy in Saudi Arabia. The correct answer should read as follows:

The embassy in Saudi Arabia: The embassy and residence are in the same compound. The names of guests at official events in the residence and overnight guests staying at the residence are recorded electronically. A log is not kept of other visitors to the embassy.

Building/Refurbishment Projects

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) building and (b) refurbishment projects are planned by his Department in (i) 2005–06 and (ii) 2006–07; and what the expected costs are of each project. [37416]

Dr. Howells: Building and refurbishment projects planned/being undertaken by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in 2005–06 and 2006–07, and the expected costs of these projects in those years are:

Burma

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations as the UK representative on the UN Security Council for that body to impose sanctions against Burma. [36729]

Ian Pearson: We encourage all the appropriate bodies of the United Nations (UN) to help bring about national reconciliation and respect for human rights and democracy in Burma. There is currently no agreement for imposing UN Security Council sanctions, but we continue to support any action in the UN Security Council which would help to promote reform and positive change in Burma.

China

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the social and political situation in China. [37890]

Ian Pearson: China is undergoing a period of rapid economic and social development. There have been improvements in recent years in the quality of life for most people living in China. But the Government remains concerned about the human rights situation in China. Through regular dialogue with the Chinese authorities, we encourage China to engage constructively with the international community on social issues and human rights and to institute political reforms to match economic growth.

Convergence Funds

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with (a) counterparts in EU member states and (b) the European Commission regarding the future of convergence funds. [38028]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We have discussed the financial perspectives, including the convergence objective, at Ministerial and/or official level with each and every EU member state, the two Accession states (Bulgaria and Romania), the European Commission and the European Parliament.

Correspondence/Parliamentary Questions

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when his Department will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Brent East, dated 28 April, regarding Mr. Andrew Papworth. [37743]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has no record of receiving a letter dated 28 April from the hon. Member. Officials have asked the hon. Member's office for a copy of the letter but no copy was held. A letter dated 14 December about the issues raised by the hon. Member's constituent, Mr. Papworth, was received in the FCO's Ministerial Support Unit that day. The hon. Member should expect a reply within 20 working days.

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when UK Visas will reply to the letter of 10 May from the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood regarding an application by Shahnaz Begum (B-C Islamabad reference 864696, date of birth 01/01/1971). [38118]

Dr. Howells: UK Visas replied to my right hon. Friend's letter on 15 December. We are sorry for the delay, which was due to a filing error.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) letters from hon. Members, (b) letters from members of the public and (c) parliamentary questions from (i) hon. Members and (ii) Lords were dealt with by his Department in each year since 1995 in respect of the percentage his Department took (A) more than one month and (B) more than three months to provide a substantive answer; and if he will make a statement. [37417]

Dr. Howells: The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to Members/Peers correspondence. The report for 2004 was published on 6 April 2005, Official Report, columns 139–40WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House.

Information on letters from members of the public and on parliamentary questions in the form requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Cotton (Subsidies)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his EU counterparts to co-ordinate pressure on the United States to cut subsidies to the cotton sector. [35760]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We recognise the importance of cotton production for a number of developing countries, particularly Benin, Burkina Faso, Chad and Mali. World Trade Organisation (WTO) members in July 2004 agreed to deal with the issue of cotton

"ambitiously, expeditiously, and specifically, within the agricultural negotiations".

Progress on cotton subsidies is an important litmus test of developed countries' development credentials within the WTO Round, including those of the EU. Failure to reach agreement on cotton will seriously damage prospects for the ambitious, pro-development outcome to the WTO Round that we are all seeking. We need an ambitious outcome on agriculture and this should include early implementation of the agreement on cotton.

The United States (US) has clearly had the greatest influence on the world price for cotton, distorting the market both through domestic support and export subsidies, which together amount to around $3.9 billion a year. We have encouraged the US to implement rapidly the findings of the WTO Appeals Panel report, and will continue to do so.

My right hon. Friend the Minister for Trade raised the issue of cotton subsidies during his statement on the WTO Round at the European Parliament's Plenary Session on 30 November. The EU has already agreed major reforms to the EU cotton sector in 2004. We are encouraging EU producers to decouple payments to the maximum extent possible.

Democratic Republic of Congo

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to ensure that the 2006 elections in the Democratic Republic of Congo are free and fair. [37456]

Ian Pearson: We and our international partners are urging the Congolese transitional Government and Independent Electoral Commission to stick closely to the agreed timetable for elections, to ensure that they are as transparent as possible and that they reflect the will of the Congolese people. We are encouraging all political parties to participate in the process.

The UK has contributed £10 million to the United Nations (UN)-administered trust fund for elections, and will contribute £8 million to election security. Together with our international partners, we have secured $103 million of additional UN funding for UN peacekeeping force (MONUC) support to election logistics.

Departmental Consultants

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many civil servants in each grade have left his Department in each of the last three years to join consultancy firms; and which firm each joined. [37364]

Dr. Howells: In many cases we do not know where staff go to work after they have left the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. Where we do know, this information is not kept in consolidated form and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are taken by his Department to support staff with mental ill-health. [36276]

Ian Pearson: All Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) staff have access to a full occupational health service provided by Capita Health Solutions through the FCO healthcare contract with International SOS. This includes advice on adjustments to working arrangements as appropriate.

All FCO staff also have access to a confidential support and counselling service provided by an external employee assistance programme as well as access to professionally trained in-house welfare officers.

Detention Centres (US Flights)

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 12 December 2005, Official Report, column 1647W, on detention centres (US flights), what information (a) he and (b) his officials have (i) received and (ii) sought about whether the United States transports detainees from one country to another for the purpose of questioning; and whether UK (A) air-space and (B) territory has been used in this process. [38314]

Dr. Howells: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to the right hon. Member for North East Fife (Sir Menzies Campbell) on 12 December 2005, Official Report, columns 1652–53W.

Diplomatic Cars (Clamping)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to clamp illegally parked diplomatic cars of countries who have refused to pay (a) parking fines and (b) the London congestion charge. [38836]

Dr. Howells: No. The Government cannot introduce a policy of wheel clamping of diplomatic vehicles as this would be in breach of International Law. Article 31.1 of the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations 1961 states that

> "A diplomatic agent shall enjoy immunity from the criminal jurisdiction of the receiving State."

Provision for exemption from wheel clamping is also made for owners of vehicles with "D" plates under Section 70 of the Road Traffic Act 1991.

Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether a Minister in his Department is planned to be nominated to take responsibility for liaison with the Office for Disability Issues; and if he will make a statement. [37091]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I welcome the launch of the Office for Disability Issues. As Minister responsible for Human Resources in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO), my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will take responsibility for liaison with this new Office.

The FCO looks forward to working with the Office for Disability Issues, in particular to ensure that we deliver the strategy set out in the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit report, Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People, and to deliver the new duties to promote disability equality set out in the Disability Discrimination Act (2005).

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the initial activity undertaken by his Department in response to those recommendations in the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People where lead responsibility was assigned to all Government Departments. [37092]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) administration, in consultation with the FCO's Disability Action Group (a group of staff with an interest in disability, chaired by the Board Champion for Disability), is addressing the recommendations set out in the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report, "Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People".

Our goal is to be an employer of choice for disabled people by 2010. Our action plan and agreed priorities include:

developing more transparent procedures for boarding and recruiting disabled officers;

providing training for disabled staff and their line managers; securing more resources for reasonable adjustments;

developing guidelines for line managers of disabled staff; participating in the Employers' Forum on Disability Benchmark; organising a "Disability Awareness Week" with a series of lunch time seminars.

Embassy Closures

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 10 November 2005, Official Report, column 744W, on embassy closures, if he will publish (a) a report of discussions about the closure of the embassies and (b) the cost-benefit analysis relating to the closure of each embassy. [37836]

Dr. Howells: As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary said in his written ministerial statement of 15 December 2004 Official Report, columns 137–140WS), changes to our overseas network to align our resources more effectively to our priorities were aimed at enhancing our effectiveness in representing British interests abroad, and helping to deliver an efficient service on behalf of the British taxpayer. It is not our practice to publish discussions about the closure of embassies.

The benefits of the work of British embassies and missions are not quantifiable in cash terms. Decisions are made on the basis of where resources best meet the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's strategic priorities.

Eritrea/Ethiopia

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he plans to have with the Government of Eritrea on that country's expulsion of United Nations peacekeepers; and if he will make a statement. [36727]

Ian Pearson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend for Stroud (Mr. Drew) today (UIN 36932).

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what steps have been taken by his Department to advance the 2002 International Court ruling on Badme in the Eritrea-Ethiopia border demarcation dispute; [36150]

(2) what steps his Department has taken to support the implementation of paragraphs 1 and 2 of UN Resolution 1640 (2005) on Eritrea and Ethiopia; [36151]

(3) if the Government will support the Security Council's Resolution of 23 November threatening sanctions against both Eritrea and Ethiopia if they continue the deployment of troops on the Badme border; what sanctions are envisaged; and how soon after the specified 30 day redeployment period such sanctions will be enforced; [36152]

(4) if he will make a statement about recent progress in Ethiopia's implementation of the proposals of the International Arbitration Commission for its border with Eritrea. [36197]

Ian Pearson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend for Stroud (Mr. Drew) on 13 December 2005, Official Report, columns 1951–52W).

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the human rights situation on each side of the border between Ethiopia and Eritrea; and if he will make a statement. [33407]

Ian Pearson: We are concerned about reports of serious human rights abuses which continue to occur in both Ethiopia and Eritrea. In Ethiopia these include the mass arrest of Opposition supporters and reports of harsh conditions and physical violence in the detention camps. We have called for an independent investigation of reports of lethal violence by security forces, which has cost many lives.

In Eritrea the prolonged detention of members of religious minorities and the arrest of family members of those accused of evading military service are examples of serious and ongoing abuses.

We raise these matters regularly in bilateral contacts with the governments concerned and in our capacity as EU Presidency. My noble Friend the Minister for Africa (Lord Triesman of Tottenham) did so most recently by letter to President Isaias on 6 October and with the ambassador of Eritrea on 18 October. He will also raise human rights directly with the Ethiopian Prime Minister when he visits Addis Ababa shortly.

EU Convergence Fund

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much Convergence Fund money would be allocated to West Wales and the Valleys under (a) the Luxemburg presidency's final budgetary proposals and (b) the UK presidency's budgetary proposals as presented on 5 December. [37333]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Under the UK presidency's future financing proposal, tabled on 5 December, West Wales and the Valleys would receive the same level of convergence funding as under the final proposal made by Luxembourg in June this year. The exact sums involved will only be clearer if and when final agreement is reached on the EU's Financial Perspectives for 2007–13.

EU-Israel Association Agreement

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1026W, on the EU-Israel Association Agreement, when he expects the proposed new EU-Israel working group on human rights to be convened; who will be represented on it; how often it will meet; whether its proceedings will be in public; whom it will report to; and how it will relate to the monitoring and implementation of the human rights obligations of the EU-Israel Association Agreement. [38005]

Dr. Howells: The EU and Israel agreed to establish a working group on human rights at the Political Dialogue and Co-operation sub committee on 21 November. The European Commission will be consulting Israel and member states on the modalities of the EU- Israel Human Rights Working Group with a view to a meeting taking place in the first quarter of 2006. Reinforcing our dialogue with Israel on human rights through this working group will also help to monitor the implementation of the relevant provisions of the EU-Israel Association Agreement.

David Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what circumstances the Government would support the suspension of the EU-Israel Association Agreement; and if he will make a statement. [38245]

Dr. Howells: We do not believe consideration should be given to suspending the EU-Israel Association Agreement. The conflict between Israel and the Palestinians has caused and continues to cause suffering on both sides. We should not be looking at imposing sanctions on either side, but at supporting them to get back to a political process in order to reach a just and lasting negotiated settlement.

Guantanamo Bay

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the US Department of Defense decision to conduct the first war crimes trials at Guantanamo Bay with the power to impose the death penalty; what discussions he has had with his EU counterparts on this; and if he will make a statement. [36675]

Dr. Howells: The Military Commissions at Guantanamo Bay have been suspended, pending consideration of the Hamdan case by the United States (US) Supreme Court. This is not expected before early next year. The US Government have confirmed that they will not seek the death penalty for any of the nine terrorist suspects they have formally charged at Guantanamo Bay.

The Government's views on the Military Commissions are well known. The Government expressed publicly their reservations about the Commission from July 2003 when two British nationals were designated for possible trial. They subsequently concluded that the Commissions did not meet the standards required for our nationals.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not discussed the Commissions with my EU counterparts recently.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations his Department has made to the US Administration concerning the release of prisoners from Guantanamo Bay. [38254]

Dr. Howells: We discuss Guantanamo Bay with the United States (US) Government on a regular basis. The US Government is well aware of our continuing concerns over the conditions of detainees there.

Human Rights, Democracy and Good Governance Programme

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria are used to differentiate the support for the promotion of democracy from (a) human rights and (b) good governance under the Human Rights, Democracy and Good Governance Programme. [35619]

Ian Pearson: The Government consider the promotion of Human Rights, Democracy and Good Governance as interdependent and mutually reinforcing. The Foreign and Commonwealth Offices's approach to this task has been to mainstream this work throughout relevant Global Opportunities Fund (GOF) programmes. This includes the Sustainable Development programme (formerly Human Rights, Democracy and Good Governance), which incorporates the grant in aid to the Westminster Foundation for Democracy, as well as the Reuniting Europe, Engaging with the Islamic World and Economic Governance (formerly Emerging Markets) programmes. The criteria for supporting projects for the promotion of democracy under GOF programmes are to strengthen political parties, parliaments, civil society and other institutions of democracy; support increased participation by the disenfranchised, especially women, ethnic minorities and the disabled, in accordance with principles of equality, diversity and non-discrimination; and to promote freedom of expression that underpins the exercise of democracy. On human rights, the GOF programmes seek to support projects that combat torture, the death penalty and promote child rights. We seek to promote good governance by supporting projects that enhance the rule of law, e.g. to enhance separation of powers, independent and professional judiciaries and legal services, access to justice and independent complaint mechanisms, such as ombudsmen.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the (a) total and (b) net cost of (i) integrating the proposed identity card scheme into his Department's IT systems and (ii) the on-going operation of the scheme within his Department. [31109]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has kept in close touch with the Home Office over the ID card scheme. It is not possible to estimate the potential cost to the FCO until legislation has been completed and policy issues relating to use of or access to ID cards overseas have been clarified.

Illegal Fishing

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to prevent illegal fishing in the waters surrounding South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands; and if he will make a statement. [36065]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Government of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands deploys fishery patrol vessels and utilises remote sensing techniques to monitor fishing activities in the 200-nautical-mile maritime zone around South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, and to detect illegal vessels. It is believed that little illegal activity presently takes place in the zone, and that detection rates are high. An illegal vessel was arrested in the zone, successfully prosecuted and subsequently scuttled (in Falkland Islands' waters) by the South Georgia Government earlier this year.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost was in 2004–05 of (a) preventing illegal fishing and (b) maintaining sustainable fisheries in the waters surrounding (i) South Georgia and (ii) the South Sandwich Islands. [36080]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands are accounted together as they are one territory.

The current cost of preventing illegal fishing is about £2 million per annum. This figure consists of the cost of operating the fishery patrol vessel and other surveillance activity.

The cost of maintaining sustainable fisheries is just under £2 million per annum. This figure includes £1 million to finance the British Antarctic Survey Fisheries Research Laboratory and support services at King Edward Point, a cost which is shared equally between the South Georgia Government and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The remainder is expended on other fisheries research and a fisheries observer programme.

Thus the current annual expenditure on fisheries research, protection and management is nearly £4 million, excluding a significant proportion of the salaries paid to the permanent staff of the South Georgia Government, much of whose time is devoted to fisheries management.

This compares to a total income from fishing licences of £3,101,890.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many fishermen were prosecuted for illegal fishing in UK waters around (a) South Georgia, (b) the South Sandwich Islands and (c) the British Antarctic Territory in each of the last eight years. [36090]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: There were no prosecutions for illegal fishing in waters within the South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands 200-nautical-mile Maritime Zone between 1997 and 2003 inclusive.

Three prosecutions commenced in 2004 in relation to two separate vessels, and involving two defendants (limited companies). Appeals are pending in relation to two of the three resulting convictions. Two prosecutions took place in 2005 in relation to one vessel involving two defendants (one limited company and one individual). This last prosecution resulted in a conviction and a substantial fine. Following the failure of the vessel owners to pay the fine, the South Georgia Government seized the vessel and, after removing from it all potential pollutants, scuttled it in Falkland Islands' waters.

The territorial waters around the British Antarctic Territory fall under the remit of the Antarctic Treaty and the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources. Fishing in these waters is confined to Krill. No illegal fishing has been reported. No prosecutions have taken place.

Illegal Whaling

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many illegal whalers were prosecuted for activities in and around (a) the Antarctic, (b) South Georgia and (c) the South Sandwich Islands in each of the last eight years. [36079]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him today (UIN 36081). Whaling in waters adjacent to the Antarctic is regulated by the International Whaling Commission. We are not aware of any prosecutions in Antarctic waters.

The Government of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands operates intensive fisheries surveillance/enforcement within its 200-nautical-mile maritime zone. Illegal whalers within the zone would therefore almost certainly be detected. There have been no recorded instances of whaling vessels in South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands waters, nor consequently any prosecutions in the last eight years.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to protect whales in and around (a) the Antarctic, (b) South Georgia and (c) the South Sandwich Islands. [36081]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: All great whale species are included in the moratorium on commercial whaling introduced by the International Whaling Commission (IWC) in 1985–86. The Government strongly support the retention of the IWC moratorium. Scientific research whaling, which is permitted under the 1946 International Convention for the Regulation of Whaling, is not covered by the moratorium. The Southern Ocean Sanctuary was established by the IWC in 1994 as a protected area for whales.

Commercial whaling in the waters of the 200-nautical mile Maritime Zone of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands is prohibited by the Fisheries (Conservation and Management) Ordinance 2000, as amended.

Iran

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made towards the return of British military equipment confiscated by the Iranians in the summer; and if he will make a statement. [37455]

Dr. Howells: We have pressed the Iranian authorities on numerous occasions, at both ministerial and senior official level, in Tehran and London, to return the boats and equipment they have detained since June 2004. Our discussions are on-going.

Israel

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met representatives of the Israeli Government to discuss Israel's commitment to phase 1 of the Roadmap; and if he will make a statement about Israel's progress to date. [36941]

Dr. Howells: Since disengagement, both my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I have met with members of the Israeli Government to discuss progress on their Roadmap commitments. Israel remains committed to making progress against the Roadmap.

We believe that there is an opportunity to build upon the current momentum created by disengagement and the Rafah Movement and Access Agreement.

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met representatives of the Israeli Government to discuss Israel's policy of home demolition. [36942]

Dr. Howells: We are greatly concerned by the demolition of Palestinian homes and property. We most recently raised this issue on 6 December, when the British ambassador in Tel Aviv spoke to the director general of the Israeli Ministry of Foreign Affairs, expressing our concerns over the proposal to reinstate the policy of punitive house demolitions. The ambassador also set out our concerns to the chief of general staff (Lt. Gen. Dan Halutz) on 8 December.

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the Israeli security barrier on the Palestinian economy. [36943]

Dr. Howells: The routing of the separation barrier restricts the freedom of movement of both Palestinian people and goods in and around the West Bank. This has a detrimental effect on the Palestinian economy. We have made no specific assessment on the effects the barrier has on the Palestinian economy. We continue to raise this matter with the Israeli Government.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1028W, on Israel, if he will raise his concerns about the indiscriminate damage caused by low-flying aircraft in Gaza with the UN. [38014]

Dr. Howells: Our voting record at the United Nations (UN) will continue to reflect our concerns regarding Israel's military actions in the Occupied Territories. The damage caused by the low flying aircraft is reported at the UN's monthly briefings. We have no plans to raise our concerns with the UN but we will continue to raise this with the Israeli Government. The ambassador in Tel Aviv raised this issue with the Israeli Defence Force Chief of General Staff on 8 December.

Longline Fisheries

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government will take steps to reduce the use of longline fisheries in the waters around (a) South Georgia, (b) the South Sandwich Islands and (c) the British Antarctic Territory. [36084]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The longline fishery for Patagonian toothfish around South Georgia provides the mainstay revenues for the Territory.

The fishery is undertaken in a sustainable way, in line with Total Allowable Catches (TACs) and stringent conservation measures determined by an international body, the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources (CCAMLR). This year, CCAMLR agreed to a limited TAC of 100 tonnes for the South Sandwich Islands, linked to detailed scientific research, and a TAG for South Georgia of 3,556 tonnes.

Vessel quotas and conservation measures are strictly enforced by the Government of South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands, supported by a comprehensive programme of scientific research. All toothfish fisheries in the South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands (SGSSI) 200-nautical-mile Maritime Zone operate strict mitigating measures to minimise by-catch of non-target species. As a result of these efforts, the incidental catch of seabirds in these fisheries is virtually nil.

The South Georgia toothfish fishery received official recognition for the sustainable way in which it is managed when it was awarded Marine Stewardship Council certification in March 2004. It is the only fishery in the Southern Ocean to have received such certification.

Given these factors, the Government see no need to change the method of fishing for toothfish in the waters around SGSSI.

No longline fisheries are permitted in the waters adjacent to the British Antarctic Territory.

Mexico

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of (a) the relationship between Venezuela and Mexico, and (b) the effect of the decision to withdraw ambassadors. [36665]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: A disagreement between Mexico and Venezuela, including over a possible Free Trade Area of the Americas, has led to the withdrawal of their ambassadors from Caracas and Mexico City respectively. We consider this to be a bilateral issue between the two Governments.

Mockbul Ali

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what position in his Department Mr. Mockbul Ali was appointed to in the past five years; what the date was of the appointment; what its remit was; and what selection process was used in making the appointment. [37992]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office does not comment publicly on the contract of employment for individual members of staff.

Nigel Potter

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the US authorities about the case of Mr. Nigel Potter, ex-chief executive of Wembley plc. [37879]

Ian Pearson: We are aware of the passage of Mr. Potter's case through the US courts. Mr. Potter has legal representation. We are unable to directly interfere in the US Judicial process but we will continue to provide Mr. Potter with appropriate consular assistance.

Nuclear Missiles (Security)

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) of 27 October 2005, Official Report, column 522W, on nuclear missiles (security), if he will list the projects the United Kingdom supports under the Global Partnership; how much has been paid to each; and if he will make a statement on performance in improving material security. [37677]

Dr. Howells: The Government have implemented a major portfolio of projects in Russia as part of the UK's contribution to the Global Partnership and details of all our projects are published in an annual report published every December. The 2005 report will be published on 21 December and copies placed in the Library of the House. Some £35 million was spent on UK Global Partnership nuclear projects in 2004–05 and forecast spend for 2005–06 is around £37 million. Many of the projects we support under the UK Global Partnership Programme contribute to the enhanced security of nuclear materials, including through the retraining of former weapons scientists and engineers and the associated creation of sustainable employment in the closed nuclear cities. Projects include work to ensure the safe and secure storage of around 20,000 Spent Nuclear Fuel Assemblies from nuclear submarines at Andreeva Bay, work to enhance the physical protection of civilian nuclear institutes and the training of guard commanders at key Russian nuclear establishments. We are working closely with other donor countries to co-ordinate work on improving material security at a number of sites across Russia, to determine priorities and ensure sustainable improvements are made from our grant-aid. We believe that our growing portfolio of nuclear security projects will substantially enhance the security of materials stored at facilities in Russia. Project specifications are agreed with Government experts in the UK's Office of Civil and Nuclear Security and implementation of projects closely monitored by private sector project managers.

Old Whaling Stations (Pollution)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to prevent pollution from old whaling stations from damaging the environment around (a) South Georgia, (b) the South Sandwich Islands and (c) the British Antarctic Territory. [36075]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Work has recently been completed on the clean-up of the former whaling station at Grytviken, which now presents no hazard to wildlife or to those who visit or work in this area of South Georgia. However, the South Georgia Government are aware that the derelict whaling stations at Stromness, Husvik and Leith Harbour present similar hazards to those previously present at Grytviken, largely in the form of asbestos, heavy fuel oil and collapsing buildings. There are no whaling stations in the South Sandwich Islands.

No funds are currently available to the South Georgia Government to carry out the clean-up of these other whaling stations, although it is hoped that it will be possible to undertake some of this work (mostly on the clean-up of heavy fuel oils) in the event of an increase in income from the licensing of fishing around South Georgia. Meanwhile, signs have been erected around the former whaling stations at Stromness, Husvik and Leith Harbour warning visitors not to approach within 200 metres of them due to the hazards presented by the asbestos and dangerous structures.

The British Antarctic Survey (BAS) undertook clean-up work at the site of a former UK base (and former Norwegian whaling station) at Deception Island, South Shetland Islands in 1992. This work included the removal of 500 drums of waste fuel and debris. A further 45 m^3 of waste, including asbestos and other hazards, was removed by BAS in April 2004.

The site has now been designated as Historic Site and Monument (HSM) No. 71 under the Antarctic treaty, and forms part of the Deception Island Antarctic specially managed area. A conservation strategy for HSM 71 allows for the ongoing clean-up of debris resulting from the gradual deterioration of the buildings and other structures.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much has been spent in each of the last eight years on removing pollutants from the whaling stations and other whaling industry sites around (a) South Georgia, (b) the South Sandwich Islands and (c) the British Antarctic Territory. [36083]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Work was carried out in 2003 and 2004 to remove hazardous substances, mainly asbestos but also including heavy fuel oils, from the whaling station at Grytviken, South Georgia; and to make the whaling station safe for visitors and those who work at Grytviken and King Edward Point. The total cost of the project was £6.7 million. This was met from South Georgia Government funds. Around 3,000 cubic metres of asbestos were safely removed and disposed of by burial on site. The work was carried out to full UK standards.

There are no whaling stations in the South Sandwich Islands.

The clean-up undertaken at Deception Island in 2004 was part of a wider clean-up of abandoned bases in the Antarctic Peninsula. The total cost of this work undertaken by the British Antarctic Survey during the 2003–04 austral summer at three sites, including Deception Island, was £434,000.

Overseas Missions

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list overseas missions of his Department which have closed since 1997; and on what date each (a) opened and (b) closed. [38223]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO)has closed 26 overseas missions since 1997. The following table provides further details. In most cases, the financial year in which the post had opened or closed has been given because we do not keep a record centrally of more detailed information, and in any event there is not a clear date on which a mission closes. Like any well-run organisation, the FCO continues to realign its resources flexibly in line with UK interests.

Petrel Populations

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to protect the petrel populations around (a) South Georgia, (b) the South Sandwich Islands and (c) the British Antarctic Territory. [36066]

Jim Knight: I have been asked to reply.

As a party to the Agreement on the Conservation of Albatrosses and Petrels, the UK supports the Agreement Secretariat in its efforts to protect petrels throughout their range, which includes South Georgia, the South Sandwich Islands and the British Antarctic Territory.

This year Defra have contributed additional project funding of £35,000 to support activities agreed at the first Advisory Committee Meeting of the Agreement. One such activity is the creation of a database of population status and trends for breeding sites, which will include South Georgia, the South Sandwich Islands and the British Antarctic Territories.

In addition the joint Foreign and Commonwealth Office/Department for International Development's Overseas Territories Environment Programme has allocated £100,000 to the South Georgia Giant Petrel and White-chinned Petrel conservation programme.

Poland

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to seek the restitution of property owned by British subjects and taken by the Communist regime in Poland after the Second World War. [36800]

Dr. Howells: There is currently no property restitution law in Poland. A draft law was under discussion in the previous Polish Parliament, prior to elections on 25 September 2005. The new Government will probably look at the issue anew, so it is unlikely that a new property restitution law will be agreed soon. It is possible to pursue claims through the Polish courts, but the British embassy in Warsaw does not have sufficient resources to assist individual cases. A list of English-speaking lawyers is, however, provided on request. We have lobbied the previous Polish Government to improve the law in the area of property restitution on behalf of all British citizens with claims, and we will do the same with the new Government.

Private Military Companies

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Cheltenham (Mr. Horwood) of 2 December 2005, Official Report, column 879W, on private military companies, what the duration is of the contracts with (a) ArmorGroup and (b) Control Risks Group; whether the contracts specify particular locations; and whether they include employment of local labour. [36876]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has two security contracts with Amorgroup Services. The first is for an armed guarding force in Iraq, which expires on 30 June 2006. The second is for close protection teams in Afghanistan, which expires in December 2005 but has an option to extend for two years.

The FCO has three security contracts with Control Risks Group. One is for close protection teams in Iraq, which expires on 30 June 2006. The second provides armed guarding forces in Saudi Arabia, which expires in September 2006 but has an option to renew for one year. The third is to provide guard forces for our missions in Beijing, Hong Kong, Cairo and Moscow, which expires in September 2006 but has an option to extend for two years.

The contracts do not refer to the employment of local labour but both companies employ local nationals to support their operations.

The Iraq security contracts are due to be re-tendered next year.

Public Appointments

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by his Department, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [36684]

Dr. Howells: Joyce Quin (Labour Party) was appointed to the Wilton Park Academic Council in November 2005 by my noble Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Lord Triesman of Tottenham).

Saddam Hussein

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the UK Government have given the Iraqi court conducting the trial of Saddam Hussein. [37522]

Dr. Howells: The Government have provided capacity building training to the Iraqi High Tribunal (formerly known as the Iraqi Special Tribunal) in international law and procedures for trial judges, prosecutors and investigators. The Government also funded the visit of a witness protection expert in August 2005 and contributed to an international fund to provide an International Special Adviser to the trial chamber.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on (a) the security situation and (b) the strength of democratic institutions in Sierra Leone. [36572]

Ian Pearson: The overall security situation in Sierra Leone is generally calm, but fragile. We agree with the United Nations (UN) assessment that the situation is sufficiently improved to allow the full departure of the UN Mission in Sierra Leone (UNAMSIL) by the end of 2005. There has been progress on improving the training, leadership and professionalism of the Sierra Leone army and police forces. A UK-led International Military Assistance and Training Team (IMATT) has aided much of this reform by close co-operation with the army, and will remain in Sierra Leone until at least 2010. They currently have approximately 100 personnel in country. We have also provided support to the police in a training and reform programme, which has left them better able to deal with internal security. Following the arrest of opposition leader Mr. Charles Margai, the police have so far dealt in a competent and low-key way with resulting public disturbances.

Sierra Leonean institutions remain generally weak and lacking in capacity. Much has been achieved since the end of hostilities in 2002, but much work remains. An Anti-Corruption Commission is functioning well. A civil service reform programme is under way. Local councils exist, but lack capacity and resources. The judiciary is overstretched and under-resourced. Parliament lacks the necessary resources to allow it to exercise full powers of oversight. The UK is assisting in the development of democratic institutions, including assistance to the judiciary and police through a £25 million project, assistance to the civil service reform programme and wide-ranging governance and anti-corruption support. But the 11 years of civil war have left enormous deficits in institutional capacity, which is slow to recover.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the personal security and freedom of Charles Margai, opposition leader in Sierra Leone. [36573]

Ian Pearson: Mr. Charles Margai, leader of the Peoples Movement for Democratic Change (PMDC) was arrested on 7 December, and transferred to Bo for legal proceedings to begin. He was bailed by Bo Magistrates Court on 8 December. His court hearing is scheduled for 16 December. The charges relate to incidents on 18 November in Bo, when supporters of Mr. Margai clashed with the entourage of Solomon Berewa, the Vice President.

We have called on all parties, their leaders and supporters in Sierra Leone to act moderately and responsibly, and to avoid any actions or statements that could intensify the situation. We further hope that the court proceedings against Mr. Margai will proceed swiftly, and according to due process. Through our high commission in Freetown we remain in close touch with all parties, including those acting in Mr. Margai's defence, and we continue to monitor developments closely.

Sir Christopher Meyer

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, columns 164–66W, on Sir Christopher Meyer, if he will place in the Library copies of (a) all relevant correspondence from (i) Sir Christopher Meyer and (ii) his publishers and (b) the responses to that correspondence. [37878]

Dr. Howells: Copies of the correspondence between the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Sir Christopher Meyer and between the Cabinet Office and his publishers about his book have been placed in the Library of the House.

South East Asia

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking to encourage the protection of religious freedoms in South East Asia. [37166]

Ian Pearson: The promotion of human rights, including freedom of thought, conscience and religion, is central to our foreign policy. We condemn instances where individuals are persecuted because of their faith or belief, wherever they happen and whatever the religion of the individual or group concerned.

Where states fail to implement their obligations under international human rights law, we consider what action we can take on a case-by-case basis and we continue to raise our concerns in relevant international fora. Both bilaterally and with our EU partners, we regularly raise specific cases of religious persecution with the governments concerned, and take every opportunity to urge states to pursue laws and practices which foster tolerance and mutual respect and to protect religious minorities against discrimination, intimidation and attacks.

We take every appropriate opportunity to press the governments in the region to adhere to their international human rights obligations and to guarantee the right of all religious groups to practice their faith freely.

Sudan

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the current situation in the Darfur region of Sudan; and if he will make a statement. [37102]

Ian Pearson: We remain very concerned about the situation in Darfur. In his latest report, the United Nations Secretary General notes that while there have been fewer attacks between the parties, the security situation remains poor. Banditry and lawlessness are rife, and continue to hamper the delivery of humanitarian supplies, particularly in south and west Darfur. We have made clear that this violence, and particularly attacks on humanitarian workers, are unacceptable. We are encouraging anyone with information on the perpetrators to pass it to the relevant bodies for consideration under United Nations Security Council Resolutions 1591 and 1593.

We continue to press the parties to rein in their fighters and to reach a political agreement. The seventh round of Darfur peace talks began in Abuja on 29 November. The UK fully supports the African Union-led mediation team and has provided financial and technical assistance to the talks. We also plan to maintain our observer presence throughout the talks.

Sugar Regime

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact that the new EU reductions in sugar subsidies will have on Caribbean (a) agricultural economies and (b) Caribbean communities in other countries. [36147]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We recognise the consequences that the reforms to the EU Sugar Regime agreed at the 24 November Agriculture Council may have on some African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) sugar producers with preferential access to the EU market. However, we welcome the overall agreement in the broader context of reforming the EU's Common Agricultural Policy and the benefits this will bring to many developing countries. Furthermore, the sugar reforms will see a smaller price cut and a longer adjustment period than originally proposed. This will give the ACP a better opportunity to adapt to the reforms.

The EU will provide transitional assistance to help ACP producers improve their efficiency in the sugar sector where feasible or diversify into more profitable sectors. Ensuring that credible and timely transitional assistance is in place remains a priority for the UK.

In September 2003, the Department for International Development (DfID) commissioned consultants (LMC International Ltd) to produce an independent report into the impact that EU sugar reform would have by 2015 on the ACP countries that are party to the Sugar Protocol. This work was updated in June 2005, after the Commission put forward its proposals but before agreement was reached on the shape of the reforms. It therefore assumes a 39 per cent. price cut rather than the actual 36 per cent.

More recent assessments have been carried out by European Commission funded consultants, who again assumed a 39 per cent. price cut. For example, in Jamaica the consultants concluded that this would reduce the value of sugar export revenues from 6.9 per cent. of total exports to 4.9 per cent. and reduce GDP by 0.8 per cent. over four years.

My noble Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Parliamentary Under-secretary of State, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, discussed the impact of reform of the EU sugar regime on the Caribbean at a meeting in London in October with members of the Caribbean British Business Council, which represents British businesses with interests in the Caribbean. The subject was also discussed at the UK Caribbean Business Forum in London in June, which brought together Ministers and leading businessmen from the UK and the Caribbean.

Currently, DFID is working with Caribbean countries affected by the reforms to help them draw up the country plans through which the EU's transitional assistance will be delivered.

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether discussions are under way with the EU to determine the criteria that will be used to determine how much Caribbean sugar protocol nations will receive from the euro transitional assistance budget proposed to ease the impact of the reduction in sugar prices over the next four years. [36438]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: There have been some preliminary discussions about how to allocate transitional assistance for Africa Caribbean and Pacific countries to adjust to sugar reforms. The Commission have said that allocations will be based on the needs of each country, in particular on the impact of the reform on the sugar sector in the country concerned and on the relative importance of the sugar sector in the economy. The Caribbean countries involved are working to develop their country plans to determine how assistance could best be used. Given the impact that sugar reform will have on some of the Caribbean countries involved, they should be well placed to qualify for their fair share of assistance under the criteria the Commission are developing.

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he took to ensure that the concerns of British businesses with interests in Jamaica, Guyana and Belize were taken into account in the reform of the EU sugar regime. [36460]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My noble Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Lord Triesman of Tottenham), discussed the impact of reform of the EU sugar regime on the Caribbean at a meeting in London in October with members of the Caribbean British Business Council, which represents British businesses with interests in the Caribbean. The subject was also discussed at the UK Caribbean Business Forum in London in June, which brought together Ministers and leading businessmen from the UK and the Caribbean. Our high commissions in the region have also maintained regular contact with such businesses.

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether an impact study was carried out on the crime and security implications for the UK of the decision to cut sugar prices in Caribbean nations known to be tran-shipment points for narcotics and small arms to the UK. [36461]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Through our contacts with Governments, business and civil society in the Caribbean, we are aware that a reduction in the EU sugar price will have social consequences for those deriving an income from sugar production. That is why the EU will provide transitional assistance to help Caribbean producers improve their efficiency in the sugar sector where feasible or diversify into more profitable sectors. Ensuring that credible and timely transitional assistance is in place remains a priority for the UK. The Department for International Development (DFID) are collaborating with the World Bank to assess the implications of the EU reforms.

DFID, Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Ministry of Defence continue to assist Caribbean Governments and their security and law enforcement agencies in their fight against drugs trans-shipment and organised crime.

Tactica Vehicles

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what export licences have been granted for the export to Indonesia of (a) Tactica vehicles and (b) spare parts for Tactica vehicles since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [36854]

Dr. Howells: The UK is committed to maintaining one of the most rigorous and transparent arms export control systems in the world. Information on export licensing decisions is published by destination in the Government's Annual and Quarterly Reports on Strategic Export Controls, available at http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1091037171526. The Government cannot provide information on the suppliers of specific exports, as this would breach commercial confidentiality.

Tortured Detainees

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to other EU Governments on investigating allegations that detainees held by other states may have been tortured in their countries. [37041]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 14 December 2005]: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has discussed these allegations with his EU counterparts. Following those discussions, he—as EU presidency—wrote to the US Secretary of State, Condoleeza Rice, about the allegations. The US Secretary of State issued a public statement on this subject on 5 December, and sent a copy of that statement to my right hon. Friend on 6 December by way of reply to his letter. He has communicated this response to his EU counterparts.

Travel Costs

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the additional cost of (a) his and (b) his officials' early return from Moscow to permit him to vote in the proceedings in the Terrorism Bill. [28110]

Mr. Douglas Alexander [pursuant to the reply, 16 November 2005, Official Report, c. 1268W]: Regarding the total cost of the charter aircraft, the charter company has now informed us that the total cost of the charter was £96,400, which included an additional £28,200 for diverting through the UK on 9 November, £2,000 less than given in my reply.

UN Convention Against Corruption

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 2 December 2005, Official Report, column 881W, on the UN Convention Against Corruption, if he will list the organisations his Department met to discuss the convention; and on what dates each meeting took place. [36842]

Ian Pearson: Discussions on the United Nations Convention Against Corruption (UNCAC) have formed part of the regular contact between the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and a wide range of external stakeholders with an interest in anti-corruption issues. It would be impossible in practice to provide a comprehensive list of all such contacts with every stakeholder since the negotiations for UNCAC began. The principal contacts on this issue have been with the Department for International Development, the Home Office, Transparency International and business associations such as the Confederation of British Industry and the International Chamber of Commerce.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 2 December 2005, Official Report, column 881W, on the UN Convention Against Corruption, if he will place in the Library the minutes of the meetings his Department held with the International Chamber of Commerce and the Confederation of British Industry at which the convention was discussed. [36843]

Ian Pearson: Discussions on the United Nations Convention Against Corruption (UNCAC) have formed part of the many contacts between the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the International Chamber of Commerce and the Confederation of British Industry, as well as with NGOs and many other interested parties. Even where fully recorded, it would be inappropriate to reveal the content of contacts that were intended to remain confidential between the parties involved.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library the representations he has received from (a) businesses, (b) business organisations and (c) non-governmental organisations on the UK signing and ratification of the UN Convention Against Corruption. [36847]

Ian Pearson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave today (UIN 36843).

UN Firearms Protocol

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government will ratify the UN Firearms Protocol. [36849]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Government remains committed to ratifying the United Nations (UN) Firearms Protocol. However the UK and other EU member states believe that, as first step, the European Weapons Directive needs to be amended to bring it into line with the UN Firearms Protocol. We are working with the European Commission and EU member states to achieve this.

UN Security Council

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department has taken during the UK presidency of the EU to promote European consensus on reform of the UN Security Council. [37920]

Dr. Howells: At the United Nations (UN) World Summit in September, the EU agreed on the need to reform the main UN bodies, including the Security Council, to enhance the representativeness, transparency and efficiency of the UN system. Given strongly held views among EU partners on how the Security Council should be reformed, there is no EU consensus on a particular model of reform.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on reform of the UN Security Council. [37921]

Dr. Howells: At the United Nations (UN) 2005 World Summit, all 191 member states agreed that reform of the Security Council was an essential element of the overall UN reform agenda. The UK has long-supported such reform to ensure that the work of the Security Council is more representative, effective and transparent. At a Foreign and Commonwealth Office event marking the 60th anniversary of the UN in June, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, reiterated the Government's position that > "we want to see a Security Council which reflects today's world and the contributions of the UN's members to its objectives. The UK therefore supports the expansion of both the permanent and non-permanent membership, with permanent representation for Japan, Germany, India and Brazil, and for Africa".

The UK is also committed to enhancing the Security Council's working methods, including holding more Council discussions in public, expanding the involvement of interested countries, and holding more frequent meetings with troop contributing countries.

UN Standing Fund

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had regarding the establishment of a standing fund within the UN to allow it to respond more effectively to emergencies. [35763]

Mr. Thomas: I have been asked to reply.

At the UN Millennium Review summit (MRS) in September (2005 in New York), my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn) argued for support from other donor countries for a revised and expanded UN Central Emergency Revolving Fund (CERF), and along with the UK, six other countries pledged annual donations (Sweden $40 million, Netherlands $12 million, Ireland $12 million, Switzerland $4 million, Luxembourg $4 million, and Norway $30 million over two years).

Since the summit, my right hon. Friend and I have raised this in a number of meetings including the EU Informal Humanitarian Aid Committee in October.

The Commonwealth Heads of Governments Meeting in November, and the informal meeting of EU Development Ministers in Leeds in October.

Senior officials have discussed the CERF during meetings in recent months with interested donors such as the US (in October) and New Zealand (in November). My right hon. Friend has also written to non-traditional donors. British embassies have lobbied for support from Argentina, Brazil, Brunei, India, Indonesia, Jordan, Mexico and Qatar. The CERF was discussed when my right hon. Friend met the NGO consortium British Overseas Aid Group recently, and officials have covered the CERF during recent wider discussions on the reform package with the NGO community.

Venezuela

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the relationship between Venezuela and Bolivia, with particular reference to reports of Venezuelan interference in Bolivian domestic politics. [36830]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We are aware of recent allegations of Venezuelan interference in Bolivian domestic politics, including comments made by the Venezuelan Chargé d'affaires in Bolivia, and continue to monitor the situation. We consider this issue is first and foremost a bilateral matter between the two countries.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effects of Venezuela selling oil to Caribbean and Central American countries at concessionary rates; and if he will make a statement. [36831]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We are following Venezuela's oil agreements with a number of countries and other parties with close interest. It is up to those involved to assess whether the terms involved make sense or not—some have chosen to accept the terms, others have not. It will be some time before the full economic and political impact of these agreements is seen.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effects of Venezuela offering free medical treatment to patients in a number of Caribbean countries; and if he will make a statement. [36832]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We welcome any constructive efforts to enhance the delivery of healthcare in the Caribbean region where there are a number of real needs. In this respect, free medical treatment is most welcome.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the relationship between Venezuela and the United States of America; with particular reference to the sale of discounted heating oil to Massachusetts by Venezuela. [36833]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Bilateral relations between Venezuela and the United States (US) are a matter for the two countries concerned.

We understand that Citgo Petroleum Corporation, a US registered company owned by the Venezuelan Government, is providing discounted oil to low-income communities in the US, including in New York and Massachusetts. A US State Department spokesman has recently commented that the US regards this as an > "issue of an American company helping American people, which is good and right and proper".

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of (a) relations between Venezuela and Jamaica and (b) the implications of those relations for (i) UK-Venezuela relations, (ii) UK-Jamaican relations and (iii) the wider region. [36834]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We understand that relations between Venezuela and Jamaica are good and have recently been enhanced by an agreement signed between them under the "PetroCaribe Agreement". We do not believe that this relationship has made any significant difference to the good relations we have with Jamaica or Venezuela, or to relations within the Caribbean.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the likely effect on the Venezuelan agricultural sector of Venezuela joining Mercosur; and if he will make a statement. [36835]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Although an announcement on Venezuelan membership of Mercosur has been made, it is not yet clear what the practical implications of this will be. Therefore, we cannot at this stage make any judgments about specific sectoral impact, namely the agricultural sector. We understand that the European Commission, on behalf of the EU, is currently reviewing the situation, and will continue to do so as more information becomes available.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the likely effect of Venezuela's membership of Mercosur on the Free Trade Area of the Americas. [36836]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Although an announcement on Venezuelan membership of Mercosur has been made, it is not yet clear what the practical implications of this will be. Therefore, it is not currently possible to make an assessment of the effect of Venezuelan membership of Mercosur on the proposal for a Free Trade Area of the Americas.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the account of the situation in Zimbabwe given on 7 December by the UN Under-Secretary for Humanitarian Affairs; and what action he is proposing to take in the United Nations as a result. [37140]

Ian Pearson: We share Mr. Egeland's, United Nations (UN) Under-Secretary for Humanitarian Affairs, concern following his visit to Zimbabwe that "the humanitarian situation in Zimbabwe is extremely serious and worsening". We regret that instead of accepting UN assistance, President Mugabe has chosen to vilify the UN and Mr. Egeland following that visit. The Government of Zimbabwe must shift, in the interests of all Zimbabweans, from a policy of confrontation to a policy of co-operation with the international community, including with the UN.

Mr. Egeland briefed the UN Security Council on 19 December on humanitarian issues in Africa, at which the UK raised the issue of Zimbabwe.

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures his Department is taking both bilaterally and within international organisations to support the movement for democratic change in Zimbabwe. [37310]

Ian Pearson: The Government does not support any political party in Zimbabwe. We do support all those working for peaceful democratic change, including non-governmental organisations, human rights activists, lawyers and civil society groups. We also work closely with the United Nations and our international partners to address the political and economic crisis in Zimbabwe, to help provide for Zimbabweans' basic needs such as food and healthcare, and to help restore democratic norms, including the rule of law, human rights, freedom of speech, freedom of association, an independent media, and Government accountability.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Asian Tsunami

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether the commitment by the Foreign Secretary of 3 January 2005 that the Government would match those funds donated by the public to the Asian tsunami fund has been honoured in full; and how the Government's matched funds have been spent. [38289]

Mr. Thomas: The UK Government have allocated the equivalent of around £290 million to disaster relief and reconstruction in the Tsunami-affected countries. Funds donated by the public to the Disasters Emergency Committee have totalled some £450 million.

Government funding can be broken down into:

75 million of our bilateral funds to the humanitarian relief effort; an additional 65 million to the longer-term reconstruction phase;

an estimated 50 million through tax relief on public donations made through the Gift Aid Scheme; contributions through the European Community (EC). The EC has already committed £123 million in humanitarian assistance and up to €350 million for longer-term reconstruction. The UK's share of this would be approximately £55 million; debt relief. Following the tsunami, the UK announced that Sri Lanka would be eligible for the UK's multilateral debt relief initiative (MDRI). Under this initiative, the UK will pay our share (10 per cent. or around £45 million) of Sri Lanka's debt service costs to the World Bank until 2015.

DFID has provided two consultants to work with the authorities and partners in Aceh Indonesia.

Reconstruction will take many years to complete and funds will be programmed accordingly. The priority now is to ensure that funds already committed by the UK and other donors are effectively spent. The Government are working closely with the governments of Indonesia and Sri Lanka on the longer-term reconstruction effort. The UK Government will not provide financing in excess of need. The Government will continue to keep under review the financing needs of the tsunami-affected countries.

Biosafety Protocol

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations he has made to the United Nations about the application of the Biosafety Protocol to biotechnology companies whose products may cause environmental damage. [38215]

Mr. Thomas: Neither myself nor my right. hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn) have made any representations to the United Nations of this kind.

The Biosafety Protocol is an international treaty, which applies to countries that have signed and ratified it. Parties to the Protocol may introduce national legislation which relates to the activities of biotechnology companies in their countries.

The UK, in line with the European Union (EU), has implemented the Biosafety Protocol within its domestic legislation and this legislation applies to companies which operate within the EU.

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations he has made to (a) the United States, (b) Argentina and (c) Canada regarding their ratification of the Biosafety Protocol. [38756]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

We have regular contacts with the US, Canadian and Argentinean Administrations on a wide range of international environmental issues, including the importance of having the broadest possible membership of Cartagena Protocol. Officials have, for example, recently been in touch with their counterparts in Argentina to explore their latest plans to ratify the Protocol. The Government's view is that we need to encourage more countries to ratify the Protocol, especially major agricultural exporters, such as the United States, Canada and Argentina. If agricultural exporters fail to sign up to the Protocol, the global status of GM products approved in those countries that have not signed the Protocol will be uncertain, and confidence in the safety of the products of new biotechnology will suffer.

Brazil

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the effects of Soya planting in Brazil on local communities in Parana. [38366]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has not made any assessment of the effects of Soya planting on local communities in Parana. Parana is a small state in the south of Brazil. DFID's programme has focused on the poorest areas of the country, particularly the North and Northeast, and on national level initiatives.

The rural economy in Parana is characterised by small family-run farms. Soya cultivation, on the other hand, is generally highly mechanised and managed by wealthy large scale producers. A switch to Soya production could therefore lead to an increase in rural unemployment and further migration to urban areas.

Burundi

Mr. Joyce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support the UK has provided to the demobilisation process in Burundi. [35703]

Hilary Benn: The UK is a major contributor to the Multi-Country Demobilisation and Re-integration Programme (MDRP), a World Bank-managed regional programme which provides the framework for demobilisation and re-integration activities in the Great Lakes Region, including Burundi. We have committed $25 million to the MDRP and have funded a number of complementary activities in Burundi. To date, over 19,458 combatants, including child soldiers, have been demobilised.

Central Asia (Aid)

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans he has for UK bilateral aid to (a) Tajikistan and (b) Kyrgzystan between 2005–06 and 2007–08. [38565]

Mr. Thomas: In 2005–06, DFID has committed £3 million to Tajikistan and £5.6 million to the Kyrgyz Republic in bilateral aid. In addition, we have agreed a £7 million contribution to a 5 year multi-donor programme of support to the health sector in the Kyrgyz Republic, the first £3 million of which we hope to disburse in 2005–06. We have also committed £6.4 million to a regional programme to combat HIV/AIDS in Tajikistan, the Kyrgyz Republic and Uzbekistan between 2005–06 and 2008–09. This includes £1.8 million in bilateral support to each country and a £1 million contribution to a World Bank regional project.

DFID has not yet finalised bilateral aid allocations for 2006–07 and 2007–08. We plan to increase our allocations to Tajikistan and the Kyrgyz Republic, which are the two poorest countries in Central Asia. We have strengthened the DFID office in the Kyrgyz Republic and are doing so in Tajikistan, to enable us to engage more effectively with governments and donors and to increase the scope and impact of our programmes.

Child Soldiers

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance his Department provided to charities for the rehabilitation of child soldiers in Sierra Leone and other African countries in the last five years. [37453]

Hilary Benn: DFID has funded a range of charities and UN agencies supporting the rehabilitation of child soldiers in Africa over the last five years. In Sierra Leone all child combatants were disarmed as part of the extensive Disarmament Demobilisation and Re-integration (DDR) process undertaken at the end of the war. DFID provided £12.4 million in support of this programme. DFID recognises the problems faced by former child combatants in re-integrating back into their communities and we have previously provided funding to support skills training and other activities for child ex-combatants. DFID has in the past, provided core funding to the Office of the United Nations Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict (OSRSG/CAAC) whose programme has included advocacy work using ex-child combatants. More broadly across Africa as a whole we have funded the following organisations:

Rwanda

Save the Children study into improving conditions for girl soldiers in DDR processes—£20,000.

Uganda

Support to war affected children and youth in northern Uganda through a variety of organisations, including Save the Children, GUSCO (a local NGO) and UNICEF. This includes direct support to former child soldiers—£650,000.

The Democratic Republic of Congo (PRO

UNICEF—Launch of the Programme for the Disarmament, Demobilisation and Reintegration (DDR) of Children associated with armed groups in the Democratic Republic of Congo—£750,000.

Central Africa

UK contribution to Great Lakes Multi-Country Demobilisation and Reintegration Programme. Covers Angola, the DRC, Burundi, Rwanda, Central African Republic, Republic of Congo and Uganda. Child soldiers will be included within these activities. $25 million over five years. Approximately £14 million.

Sudan

UNICEF: Child soldier disarmament, demobilisation and the return, reunification and reintegration of vulnerable children—£505,000.

Preparatory Support Programme for DDR in Sudan. This will include a major focus on children associated with fighting forces—£2 million.

Liberia

UNICEF Liberia education and Re-integration for Children Associated with he Fighting Forces—£402,500.

Liberia Disarmament, Demobilisation, Rehabilitation and Re-integration Programme. Child soldiers will be included within these activities—£3 million.

Commission for Africa

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when he will implement the findings of the Commission for Africa, published in March with particular reference to trade justice rather than liberalisation; and if he will make a statement. [36877]

Hilary Benn: The Commission for Africa (CfA) was established in February 2004 and provided an opportunity to take a fresh look at Africa's past and present and the international community's role, and agree recommendations on the future. When the Prime Minister launched the CfA report on 11 March 2005, he committed to reflecting its recommendations in policy, and since then many of the recommendations have been reflected in commitments made by the G8 at Gleneagles and by the UN at the Millennium Review summit.

The G8 recognised the importance of a successful outcome to the World Trade Organisation (WTO) Doha Development Agenda (DDA) to generate growth and create the conditions for development. The WTO ministerial conference in Hong Kong represents an important opportunity to deliver real gains for developing countries. The UK Government are working to ensure that there is appropriate flexibility in the DDA negotiations to allow poor countries to decide, plan and sequence their economic reforms in line with their national programmes and priorities for development.

Developing countries should not be forced to open up their markets, either through trade negotiations, whether bilateral, multilateral or otherwise, or through aid conditionality, but should be allowed to choose the best policies for poor people and the environment.

Trade justice also requires a stronger link between trade and development. Many developing countries cannot take advantage of new trade opportunities resulting from more open markets because of significant human, institutional and infrastructural constraints. The UK is supporting a number of initiatives recommended by the CfA report which will help countries to overcome these constraints. The Department for International Development has committed to increase Aid For Trade to £100 million by 2010; has pledged $20 million to the Africa Infrastructure Consortium, to facilitate more effective infrastructure investments to promote economic growth and trade; and has committed $30 million over three years to the Investment Climate Facility, of which one area of focus will be to improve the efficiency of customs administrations across Africa.

The G8 endorsed commitments to increase funding for trade related capacity building. The UK continues to support this, providing assistance to African Governments and sub-regional institutions to develop and negotiate trade policy, for example with regards to WTO or EU Economic Partnership Agreements (EPA).

Consultants

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what mechanisms are in place to assess the effectiveness of consultant-led projects in his Department; what sanctions are available to penalise consultants who run unsuccessful projects; how many projects conducted by consultants were assessed as unsuccessful in each year since 2000; and what sanctions were imposed. [29063]

Hilary Benn: All DFID's contracts contain clear and explicit terms of reference drawn-up and agreed with our partners. The consultants performance is monitored, to ensure contracted services make their intended contribution to project outcomes.

No payments to consultants are made until DFID is satisfied with their output. If problems arise, the consultants are given the opportunity to take corrective action. If DFID remains dissatisfied, payment of received invoices is withheld and if necessary the contract would be terminated. Over the last three years, approximately five payments have been withheld. DFID has sole rights of termination which we have exercised on two occasions due to poor performance since 2000. DFID may also require the replacement, at no extra cost, of non-performing team members. If problems occur remedial action is usually satisfactory.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department takes to ensure that consultancies do not claim excessive expenses while working for the Department and its agencies. [29064]

Hilary Benn: A financial costing is agreed for each consultancy contract. Invoices are paid in arrears and are monitored to ensure costs comply with the contract. Random audit checks are also carried out.

Darfur

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when he last discussed the situation in Darfur with his Sudanese counterpart; and if he will make a statement. [37451]

Hilary Benn: I remain very concerned about the situation in Darfur,. When I visited Sudan in June 2005 I held detailed discussions with members of the Sudanese Government, including Vice President Taha and the then Minister for Humanitarian Affairs as well as representatives from the African Union and NGOs. Most recently, I discussed Darfur with the presidential adviser, Bona Malwal, in London on 30 November.

In his latest report, the UN Secretary General notes that while there have been fewer attacks between the parties, the security situation remains very poor. Banditry and lawlessness are rife, and continue to hamper the delivery of humanitarian supplies, particularly in South and West Darfur. We have made clear that this violence, and particularly attacks on humanitarian workers, are entirely unacceptable. We are encouraging anyone with information on the perpetrators to pass it to the relevant bodies for consideration under United Nations Security Council Resolutions 1591 and 1593.

We continue to press the parties to rein in their fighters and to reach a political agreement. The seventh round of Darfur peace talks began in Abuja on 29 November. The UK fully supports the AU-led mediation team and has provided financial and technical assistance to the talks. We also plan to maintain our observer presence throughout the talks.

Democratic Republic of Congo

Mr. Joyce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps the Government have taken to ensure the transparency and accountability of World Bank funds channelled through the Government of the Democratic Republic of Congo. [35702]

Hilary Benn: The World Bank's financial support to the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) is provided in accordance with the Bank's fiduciary standards. Funds given to the Government of the DRC as budget support are clearly registered as such in the budget and will have a specific budget line if they are for a particular programme or activity. Tracking and monitoring of the funds is done through the DRC's Public Expenditure Management Reform programme, which includes the requirement to publish monthly execution reports. There is specific reporting on the use of external contributions to the budget (e.g. World Bank budget support and Heavily Indebted Poor Country (HIPC) funds) and on areas such as health and education components to particularly track expenditures in these priority sectors.

The World Bank is working with the Government of the DRC to improve overall public financial management, for example through promoting the implementation of a fully computerised public accounting system complying with international standards, strengthening the role and capacity of government financial control institutions and reforming the public financial management education programme.

The World Bank and the International Monetary Fund are also working with the Government to improve the composition and efficiency of spending, in particular on health, education and rural development services that benefit the poor, to ensure that the authorities are able to spend increased resources (including from debt relief) efficiently and effectively.

DFID's office in Kinshasa works closely with the World Bank in promoting development and poverty reduction in the DRC. We monitor the reports from the World Bank on expenditure tracking and we also monitor progress on improvements in public expenditure management through discussions with the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund (IMF). We also use the UK's seat on the World Bank board in Washington to stay actively involved with the composition and performance of the World Bank's portfolio in the DRC.

Mr. Joyce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps the Government have taken to ensure that World Bank programmes in the Democratic Republic of Congo do not have a negative impact on the (a) rights and (b) livelihoods of those who depend on the integrity of the forest ecosystem. [35704]

Hilary Benn: The exploitation of the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC)'s forests has the potential to generate significant benefits for the country's people. But forestry resources need to be managed in a transparent and environmentally sustainable way, which both generates revenues and promotes the rights and livelihoods of forest dwellers. The UK is advocating this balanced approach to forest management in its engagement with all partners working on the issue in the DRC.

The World Bank provided support for development of the new DRC forestry code. The code is based on a forest classification system, which will delineate areas for commercial exploitation and community forestry. The code also provides for rights of access for traditional users, the transparent auctioning of forest concessions and the decentralised allocation of revenues.

Donors (led by the World Bank and the EC) are now discussing how best to support the implementation of the code. A multi-donor trust fund is planned. At the same time, and in recognition of the lack of implementation capacity on the ground, the World Bank is stressing the need to curb illegal and unsustainable exploitation. Two conditions; the continuation of the moratorium on the granting of new forestry concessions and a legal review of existing concessions, were attached to the most recent tranche of World Bank budget support. DFID supports this approach.

Progress in the forest sector has also been discussed with our EU partners under the UK's presidency of the EU in the DRC.

Mr. Joyce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what measures have been taken to ensure funds allocated by his Department are not diverted to pay the salaries of members of the armed forces of the Democratic Republic of Congo. [35705]

Hilary Benn: Salaries for soldiers in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC's) armed forces come from the DRC's national budget, not from donor funds. The UK has been active, however, in urging the Government of the DRC to ensure that its soldiers receive their salaries. A properly integrated, paid and trained national army is essential for consolidating peace and security in the DRC and the whole Great Lakes region. At present, soldiers rarely receive their salaries, creating insecurity for all as they prey on civilians to make ends meet.

While in the in DRC in November, I advised President Kabila that the UK (through the Africa Conflict Prevention Pool) would support the basic needs (sanitation and accommodation) of soldiers in newly integrated brigades. However, this support is conditional on the DRC Government ensuring that soldiers are properly paid, including through implementing the recommendations of the EU's advisory mission on Security Sector Reform (SSR). One of the key strands of this work is a project to reform the army pay system. It will see advisers seconded to each integrated brigade to oversee payment of the soldiers' salaries and to help ensure that the DRC's own money reaches the people it was destined for and is not diverted by corrupt senior officers. We expect the Government of the DRC to approve the report's recommendations shortly.

Mr. Joyce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the demobilisation process in the Democratic Republic of Congo. [35706]

Hilary Benn: The UK is concerned by the limited progress made by the demobilisation process in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC). Progress is slow because too few soldiers associated with the different "composants" of the transitional government are being encouraged and facilitated to enter the process. The UK, with the rest of the International Community, continues to press the Government of the Democratic Republic of Congo to accelerate its efforts in the implementation of the demobilisation and re-integration process. I personally urged President Kabila and other members of the transitional government to step up army integration and demobilisation of soldiers during my recent visit to Democratic Republic of Congo.

The International Committee Accompanying the Transition process in the DRC (CIAT)—in which the UK is a very active member) has repeatedly pushed the Congolese transitional government for more progress in this area. The CIAT released a very strong statement in early December urging the Government of the DRC to speed up both the integration of the army and demobilisation of ex-combatants. The international community, including the UK, are providing substantial direct support to the demobilisation process. The UK is putting $25 million over 5 years into the World Bank's Multi-Country Demobilisation and Reintegration Programme (MDRP), covering nine countries including the DRC.

Departmental Estate

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which buildings and sites used by his Department and related agencies (a) have ceased to be used in the last year and (b) will be closed under current plans for relocation. [31760]

Mr. Thomas: No buildings have yet been closed under DFID's relocation plans. However, it is our intention to close our second London office at 20 Victoria street, SW1, at the conclusion of the current lease in December 2006.

Departmental Guidance (Evidence/Documentary Access)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his policy is with regard to (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department giving evidence to the (i) Scottish Parliament, (ii) National Assembly for Wales and (iii) Northern Ireland Assembly committees; and to what categories of document he gives (A) full access, (B) restricted access and (C) no access to (1) Scottish Parliament, (2) National Assembly for Wales, (3) Northern Ireland Assembly and (4) House of Commons Select Committees. [37393]

Hilary Benn: Requests for the attendance of Ministers or officials to give evidence to the devolved legislatures, and for the provision of information to the assemblies, will be considered on a case by case basis. The consideration will reflect: the principles set out in the Cabinet Office guidance "Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees" (July 2005); the policy outlined in the Department for Constitutional Affairs' Devolution Guidance Note No. 12 "Attendance of UK Ministers and Officials at Committees of the devolved legislatures"; and the requirements of the Freedom of Information Act. The principles underlying the provision of information to House of Commons Select Committees are set out in "Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees", particularly sections 4B and 4C.

I spoke to members of the European and External Relations Committee of the Scottish Parliament by video link on 22 March 2005.

The Central Research Department supports a number of projects that improve access to research findings, especially for scientists and institutions from developing countries (for example, through the Science and Development Network (SciDev. Net) and the Programme for the Enhancement of Research Information (PERI).

Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether a Minister in his Department is planned to be nominated to take responsibility for liaison with the Office for Disability Issues; and if he will make a statement. [37093]

Mr. Thomas: Because of the overseas focus of its work, DFID does not have a key role to play in the delivery of the recommendations outlined in the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report. We do not therefore, have any plans to appoint a Minister with specific responsibility for liaising with the Office for Disability Issues (ODI).

We do, however, have a strategy in place for removing the barriers faced by disabled people in the workplace and this ties in with one of the key aims of the ODI-to be an exemplar organisation in equal opportunities practice. DFID also takes into consideration disability issues in the context of our wider approach to social exclusion within our overseas development programmes, and plan to keep abreast of any best practice policies that emerge through ODI and other lead departments.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the initial activity undertaken by his Department in response to those recommendations in the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People where lead responsibility was assigned to all Government Departments. [37094]

Mr. Thomas: Due to the overseas nature of DFID's work, we do not have a key role to play in the delivery of policies and/or services which are central to the achievement of the Government's 20 year vision to improve outcomes for disabled people in the UK.

We have not therefore, undertaken any specific activity in response to the Strategy Unit Report's recommendations which relate ostensibly to the provision of UK public services.

We do, however, have a strategy in place for removing the barriers faced by disabled people in the workplace and this ties in with one of the key aims of the Office for Disability Issues (ODI)-to be an exemplar organisation in equal opportunities practice. DFID also takes into consideration disability issues in the context of our wider approach to social exclusion within our overseas development programmes, and plan to keep abreast of any best practice policies that emerge through ODI and other lead departments.

External Contractors (Technical Assistance)

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many technical assistance contracts between his Department and external contractors were terminated in each year since 1997. [37502]

Hilary Benn: DFID has no central record of the number of contracts terminated in each year since 1997 and could not produce this information without incurring a disproportionate cost.

GM Crops

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what research his Department has funded on genetically modified crops and food since 1997; and at what cost. [38010]

Mr. Thomas: Since 1997 DFID has spent £2,761,890 through its contracted research programmes for research on genetic transformation in fish and crops. £2,245,489 was provided by Plant Sciences Research Programme (PSP), for research on transformation of rice, potato and cooking banana crops. £516,401 was provided for research on transgenic Tilapia, by the Aquaculture and Fish Genetics Research Programme. This is less than 3 per cent. of the total spending within the Renewable Natural Resources Research Strategy.

DFID also provides unrestricted funding to the institutions of the Consultative Group on International Agricultural Research (CGIAR). Some of these institutions are implementing research on genetic modification technology, but it is not possible to attribute any specific DFID funding to these activities.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what contracts for projects relating to GM crops and foods have been let by his Department to external consultants in each year since 1997. [38011]

Mr. Thomas: Since 1997, DFID has funded two programmes which have had small elements of research involving Genetically Modified (GM) techniques:

The Plant Sciences Research Programme (PSP) has issued seven research contracts for research on transformation of rice, potato and cooking banana crops.

The Aquaculture and Fish Genetics Research Programme has issued two contracts for research on transgenic Tilapia.

HIV/AIDS

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with the United Nations about HIV/AIDS in developing countries; and if he will make a statement. [38229]

Mr. Thomas: In 2005, AIDS has been a centrepiece of the UK's Presidencies of the G8 and EU. On 9 March 2005, with the Joint United Nations Programme for HIV and AIDS (UNAIDS), France and the United States of America, the UK, through DFID, co-hosted the "Making the Money Work" event in London to translate the Three Ones harmonisation principles into action. The Global Task Team established at this meeting has made significant time bound recommendations for improving the coordination and quality of international support for national-led responses to the epidemic. DFID is working in country and through the relevant UN boards to ensure the recommendations of the Global Task Team are put into practice.

Following the commitments made at the G8 Summit in July and Millennium Review Summit in September to scale up towards universal access, DFID will co-chair the Global Steering Committee with UNAIDS, established to take forward the commitments made at the summits to support countries in establishing more ambitious comprehensive country-led responses to AIDS.

At the UK-hosted Global Fund to Fight AIDS, TB and Malaria Replenishment Conference in September, the UK doubled its funding to the Global Fund from £51 million for 2006 and £51 million in 2007, to £100 million for 2006 and £100 million for 2007. Our contribution amounted to some 10 per cent. of the total US$3.7 billion pledged. Overall, the UK has pledged £359 million (US$640 million) to the Global Fund over 7 years (2002–08). We have also doubled our contribution to UNAIDS from £8 million to £16 million for this year.

To take forward the HIV and AIDS situation in developing countries, DFID Ministers hold regular discussions with heads of the relevant United Nations Agencies (in particular, UNAIDS). I have recently met with Anne Veneman, the head of the United Nations Children Fund (UNICEF), Peter Piot, head of UNAIDS, and Thoraya Obaid, head of United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), where we discussed current HIV and AIDS issues.

At the United Nations General Assembly Special Session in June 2006, to review the global progress against the Declaration of Commitment which member states signed up to in 2001, DFID will be actively be involved in preparation for this session through dialogue with our EU partners and UN agencies.

Kenya

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what programmes his Department is funding in Kenya. [38666]

Hilary Benn: DFID is the second largest bilateral donor to Kenya. In 2004–05, DFID spent £39 million. This year we will spend £50 million. Our primary aim is to support the implementation of the Government of Kenya's Economic Recovery Strategy. Our focus is on supporting accountable service delivery, stimulating pro-poor growth, tackling HIV/AIDS and working to improve donor effectiveness. Around 75 per cent. of our spending supports the health and education sectors. Kenya is making excellent progress towards the education Millennium Development Goals (MDGs).

DFID's support, with others will assist with the construction of 11,880 new or refurbished classrooms by 2010, plus more education materials to each one of the 18,500 primary schools in Kenya. In health, it is estimated that the doubling of DFID's support to £47 million will deliver 11 million insecticide treated bed nets, saving 167,000 children's lives, and reducing under-five mortality in Kenya by at least 15 per cent. We are also supporting the Government of Kenya to develop a wider strategy for health care and to tackle HIV/AIDS, another area where Kenya is making significant progress where prevalence has fallen from around 11 per cent. to 6 per cent. in five years.

DFID supports other areas of work including land and agricultural reform, private sector development, public financial management, improved statistics, and support to governance, justice and law and order. DFID worked with the Government of Kenya to help produce a credible anti-corruption action plan. Against this, they have already passed Procurement and Privatisation Bills, fully staffed the Kenya Anti-Corruption Commission, and have developed a code of ethics for Ministers. While the fight against corruption will be hard, these measures should begin to reduce the opportunities for grand corruption; but leadership in this fight remains equivocal and no senior Ministers have yet been asked to take responsibility for corrupt deals. DFID will continue to work with the key anti-corruption institutions, civil society, and the private sector, to continue the pressure in the fight against corruption while, at the same time, helping to deliver benefits to poor people.

Maldives

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much aid the UK allocated to the Maldives in each year since 2000. [38354]

Mr. Thomas: I refer my right hon. Friend for Rotherham to the response I gave to him on 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 472W.

Information about how much aid the Maldives have received in 2005 is not yet available.

Public Appointments

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by his Department, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [36687]

Mr. Thomas: The Department for International Development (DFID) has not appointed any former hon. Members, who left Parliament in 2005, to the public bodies for which it is responsible.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many renewable energy projects his Department has undertaken since 1997; in what year each was undertaken; in what location; and what the (a) nature and (b) cost was of each project. [38224]

Mr. Thomas: I shall reply to the right hon. Member for Devizes shortly.

Somalia

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to secure aid agency transport links to Somalia. [37454]

Hilary Benn: DFID takes the security of aid provision very seriously in relation to Somalia and we are working closely with the international community to promote the establishment of an effective Somalia Government, to return stability and the rule of law. To this end we are helping Somalia develop an effective civilian police force. In partnership with other UK Government Departments, we are closely engaged in how to address the issues of piracy, terrorism and other forms of cross-border criminal activities with our international partners in the region.

DFID has also provided significant financial support through the Humanitarian Response Fund (HRF) for Somalia, administered by the UN Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs (UNOCHA) which has responsibility, inter alia, for the security of UN operations on the ground. We are also planning to provide increased funding to the World Food Programme (WFP) which will include transport and security.

South Asia Earthquake

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the main categories of aid and supplies the UK has pledged to help victims of the South Asia Earthquake; and how much of each category which has been pledged has been delivered. [39304]

Mr. Thomas: Following the 8 October earthquake, DFID has pledged a total of £58 million to the immediate relief phase. The following table gives details of DFID allocations to date. These can be found in our regularly updated situation reports placed on the DFID website, www.dfid.gov.uk. In addition, DFID has pledged £70 million to support reconstruction and longer-term recovery.

Sunset Clauses

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his policy is in respect of the use of sunset clauses in legislation. [37392]

Hilary Benn: The appropriateness of a sunset clause for the whole or part of any proposed legislation is considered on a case by case basis. It is also addressed when a regulatory impact assessment relation to legislation is being prepared.

DFID is not currently taking any legislation through Parliament.

Uganda

Mr. Joyce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether he plans to press for the United Nations Security Council to discuss and adopt a resolution on the conflict in northern Uganda during the UK's presidency. [35701]

Hilary Benn: The UK is committed to find a resolution to the conflict in northern Uganda. I am aware a number of non-governmental organisations have written to my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, advocating a UN Security Council Resolution during the UK's Presidency of the Security Council in December. These ideas are currently being considered.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department to tackle the use of child soldiers in northern Uganda. [35738]

Hilary Benn: The UK Government deplores the use of child soldiers. Child abduction is the rebel Lord's Resistance Army's (LRA) principle recruitment method. Although a recent World Health Organisation Survey in parts of northern Uganda indicated a significant decline in LRA abduction rates in 2005, the problem remains serious. Large numbers of children are forced to commute into town centres at night to avoid abduction by the LRA. We are helping UNICEF provide safe shelters in which these children can sleep. We are also helping UNICEF re-integrate child soldiers that escape or are rescued from the LRA through counselling, help with tracing families and specific initiatives to deal with the social challenges of re-integration.

We remain concerned about continued reports of a small number of under age recruits in the Ugandan army. Uganda has ratified the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, which prohibits recruitment into the armed forces under the age of 18. The Government of Uganda works with agencies such as UNICEF to ensure underage recruits are identified and demobilised. UK officials in Kampala continue to monitor the situation closely.

Zimbabwe

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much aid from the UK has been committed to (a) the Republic of Zimbabwe and (b) non-governmental organisations operating in Zimbabwe in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [30161]

Hilary Benn: By the end of this financial year, DFID will have committed over £140 million to humanitarian and HIV/AIDS programmes in Zimbabwe since 2001–02. This will include approximately £95 million committed directly to non-governmental organisations. The breakdown is as follows:

£ million

Financial year	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06[1]

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Digital Television

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department is taking to offer assistance to individuals with the switchover to digital television. [38075]

James Purnell: The Government and broadcasters have set up Digital UK to provide the necessary information. Their activities will include major communication campaigns, direct mail and a call centre giving practical advice on how to prepare for switchover.

In addition, specific assistance will be available to households where someone is aged 75 or over; and households with people with severe disabilities. This will consist of providing the necessary equipment to convert one TV set and the relevant support to install and use such equipment.

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the availability of digital television. [38082]

James Purnell: The vast majority of households can, with the appropriate equipment, receive digital TV services via either digital satellite, digital terrestrial or cable.

However at least a quarter of households cannot currently receive the digital terrestrial television (DTT) service; this figure cannot be increased before switchover, which will take place between 2008 and 2012.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department is taking to offer individuals assistance with the switchover to digital television. [38515]

James Purnell: Digital UK will provide extensive information to ensure everyone knows what is happening, what they need to do, and when. Their activities will include major communication campaigns, direct mail and a call centre giving practical advice on how to prepare for switchover.

In addition, specific assistance will be available to households where someone is aged 75 or over; and households with people with severe disabilities. This will consist of providing the necessary equipment to convert one TV set and the relevant support to install and use such equipment.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the progress towards digital switchover. [38537]

James Purnell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to the hon. Member for Hemel Hempstead (Mike Penning) on 11 November 2005, Official Report, column 765W.

BBC Charter

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects to announce the renewal of the BBC Charter. [38076]

Tessa Jowell: We intend to publish the White Paper and draft Charter and Agreement early in 2006. The new Charter and Agreement will replace the existing instruments, which expire on 31 December 2006.

Olympic Games 2012

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the latest estimate is of construction costs for the 2012 Olympic games facilities; and if she will make a statement. [38083]

Tessa Jowell: The current estimate of the cost of constructing the Olympic sports venue and press centre is around £1.2 billion, inclusive of inflation, fees and contingencies. I am determined that all costs will be tightly controlled and to ensure that the 2012 Games are delivered on time and within the funding envelope.

Administrative Savings

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what administrative savings have been made by her Department in each of the last eight years. [34946]

Mr. Lammy: Information on gross controlled administration costs underspends for my Department is included in the published Public Expenditure Outturn White Papers for the relevant years. These are available in the Library of the House.

Details of efficiency gains being made as part of the SR04 efficiency programme, as set out in the Efficiency Technical Notes, are available on the Department's website:

http://www.culture.gov.uk/global/publications/archive_2004.

Arts Council

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions she has had with the Arts Council. [38532]

Mr. Lammy: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State last met Sir Christopher Frayling, Chair of Arts Council England, on 26 May 2005. I meet Sir Christopher and members of the Arts Council's senior executive team on a more regular basis.

BBC Licence Fee

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions she has had on the BBC's licence fee proposals. [38533]

James Purnell: The BBC have briefed DCMS Ministers on their proposals. The Government is currently conducting a funding review to determine the level of the television licence fee to apply from April 2007 and will announce the outcome in due course.

Big Lottery Fund

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much of the Big Lottery Fund (BLF) money will go to voluntary and community organisations; how much the BLF cost to create; and if she will make a statement. [38535]

Mr. Caborn: The Big Lottery Fund has given an undertaking that 60–70 per cent. of funding will go to voluntary and community sector organisations. The cost to date of the administrative merger of the Community Fund and the New Opportunities Fund to create the Big Lottery Fund is £4.976 million. The administrative merger is now effectively complete, though some minor costs will be incurred in effecting the legal merger, if the National Lottery Bill is passed.

Broadcasting (Illegal Jamming)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received from UK (a) regulators and (b) broadcasters about disruption to the programmes of (i) BBC on 19 September and (ii) Channel 5 on occasions between 14 and 26 October and on 21 November from illegal jamming; and if she will make a statement. [34916]

James Purnell: The Secretary of State has not received any direct representations from broadcasters or regulators about disruption to either BBC or Channel 5 programmes due to illegal jamming in September and October.

The Office of Communications (Ofcom) did advise DCMS officials of a report of interference, received by Ofcom on 25 October, from Arquiva the network operator responsible for transmission of Channel 5 television services in the UK. This report concerned interference to a third party satellite link used to feed programmes to the Channel 5 network, which in turn interrupted the station's television broadcasts in the UK.

Neither Ofcom nor DCMS officials received formal complaints of similar interference to any other UK broadcasters, including the BBC, between September and November.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what advice she has received on the impact of the jamming of the Telstar 12 and Hotbird satellites from within Libya on United Kingdom broadcasters; and if she will make a statement. [34920]

James Purnell: The Office of Communications (Ofcom) advised DCMS officials that the regulator had on 25 October received a report from Arquiva, the network operator responsible for transmission of Channel 5 television services in the UK, regarding interference to the Telstar 12 satellite service.

The Telstar 12 satellite provides programme feeder links for Channel 5 television broadcasts. Interference to the satellite, which is understood to have originated from a transmitter based in Libya, caused intermittent disruption to Channel 5 services within the UK over a period of approximately two weeks during October. DCMS officials advised FCO officials of the problem. The matter was taken up by FCO officials through the appropriate channels in Libya.

Interference has now ceased and there have been no further reports of interruption to Channel 5 or other UK television broadcast stations. DCMS officials nevertheless remain in touch with Ofcom and FCO officials to monitor the situation and will take appropriate steps should there be a re-occurrence of the problem.

Neither Ofcom nor DCMS officials have received reports of interference to the Hotbird satellite.

Children's Play

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much her Department spent on children's play and leisure facilities in 2004–05; and what this figure is as a percentage of her Department's total budget. [38982]

Mr. Lammy: The Department does not directly fund services or facilities and has therefore spent no money on children's play and leisure facilities in 2004–05.

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many local authorities have (a) a local play strategy and (b) a framework for children's play. [38983]

Mr. Lammy: The Department does not hold this information centrally. I understand, however, that the Big Lottery Fund has awarded a development grant to the Children's Play Council (CPC) to develop a proposal to deliver the England wide support and development infrastructure for the fund's new play programme. CPC will undertake an audit of local authority play strategies as part of this work.

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which Departments are represented on the official interdepartmental group on children's play; what the work programme of the group is; and when it will report. [38981]

Mr. Lammy: Departmental membership of the cross-departmental officials' group on children's play is as follows: Culture, Media and Sport (Chair); Education and Skills; Environment, Food and Rural Affairs; Health; Transport; Home Office; Office of the Deputy Prime Minister; and the Treasury.

The group's aim as defined in its terms of reference is:

"To develop a coherent and strategic cross departmental approach to play policy; and to maximise the contribution that play can make to DCMS priorities and to those across Government, while recognising the importance of play in its own right."

The group has met three times and has considered a number of topical issues. The group reports to me on an ongoing basis.

Ann Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport What recent progress her Department has made in improving play facilities in parks. [38080]

Mr. Lammy: We are working closely with other Government Departments through our cross-departmental group on play, to improve opportunities for play in England. Thanks to the £155 million play programme announced by the Big Lottery Fund earlier this year, a huge number of existing play facilities across England will be improved and new ones created. This will include those based in parks and open spaces.

Child Sports Trainees (China)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the International Olympic Committee about prevention of cruelty to and exploitation of child trainees for Olympic sports in China. [38073]

Mr. Ceborn: The Secretary of State has made clear on several occasions that the Government expects child athletes to be trained and treated in an acceptable manner, consistent with the spirit and values of the Olympic movement.

We also welcome the recent announcement by Jack Rogge, President of the International Olympic Committee, who has said the IOC will look into allegations of mistreatment of child gymnasts in China.

Correspondence

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for St. Albans dated 25 October 2005; [32362]

(2) what the reasons are for the time taken to answer (a) the question tabled by the hon. Member for St. Albans on 22 November 2005, reference 32363 and (b) the letter referred to in the question; and if she will make a statement. [36878]

James Purnell: I apologise for the delay in replying to (a) the question 32362 and (b) the letter of 25 October 2005. I will reply to the hon. Members letter shortly.

The Department has received a large volume of correspondence both from hon. Members and members of the public in the run-up to and immediately following the implementation of the Licensing Act 2003 on 24 November 2005 this year.

Every effort is made to handle all correspondence effectively and efficiently. Correspondence from hon. Members is handled in accordance with the principles set out in 'Handling Correspondence from Members of Parliament, Members of the House of Lords, MEPs and Members of Devolved Assemblies: Guidance for Departments'.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the average time taken for her to reply to letters from hon. Members was in the last period for which figures are available. [36808]

Mr. Lammy: Every effort is made to handle all correspondence effectively and efficiently.

All correspondence from hon. Members and peers is handled in accordance with the principles set out in "Handling Correspondence from Members of Parliament, Members of the House of Lords, MEPs and Members of Devolved Assemblies: Guidance for Departments". The same principles apply when handling correspondence from members of the public.

The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to Members/peers correspondence. The report for 2004 was published on 6 April 2005, Official Report, columns 137–40WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) letters from hon. Members, (b) letters from members of the public and (c) parliamentary questions from (i) hon. Members and (ii) Lords were dealt with by her Department in each year since 1995; in respect of the percentage her Department took (A) more than one month and (B) more than three months to provide a substantive answer; and if she will make a statement. DCMS has set up a new Central Information and Briefing Unit, which will help ensure that replies to correspondence from the public are dealt with in a prompt, accurate and helpful manner.

The Department for Culture, Media and Sport aims to ensure that hon. Members receive a substantive response to their named day questions on the named day and endeavour to answer ordinary written questions within a working week of being tabled. We also aim to answer Lords written questions within two weeks of being tabled. Unfortunately, this is not always possible but we do make every effort to achieve these time scales.

The figures for the total number of written parliamentary questions tabled by (i) hon. Members and (ii) Lords and answered in each year since 1995[1] are given in the table together with the number for those years that took (A) between one-three months and (B) more than three months to provide a substantive answer.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the (a) salary bill was and (b) administrative costs were for her Department in (i) each (A) nation and (B) region of the UK and (ii) London in 2004–05. [35873]

Mr. Lammy: My Department's net administration costs for 2004–05 were £40,452,000, of which £19,814,000 related to its salary bill. The Department has no staff located outside London.

The administration budgets regime overseen by the Treasury relates to Whitehall departments only. How administration costs are controlled in the devolved Administrations is a matter for them. Treasury do not monitor regional or central London administration costs separately.

Departmental Estate

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what (a) building and (b) refurbishment projects are planned by her Department in (i) 2005–06 and (ii) 2006–07; and what the expected costs are of each project. [37400]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has no planned building projects in either year. It is planning to refurbish its main headquarters building in London but has yet to agree tenders for the work.

The Royal Parks have no planned building projects in either year. But the refurbishment of the Royal Parks office building in Kensington Gardens is estimated to cost about £50,000 in 2005–06; that of the Old Police House in Hyde will cost about £250,000 in 2005–06.

The Royal Parks have no refurbishment projects planned in 2006–07.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total value is of (a) catering and (b) entertainment contracts let by her Department; and what the value of such contracts has been let in each nation and region of the UK, including London. [37483]

Mr. Lammy: The information is as follows:

(a) A new contract was placed as from October 2004 to cover catering and hospitality[1] at the Department's London HQ building on a fixed price basis. The annual cost of the contract should not exceed £53,000.

Royal Parks Agency has let no catering contracts in the last financial year but has spent £24,000 on hospitality.

(b) Neither DCMS nor Royal Parks Agency has let any entertainment contracts in the last financial year.

[1] The term hospitality covers tea, coffee and working lunches for staff and visitors

Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether a Minister in her Department is planned to be nominated to take responsibility for liaison with the Office for Disability Issues; and if she will make a statement. [37075]

Mr. Lammy: Anne McGuire, the Minister for Disabled People, has overall responsibility for the Office for Disabled Issues (ODI). The Minister for Disabled People chairs a cross-government steering group which includes ministerial representatives from the Department of Health, Department for Education and Skills, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, Department for Transport and Department of Trade and Industry. I am the Minister in this Department nominated to take responsibility for liaison with the ODI.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the initial activity undertaken by her Department in response to those recommendations in the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report, Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People, where lead responsibility was assigned to all Government Departments. [37076]

Mr. Lammy: My Department fully supports the recommendations of the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report, Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People. We look forward to working with colleagues across government on taking forward those recommendations which are for all Government Departments to implement.

Elite Athletes (Funding)

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what submissions her Department made to the Treasury prior to the pre-Budget report concerning funding for elite athletes at the 2008 and 2012 Olympics; and who was asked to contribute to those submissions. [38359]

Mr. Caborn: This Department, with the support of UK Sport, the Government's lead agency on elite sport, had numerous discussions with HM Treasury about levels of public funding for elite athletes, grassroots sport and wider participation. These discussions are ongoing.

English Heritage

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions she has had with English Heritage. [38516]

Mr. Lammy: Both my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, and I have regular meetings with English Heritage. Most recently, I met the chairman on 23 November 2005 and attended a meeting of the English Heritage Commission on 7 December 2005.

[37684]

Mr. Lammy: The document listing works of art purchased by the Government Art Collection in the year 2004–05 was deposited with the Libraries of both Houses on 30 November 2005.

Independent Fees Review Panel

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the Independent Fees Review Panel interim report. [38517]

James Purnell: On 5 December, my Department published the Interim Report of the Independent Licensing Fees Review Panel that has been set up to consider whether the new licensing fees are set at the right level. Copies of the report have been deposited in the Libraries of both Houses and are available at: http://www.culture.gov.uk/alcohol_and_entertainment/monitoring_and_evaluation/ifreview.htm

I am grateful to the chair, Sir Les Elton, and all the members of the panel for all the hard work they have undertaken over the last few months. I am content with the broad thrust of the panel's four initial recommendations and have asked my policy officials to consider the detailed implications of the proposals and report back to me with an action plan early in the new year. The Panel's Interim Report also identifies nine areas that they wish to consider further, leading to their final report in autumn 2006.

Independent Sports Review

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she has taken to implement the findings of the Independent Sports Review (ISR); what recent meetings she has had on the ISR; and if she will make a statement. [38510]

Mr. Caborn: I always welcome contributions and ideas regarding the way we fund and administer the delivery of sport. I therefore read the Independent Sports Review with interest and noted its recommendations. I have not held any recent meetings to discuss the report.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action the Government are taking to assist the Jubilee Sailing Trust to secure the future of the vessels Lord Nelson and Tenacious; and if she will make a statement. [38000]

Mr. Caborn: The Jubilee Sailing Trust has already received significant lottery funding from Sport England. Decisions on further financial support are a matter for Sport England.

We continue to support sailing for people with disabilities through organisations such as RYA Sailability.

Angela Watkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make funding available to secure the future of the Jubilee Sailing Trust. [38383]

Mr. Caborn: The Jubilee Sailing Trust has already received significant lottery funding from Sport England. Decisions on further financial support are a matter for Sport England.

We continue to support sailing for people with disabilities through organisations such as RYA Sailability.

Junk Food Advertising (Consultation)

Mary Creagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport for what reasons the Ofcom consultation on junk food advertising has been postponed from November 2005 until February 2006. [37998]

James Purnell: The matters raised are the responsibility of the Office of Communications (Ofcom) as independent regulator. Accordingly, my officials have asked the chief executive of Ofcom to respond directly to the hon. Member. Copies of the chief executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Licensing Act

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the effects of the Licensing Act 2003 on the Government's Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy; and if she will make a statement. [32790]

James Purnell: The Licensing Act 2003 is an important part of the Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy which will allow a more responsible attitude to drinking through the removing the artificial and fixed closing times that encouraged people to drink as much as possible before last orders and created flashpoints for conflict through late night queuing for transport and fast food.

The new regime will encourage a more diverse night time economy that is not aimed solely at the younger market and has brought in tough new powers to crack down on problem premises that encourage drunkenness and disorderly behaviour.

While it is too early to measure the real impact of reform, early signs are positive with an unprecedented engagement from local residents, the police and others in influencing licensing decisions and tens of thousands of premises already have new conditions to adhere to which promote the licensing objectives.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 24 November 2005, Official Report, columns 2228–9W, on the Licensing Act, if she will make it her policy to revise the guidance to licensing authorities to require them to send details of applications on the register to relevant (a) councillors and (b) hon. Members. [33744]

James Purnell: The guidance cannot be used to place such requirements on licensing authorities: that would be a matter for primary or secondary legislation. We not rule out considering changes to the legislation, but only if a compelling case arose during the review of the Guidance or from other work to evaluate the effectiveness of the new regime, including the requirements for publicising applications. I will take note of my hon. Friend's suggestions, but hope she will understand that it is too early to anticipate the outcome of the current review.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she made of the impact of the Licensing Act 2003 on those whose only alcoholic product for sale is communion wine before the introduction of the Licensing Bill; and what such assessment she has made since implementation of the Act. [36223]

James Purnell [holding answer 12 December 2005]: Before the introduction of the Licensing Bill, the Government carried out a widespread consultation which offered an opportunity for stakeholders to participate, including the manufacturers and suppliers of communion wine. All responses were carefully considered in framing the new legislation.

The Licensing Act 2003 only came into force on 24 November 2005, and it is still too early to make an assessment of the impact of our reforms in respect of any category of services or premises. However, the Government have made a commitment to monitor the impact of the new laws. This includes Sir Les Elton's on-going independent review of licensing fees. His panel would welcome evidence from any fee payers about the impact of the new regime on their businesses or organisations.

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether a councillor who has made a representation on a licensing application on his own behalf as a resident is precluded under (a) the Licensing Act 2003 and (b) the Councillors' Code of Conduct from attending and speaking at a licensing committee on that application as (i) a resident and (ii) a representative of other residents. [36817]

James Purnell [holding answer 12 December 2005]: I am not aware of any provision in the Licensing Act 2003 or the Councillors' Code of Conduct which prevents a local councillor who is an interested party and who has made relevant representations from speaking at the licensing committee hearing. Similarly, there is nothing to stop a councillor speaking at a hearing on behalf of other interested parties who have made relevant representations, provided that they have asked him to do so and have notified the licensing authority, as required by the Licensing Act 2003 (Hearings) Regulations 2005.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State wrote to licensing authorities on 30 September this year reiterating that there is nothing to prevent a local councillor from making representations if asked to by residents, nor from seeking the views of their residents on licensing matters as they would for any other issues.

Of course, it would be expected that any councillor who is also a member of the licensing committee and who is making a representation as an interested party, or on behalf of another interested party, would disqualify themselves from any involvement in the decision-making process affecting the premises in question.

Following a review of the code of conduct for members by the Standards Board for England, the Government have recently announced its intention to amend the code along the lines proposed by the board. These proposals include changes which would support members' advocacy role.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how many establishments she estimates are trading without a licence under the Licensing Act 2003 in (a) total, (b) the Wellingborough local authority area and (c) the East Northamptonshire area; [36918]

(2) how long she expects it will take to process outstanding licence applications under the Licensing Act 2003 in (a) total, (b) the Wellingborough local authority area and (c) the East Northamptonshire local authority area; [36923]

(3) how many licences have been applied for under the Licensing Act 2003; and how many of these have not been processed in (a) total, (b) the Wellingborough local authority area and (c) the East Northamptonshire local authority area. [36924]

James Purnell: Feedback from licensing authorities indicates that around 190,000 applications have been made for premises licences or club premises certificates under the Licensing Act 2003. Of these, we estimate that about 75 per cent. (142,500) were applications made before 6 August 2005 to convert and/or vary licences under the old regime and would have been automatically deemed granted or refused if not processed after two months.

Applications that have subsequently been made will usually be processed in about a month if there are no representations, or about two months if there are representations and hearings, although the precise position will vary between local authorities.

We believe the vast majority of applications have been processed and, while not all licences have actually been issued, we are confident that licensing authorities have made it clear to licensees the terms under which they can trade. We intend to conduct a formal data gathering exercise in the new year in order to publish comprehensive information about the number of licences granted.

We have no information on the number of premises that are found to be trading without a licence, but we estimate that 98 per cent. of premises that would require a licence had applied before the new regime came into effect. Enforcement of the licensing regime is a matter for licensing authorities and authorised persons, such as the police.

We do not hold specific information for the Wellingborough and East Northamptonshire areas.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what additional resources were made available to local authorities to take on the functions under the Licensing Act 2003. [36922]

James Purnell: Costs incurred by local authorities in meeting their requirements under the Licensing Act 2003 will, provided that they have been incurred legitimately and efficiently, be fully met by fees within the national fee regime. No additional resources should therefore be necessary.

The Government are keeping fee levels under review and will be working closely with the independent panel set up under Sir Les Elton, and with local government representatives, to ensure that the fees have been set at the right level.

Licensing Committees

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will issue guidance to clarify whether an objector making oral representations at a licensing committee is able to raise new issues which she has not previously raised in written representations on the same application. [37038]

James Purnell [holding answer 12 December 2005]: Under the Licensing Act 2003 (Hearings) Regulations 2005 (SI No. 44), interpretation of the regulations regarding the governance of hearings is a matter for the licensing committee hearing the individual case, and ultimately for the courts if any decision is challenged.

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what guidance she has issued on local authority officers informing elected councillors of licensing applications in their wards. [37327]

James Purnell: None. It is for local authorities to decide what policy to adopt in relation to communications with elected councillors about licensing matters.

London Development Agency

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what legal entity will own the land acquired by the London Development Agency for the 2012 Olympics (a) prior to and (b) after 2012. [36864]

Mr. Caborn: The ownership of the land will depend on the decision taken by the Secretary of State about whether to confirm the London Development Agency's Lower Lea, Olympic and Legacy Compulsory Purchase Order (expected in 2006).

If it is confirmed, the London Development Agency, as the acquiring authority, would have legal title vested in the land within the Olympic Park—both prior to and after the games in 2012.

Maldives

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the UK tourist industry about the safety of British tourists travelling to the Maldives. [38355]

James Purnell: My Department has not held discussions with the UK tourist industry about dangers to British tourists travelling to the Maldives. My Department's responsibilities are focused on inbound and domestic tourism.

I am aware that the FCO provides travel advice notices on its website for over 200 countries based on the most accurate and up-to-date information available to that Department. This is designed to help British travellers make informed decisions about travelling abroad.

Media Ombudsman

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will consider appointing an independent media ombudsman; and if she will make a statement. [38599]

James Purnell: The Government is satisfied with the present arrangements for the independent regulation of broadcasting, principally by Ofcom, and of the press, by the Press Complaints Commission.

Music Education

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on Government support for music and music education. [38079]

Mr. Lammy: The Government are committed to supporting music in all its forms. We are achieving this through increased investment—funding for music through Arts Council England has more than doubled since 1997 to over £100 million this year.

My Department continues to work very closely with the Department for Education and Skills on the Music Manifesto, which celebrated its first anniversary in July. This sets out a series of shared aims for music education over the next three to five years, and has the support of over 420 signatories from across the education, cultural and music sectors.

Responsibility for music within schools falls to the Department for Education and Skills.

Through the Live Music Forum, we are working to ensure that opportunities for the promotion of live music are realised to the full.

Organised Sport

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department has taken to encourage organised sports in inner city areas. [37157]

Mr. Caborn: The Department is committed to driving up participation in sport by providing facilities and services that meet local needs. Sport England is delivering a number of projects which target inner city areas, including StreetGames networks that specialise in providing organised sporting activities for young people in deprived inner city neighbourhoods and which promote the development of local leaders and coaches.

Pornography

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what definition of pornography is used by her Department. [38637]

James Purnell: We use the same definition as everyone else. In terms of regulation, we consider the harm that any type of material (whether pornography, violence, portrayal of drugs use, etc.) is likely to cause to the vulnerable, particularly children.

Press Complaints Commission

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the (a) role, (b) accountability of the Press Complaints Commission and (c) its work in relation to sexist material. [38531]

James Purnell: The Press Complaints Commission is entirely independent of Government. It is accountable to the Press Standards Board of Finance. The Editors' Code of Practice contains a clause on discrimination which forbids pejorative reference to an individual's gender, but it does not cover matters of taste and decency.

Sailing

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on steps the Government are taking to encourage people with disabilities to participate in sailing activities. [38074]

Mr. Caborn: Through Sport England and the English Federation for Disability Sport, we are working with the Royal Yachting Association (RYA) and RYA Sailability to encourage more disabled people to take up sailing.

UK Sport funding is being provided to support elite disabled sailors in their preparations for the 2008 Paralympics in Beijing. £304,000 has been provided so far with the prospect of more being provided in 2006. In addition to this, one sailor is currently being supported through a TASS 2012 Scholarship.

Sports Funding (Manchester)

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much funding has been provided for sport in Manchester in the last 12 months, broken down by source of funding; and how much of this went to (a) activities and (b) organisations in the Gorton constituency. [38420]

Mr. Caborn: The following amounts of funding for sport have been made available in the north west region from December 2004 to December 2005: £24,118,150 lottery funding and £1,462,642 Exchequer funding. Financial information isn't available at constituency level and cannot be split between activities and organisations. However, table 1 gives some examples of projects in the Gorton constituency during this period.

Table 1: Sport projects in the Gorton area in the last 12 months

Funding source	Recipient	Project	Sector	Award amount (£)
Exchequer	Greater Sport	PE and School Sport Links	Sport participation and capacity building	34,700
Exchequer	Greater Sport	Towards an Excellent Service	Sport participation and capacity building	15,000
Lottery	Greater Sport	Women and Girls Equity Post	Skateboarding	40,000
Lottery	North West Awards for All	North West Boccia Development Association	Other sporting activity	4,400
Lottery	North West Awards for All	Passport 2 Sport—Multi-Sports Club Central	Mix of sporting activities	4,956

Taxis

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much has been spent by her Department on taxi travel in the 2005–06 financial year; and what proportion of such travel was undertaken in each nation and region of the UK, including London. [37484]

Mr. Lammy: My Department's expenditure on taxi travel to November in 2005–06 is £12,161.27. It represents expenditure on taxis provided by the Department's contracted agent, black cabs and taxis in London and elsewhere.

An analysis of expenditure by nation and region is not recorded on the Department's accounting system and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Television Licensing

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects to make an announcement on the future level of the television licence fee. [38139]

James Purnell: In line with the commitment made in the Green Paper published in March of this year, the Government are currently conducting a funding review to determine the level of the licence fee to apply from April 2007. Work is continuing and we will make an announcement in due course.

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how many calls in 2005 initially received by the computerised voice recognition system used by the TV Licensing Authority for address transfers were then transferred to human operators for completion because the software could not understand regional and national accents and dialects, broken down by region of call origin; [38731]

'(2) if she will undertake research to establish whether the computerised voice recognition system used by the TV Licensing Authority for address transfers could be adapted to deal with a higher proportion of calls from people with north eastern English accents; [38737]

(3) which regional and national dialects and accents of the United Kingdom were most frequently not recognised in 2005 by the computerised voice recognition system for address transfers used by the TV Licensing Authority; [38738]

(4) whether the computerised voice recognition system used by the TV Licensing Authority for address transfers was designed to recognise English spoken with regional accents. [38739]

James Purnell: The BBC has responsibility for the administration and enforcement of the television licensing system and TV Licensing carries out the day to day administration and enforcement under contract to the corporation. I have therefore asked the BBC's head of revenue management to consider the questions raised by my hon. Friend and to write to him direct. Copies of the reply will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Tourism

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much has been spent in each of the last five years in promoting tourism to the UK in China; and what assessment she has made of the effects of the promotion campaigns. [37960]

James Purnell: My Department works actively to promote both domestic and inbound tourism. At a national level, marketing and other work to promote the sector is the responsibility of VisitBritain.

DCMS funding to promote tourism to the UK in China is via VisitBritain and in 2004–05 a budget of £200,000 was agreed.

It is too early to give an assessment of the effects of the promotion campaign. However, VisitBritain's strategy to increase the value of inbound tourism and visitor numbers includes focusing its efforts on China as one of the markets with the greatest potential for growth.

Winter Olympic Sports

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much public funding has been allocated to winter Olympics sports in each of the last five years. [38356]

Mr. Caborn: The total amount of exchequer and lottery funding provided to winter Olympic sports in the current winter Olympic cycle, October 2002 to September 2006 is shown in the following table:

	Lottery funding provided (£)
October 2002 to September 2003	931,973
October 2003 to September 2004	1,023,411
October 2004 to September 2005	1,372,817
October 2005 to September 2006	1,166,630

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether the Government have been involved in setting (a) formal and (b) informal targets for performance at the (i) 2006 and (ii) 2010 winter Olympic games; and if she will make a statement. [38357]

Mr. Caborn: Following a review of athlete performances with the six winter sports that are currently funded through UK Sport's World Class Performance programme, UK Sport, the Government's lead agency for elite sport, estimates that we will win up to three medals at the Turin winter Olympic games.

UK Sport will agree medal targets for 2010 with their funded sports following the Turin games.

World Cup 2006

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the ticket allocation for England fans at the 2006 Football World Cup. [38430]

Mr. Caborn: While the Government and the FA have requested a greater allocation of tickets for England fans for the 2006 World Cup in Germany, this is the responsibility of FIFA.

I wrote to the President of FIFA in October about this issue and received an assurance that it will do everything in its power to ensure that England fans will receive as many tickets as possible.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Advisory Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list her Department's advisory non-departmental public bodies (a) which the Government is required to consult prior to legislative proposals and (b) whose advice the Government is required to publish. [29759]

Ms Harman: (a) Prior to legislative proposals, the Government is required to consult the following advisory non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) sponsored by the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA):

Appeal Court Hearings

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the procedure is for removing (a) a Crown court judge and (b) an Appeal Court judge; how many (i) Crown court and (ii) Appeal Court judges have been removed from office in each year since 1975; what the circumstances were in each case; and if she will make a statement. [37543]

Ms Harman: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Under section 17(4) of the Courts Act 1971, a Crown court judge can only be removed from office by the Lord Chancellor, with the agreement of the Lord Chief Justice, for misbehaviour or incapacity. This process would normally be initiated following an investigation undertaken by a judge nominated by the Lord Chief Justice, at the request of the Lord Chancellor; or following conviction for any criminal offence potentially or actually carrying a sentence of imprisonment.

(b) Judges at the level of the High Court and above may only be removed by the Queen on presentation of an Address by both Houses of Parliament.

(i) In the period since 1975 I am aware of one Circuit Judge who has been removed by the Lord Chancellor, exercising his statutory powers under the Courts Act 1971. That judge had been convicted of smuggling in 1983.

There have been no Addresses of both Houses of Parliament regarding the removal of a judge of the High Court or above since 1975.

Barristers

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the 10 barristers instructed by the Treasury Solicitor to advise and to represent the Government in court proceedings who received the highest payments in the last financial year; how much each received; and if she will make a statement. [23499]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to reply as Law Officers are accountable for the Treasury Solicitor.

The 10 barristers instructed by the Treasury Solicitor to advise and to represent the Government in court proceedings who were paid the highest sums for this work in the last financial year (ending 31 March 2005) and the amounts paid are:

Counsel	Amount paid in last financial year including VAT[1]
Philip Sales	619,633.76
Ian Burnett QC	327,595.20
Christopher Wilson	304,891.85
Jonathan Crow	287,883.78
Christopher Lewsley	237,255.76
Julie Anderson	227,810.61
Stuart Catchpole QC	201,160.08
Jennifer Richards	199,459.80
Monica Carss-Frisk	195,116.02
Leigh- Ann Mulcahy	182,478.63

[1] The figures include payment for instruction in arbitrations as well as in court proceedings. Alternative Dispute Resolution mechanisms are used as appropriate.

A number of qualifications need to be added to these figures:

The amount paid to barristers in one financial year is not necessarily reflective of the work carried out during that year. Payment may take place during or sometime after the work.

The figures must be interpreted carefully and do not represent the personal earnings of the barristers listed—figures are inclusive of VAT and disbursements incurred. After VAT has been deducted, barristers will typically pay 25 to 30 per cent. of fees in professional expenses. Additionally, barristers face the same expenses as any other self- employed person, including income tax and national insurance contributions.

The Crown pays barristers at a fixed hourly rate for work payable, for example, only when hearings take place, and does not use a brief fee system.

Not all payments could be verified with the individuals concerned. Cases in dispute, where records of payments held by the Treasury Solicitor differ to those held by the practitioners, have been included. Where possible, amounts have been verified by practitioners and adjusted where necessary.

Criminal Offences

Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to her answer of 1 December 2005, Official Report, columns 742–43W, on criminal offences, which criminal offences were created in each Act named in her answer. [38361]

Ms Harman: My answer of 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 742–43W, listed all of the primary legislation sponsored by the Department from May 1997 rather than the criminal offences created in that legislation. This is because the information requested cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost because of the period of time covered by the question.

However, I refer the hon. Member to the reply to the hon. Member for Winchester (Mr. Oaten) on 24 January 2005, Official Report, column 136W, which provided some of the requested information.

Data Protection

John Hemming: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the deterrent effect of court awards for compensation for breaches of the Data Protection Act 1998. [30685]

Ms Harman: None. The purpose of compensation under the Data Protection Act 1998 is not to act as a deterrent, but to compensate individuals for any damage or harm arising from a breach of their rights. We have further not made any assessment.

Departmental Research

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what research projects commissioned by her Department are in progress and what the publication arrangements are. [33033]

Bridget Prentice: Commissioned research projects in progress are listed in the table and publication arrangements, where decided, are indicated.

Projects commissioned by the Research Unit are published in hard copy in the DCA Research Series and posted on the DCA website. Other reports may be posted on the DCA or HMCS websites or produced in hard copy, but for some work in progress the exact nature of publication is not yet decided.

Electoral Registration

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will conduct research into the impact of functional illiteracy on electoral registration rates. [38271]

Ms Harman: The Electoral Commission published its report "Understanding Electoral Registration" in September this year. Although the research did not specifically address the impact of functional illiteracy, it found some significant gaps in people's awareness and knowledge of the registration process.

There are no plans to conduct research into the impact of functional illiteracy on electoral registration rates; but my Department is working with key stakeholders on improving the annual canvass form by making it clearer, simpler and easy to understand.

Family Law Act

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether she plans to adjust the criminal legal aid budget to provide for changes in criminal defence costs under the section 42A of the Family Law Act 1996. [37773]

Bridget Prentice: We constantly review our forecasts for both civil and criminal legal aid and take any action necessary to fund all those cases which require legal aid.

Gender Recognition Panel

Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many (a) acceptances and (b) rejections there have been of the applications received by the Gender Recognition Panel; and what the reasons were for each rejection. [38057]

Ms Harman: The information requested is as follows:

In total, 1,153 applications have been received and 896 full Gender Recognition Certificates have been issued. 17 applications have been rejected. Disclosing the reasons for each rejection would be likely to reveal the identity of these applicants. Reasons for rejection include incomplete or insufficient medical evidence, an incomplete statutory declaration, or refusal by an applicant to state whether he or she is married.

Inquests

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the average waiting time was between the death of a person and the conclusion of the inquest in (a) England and (b) Teesside in the last 12 months. [38382]

Ms Harman: The average time taken between the death of a person and the conclusion of the inquest in 2004 (the latest 12-month period for which figures are available) was 22 weeks in England and 35 weeks in Teesside.

Judges (Complaints)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the complaints made by (a) members of the public, (b) hon. Members and (c) members of the House of Lords about the conduct of (A) Crown court judges and (B) judges of the Court of Appeal (Criminal Division) in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what the outcome was in each case. [37544]

Ms Harman: Since 1998, the Judicial Correspondence Unit in the Department for Constitutional Affairs has received each year between 1,000 and 1,600 complaints from members of the public and Members of Parliament. These include some complaints against judicial office holders sitting in the tribunals. (The majority of the complaints received turn out to be complaints about judicial handling and judicial decisions, in neither of which the Lord Chancellor can intervene because of the principle of judicial independence).

The Lord Chancellor would not normally make public the detail of individual complaints or the disciplinary action resulting from those that are upheld unless he and the Lord Chief Justice conclude that it is in the public interest to do so.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what guidance is issued to members of the public wishing to make a complaint about (a) a Crown court judge and (b) a judge of the Court of Appeal (Criminal Division); and if she will make a statement. [37545]

Ms Harman: Leaflets are available in courts for users who wish to complain and information is also provided by way of frequently asked questions on the Department for Constitutional Affairs' website at www.dca.gov.uk/legalsys/complain.htm. More detailed guidance is provided in the Lord Chancellor's Judicial Complaints Protocol which is available to members of the public on request.

Juries

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps her Department is taking to ensure that the selection of juries is representative of the ethnic profile of the local population. [37748]

Ms Harman: The principle of random selection from the electoral register should mean that the composition of juries, whether in terms of ethnic background, age, gender, sexuality or religion is broadly representative of the general population. Jurors are summoned from geographic catchment areas within 1½ hours travelling distance from the Court. The Government is committed to ensuring that juries reflect the full diversity of the communities they serve. The Electoral Administration Bill currently before Parliament includes provisions aimed at improving both the quality and the coverage of the electoral register. In addition the "Get London Registered" campaign will target young people and black and ethnic minority groups to ensure that they are properly represented on electoral registers.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what data her Department collects on the ethnic composition of juries; and what recent research her Department has conducted into the under-representation of ethnic minorities on juries. [37759]

Ms Harman: The Department for Constitutional Affairs does not collect data on the ethnic composition of juries, or any other data for monitoring purposes. As jury selection is a random process there is no business requirement to collect data on ethnicity. A research project looking at the ethnic make-up of juries from summoning through to service, commissioned by DCA, is due to be published in 2006.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will take steps to increase the subsistence allowance for jurors; and if she will make a statement. [38694]

Ms Harman: Jurors can claim for subsistence, travel and financial loss. The allowances are reviewed annually in line with inflation. Jurors are currently paid daily subsistence of £5, or £10.67 if they are required to be at court for more than 10 hours.

National Parking Adjudication Service

Paul Rowen: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps the Department has taken to ensure that decisions taken by the National Parking Adjudication Service are consistent. [37967]

Ms Buck: I have been asked to reply.

The National Parking Adjudication Service is an independent tribunal and their Parking Adjudicators operate under supervision of the Council on Tribunals. To help ensure impartiality and fairness, the Government do not have any powers to question decisions they make.

Royal Household

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 12 December 2005, Official Report, column 1755W, on the Royal Household, if she will list those members of Her Majesty's family who are also members of the Royal Family regularly undertaking official duties and functions on Her Majesty's behalf. [38445]

Ms Harman: According to the official Court Circular, the following Members of The Queen's Family are listed as having undertaken official duties and functions on Her Majesty's behalf: The Duke of Edinburgh, The Prince of Wales and The Duchess of Cornwall, The Princess Royal, The Duke of York, The Earl and Countess of Wessex, The Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, The Duke and Duchess of Kent and Princess Alexandra.

Search Warrants

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many search warrants were granted by Northamptonshire magistrates in the last year for which figures are available. [38100]

Ms Harman: The number of search warrants issued between 1 December 2004 and 30 November 2005 was 1,166.

Sentencing Guidelines

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what recent guidelines her Department has issued to judges about consistency of sentencing; and if she will make a statement. [36185]

Fiona Mactaggart: I have been asked to reply.

It is not the role of Government to issue guidelines on sentencing. The Criminal Justice Act 2003 set up the Sentencing Guidelines Council (SGC), an independent body chaired by the Lord Chief Justice, which is tasked with framing guidelines on sentencing. One of the factors to which the council must have regard when framing its guidelines is the need to promote a consistency of approach in sentencing. When sentencing an offender, courts must have regard to any guidelines which are relevant to the case.

The SGC has to date issued guidelines on Reduction in Sentence for a Guilty Plea, Overarching Principles: Seriousness, New Sentences: Criminal Justice Act 2003 and, most recently, Manslaughter by Reason of Provocation.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Administrative Savings

Mr. Maude: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what administrative savings have been made by his Department in each of the last eight years. [34954]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) was created following the Machinery of Government changes on 29 May 2002.

The 2002 Spending Review provided for an increase of £902 million in the departmental expenditure limit by 2005–06, an annual average real growth of 4.9 per cent. To deliver the expanded programme, administration expenditure was also budgeted to increase.

In each year since the ODPM was established, administration spending has been constrained to below budget. Information on gross and net controlled administration costs underspends for Whitehall Departments is published in the Public Expenditure Outturn White Papers for the relevant years, which are available in the Library of the House.

Efficiency gains are now being made as part of the 2004 Spending Review (SR04) efficiency programme, as set out in Efficiency Technical Notes which are available on Departments' websites. The administration efficiency savings proposed for ODPM, compared with 2004–05, are set out as follows:

	SR04 administration efficiency savings (£ million)
2005–06	8
2006–07	16.5
2007–08	25

Arson

Mike Penning: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many incidents of arson there were in (a) Dacorum and (b) Hertfordshire in each year since January 1997. [29570]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The number of deliberate primary fires attended by the Fire and Rescue Service in Hertfordshire is in the following table. Data are not available centrally for Dacorum.

Deliberate primary fires, Hertfordshire, 1997–2004

	Number
1997	848
1998	826
1999	1,091

Deliberate primary fires, Hertfordshire, 1997–2004

2000	1,276
2001	1,303
2002	1,294
2003	1,265

Bellwin Scheme

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the (a) local authorities, (b) fire authorities and (c) police authorities in Hemel Hempstead, will be eligible for Bellwin scheme assistance. [38333]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Yes, provided the actions authorities need to take result in eligible costs above the authorities' thresholds. Emergency financial assistance is available to local authorities under the Bellwin scheme to help with their costs incurred in taking immediate action to safeguard life or property or to prevent severe inconvenience to the inhabitants of the area. Local authorities have one month from the end date of an incident in which to notify the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister of an intention to make a claim. Dacorum borough council has already registered such an intention and officials here have spoken to both Dacorum and Hertfordshire county council about the procedures to follow.

Circular 15/92

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 7 November 2005, Official Report, columns 191–92W, on planning, if he will place circular 15/92 on his Department's website. [33480]

Yvette Cooper: It is now available on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website.

Civil Servants

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many civil servants in each grade have left his Office in each of the last three years to join consultancy firms; and which firm each joined. [37362]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold this information on its former staff centrally, and could provide it only at disproportionate cost.

Construction Industry Research and Information Association

Mary Creagh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the results of the research study commissioned by his Department, project ID 11476, completed by the Construction Industry Research and Information Association on 31 December 2004, are expected to be published. [33845]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 2 December 2005]: A number of research reports prepared for the Buildings Division of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister are being prepared for publication. The report mentioned by my hon. Friend is one of them. It is expected that the reports will be available on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website early in the new year.

Correspondence

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) letters from hon. Members, (b) letters from members of the public and (c) parliamentary questions from (i) hon. Members and (ii) Lords were dealt with by his Office in each year since 1995 in respect of the percentage his Department took (A) more than one month and (B) more than three months to provide a substantive answer; and if he will make a statement. [37390]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) was formed on 29 May 2002.

The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to Members/Peers correspondence. The Report for 2004 was published on 6 April 2005, Official Report, columns 137–40WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House.

Information on the number of letters received from members of the public by the ODPM is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Information in respect of the number of parliamentary questions tabled by hon. Members and noble Lords for the ODPM is given below:

	PQs from MPs	PQs from Lords
2002[1]	1,532	83
2003	2,747	180
2004	3,397	159
2005[2]	3,218	160

[1] 29 May 2002 to 31 December 2002.
[2] 1 January 2005 to 30 November 2005.

Information on the percentage of letters and parliamentary questions that took (a) more than one month and (b) more than three months to provide a substantive answer, is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Council Tax

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment the Government have made in the last three years of the possible effect of (a) council tax revaluation and (b) further council tax increases on the likelihood of (i) civil disobedience and (ii) civil unrest. [33499]

Mr. Woolas: None.

Council Tax (Kent)

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of spending by (a) Kent county council and (b) Gravesham borough council was financed from council tax in each financial year since 1996–97. [37592]

Mr. Woolas: The percentage of Revenue Expenditure by Kent county council and Gravesham borough council that has been financed from council tax in each financial year since 1996–97 is as follows.

Percentage

	Kent county council	Gravesham borough council
1996–97	24.3	19.4
1997–98	25.5	19.5
1998–99	27.5	26.0
1999–2000	27.8	25.0
2000–01	27.9	34.0
2001–02	27.9	29.1
2002–03	28.5	35.1
2003–04	29.4	33.9
2004–05	29.4	35.3
2005–06	28.8	32.3

The data are as reported by local authorities and are taken from Revenue Summary (RS) returns for 1996–97 to 2003–04, and Revenue Account budget (RA) returns for 2004–05 and 2005–06.

The definition of council expenditure used here is that expenditure funded from Aggregate External Finance (AEF), council tax and authorities' reserves.

Comparisons across years may not be valid due to changes in the method of reporting the information. In particular, the outturn data for 1996–97 to 2002–03 have been calculated on a non-FRS (Financial Reporting Standard) 17 basis whilst the outturn data for 2003–04 have been calculated on an FRS 17 basis. The budget data for 2004–05 and 2005–06 are a mix of FRS 17 and non-FRS 17. This is because for their 2004–05 and 2005–06 budget forms local authorities, after consultation, were given the option to complete their forms either on a non-FRS 17 basis or on an FRS 17 basis. Hence, figures for different years may not be directly comparable.

Criminal Offences

Simon Hughes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the criminal offences created in legislation sponsored by his Department between the end of the 2003–04 session and April 2005. [38325]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Southend, West (Mr. Amess) on 15 December 2005, Official Report, column 2197W.

Decent Homes Standard

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what percentage of homes in Tamworth constituency he estimates did not meet the Decent Homes Standard in each year since 1992. [35658]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not produce its own estimates of homes meeting the Decent Homes Standard in individual local authorities. Local authorities report annual estimates of the proportion of non-decent homes in their own stock through the Business Plan Statistical Appendix (BPSA). Data are available from 2001, when the Decent Homes Programme began and local authorities started reporting this information. The following table shows the percentage of non-decent stock owned by Tamworth borough council.

Tamworth local authority

	Reported percentage of stock which did not meet the Decent Homes Standard
2001	48
2002	45
2003	39
2004	41
2005	29

Housing association data broken down by local authority is only available from 2005. Prior to this the number of non-decents was collected for individual housing associations, who may own stock in several different local authorities. As at 31 March 2005, 218 housing association homes in Tamworth did not reach the Decent Homes Standard, which amounted to 16.18 per cent. of the total registered social landlords (RSL) owned stock of 1,347 homes.

Local authorities make estimates of non-decent homes in private sector housing as part of their housing strategy but only began assembling systematic evidence on decent homes for the private sector following the introduction of the PSA 7 Private Sector target in 2002. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not collect estimates for individual local authorities, as it makes national estimates of private sector non-decency through the English House Condition Survey (EHCS).

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what percentage of homes in Kettering constituency he estimates did not meet the Decent Homes Standard in each year since 1997. [36138]

Yvette Cooper: The office does not produce its own estimates of homes meeting the Decent Homes Standard in individual local authorities. Local authorities report annual estimates of the proportion of non decent homes in their own stock through the Business Plan Statistical Appendix (EPSA). Data are available from 2001, when the Decent Homes Programme began and local authorities started reporting this information. The following table shows the percentage of non-decent stock owned by Kettering borough council and Daventry district council.

	Reported percentage of houses that are non-decent Kettering local authority
2001	5
2002	13
2003	13
2004	10
2005	9
Daventry local authority
2001	0
2002	0
2003	9
2004	2
2005	1

Housing association data broken down by local authority are only available from 2005. Prior to this the number of non-decents was collected for individual housing associations, who may own stock in several different local authorities. As at 31 March 2005, 150 housing association homes in Kettering did not reach the Decent Homes Standard, which amounted to 11.47 per cent. of the total RSL owned stock of 1,308 homes (including shared housing bedspaces). In Daventry, 71 housing association homes did not reach the Decent Homes Standard, which amounted to 5.92 per cent. of the total RSL owned stock of 1,200 homes.

Local authorities make estimates of non decent homes in private sector housing as part of their housing strategy but only began assembling systematic evidence on decent homes for the private sector following the introduction of the PSA seven private sector target in 2002. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not collect estimates for individual local authorities, as it makes national estimates of private sector non-decency through the English House Condition Survey (EHCS).

Departmental Assets

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 7 December 2005, Official Report, column 1429W, on the Asset Register, whether his Department's accounting system SAP has the facility to print information that is held on it. [38217]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The SAP system has a full suite of standard reporting functionality. The reports can either be reviewed on screen or can be printed out or can be electronically downloaded.

Departmental Estate

Dr. Cable: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which buildings and sites used by his Department and related agencies (a) have ceased to be used in the last year and (b) will be closed under current plans for relocation. [31754]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Since November 2004 the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has ceased to use offices on part 16th, entire 17th, and entire 18th floors of Portland House, Victoria. They were vacated in June 2005.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is responsible for three executive agencies, the Planning Inspectorate at Temple Quays, Bristol, the Fire Service College at Moreton-in-Marsh, and the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre in Westminster. None of the executive agencies has ceased the use of any buildings or sites in the last year.

(b) The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has current plans to relocate Headquarters staff from its 4th and 5th floor offices at Allington Towers by April 2008. These offices will be closed and handed back to the leaseholder, the Home Office.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minster has served Notice on behalf of the First Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister to terminate the lease of industrial buildings used by the Fire and Rescue Service Directorate at Marchington, Staffordshire. The buildings will be closed and vacated by the end of June 2006 at the latest. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Civil Resilience Directorate occupies part of the Marchington buildings and is to be relocated to alternative leased premises.

There are no current plans to relocate the three executive agencies.

Departmental Guidance (Evidence/Documentary Access)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his policy is with regard to (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Office giving evidence to the (i) Scottish Parliament, (ii) National Assembly for Wales and (iii) Northern Ireland Assembly committees; and to what categories of document he gives (A) full access, (B) restricted access and (C) no access to the (1) Scottish Parliament, (2) National Assembly for Wales, (3) Northern Ireland Assembly and (4) House of Commons Select Committees. [37388]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Requests for the attendance of Ministers or officials to give evidence to the devolved legislatures, and for the provision of information to the assemblies, will be considered on a case-by-case basis. This consideration will reflect: the principles set out in the Cabinet Office guidance "Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees" (July 2005); the policy outlined in the Department for Constitutional Affairs' Devolution Guidance Note #12 "Attendance of UK Ministers and Officials at Committees of the devolved legislatures"; and the requirements of the Freedom of Information Act. The principles underlying the provision of information to House of Commons Select Committees are set out in "Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees", particularly sections 4B and 4C.

Departmental Property

Mr. Weir: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much was paid by his Department in 2004–05 in rent for properties in (a) total, (b) each (i) region and (ii) nation of the UK and (c) London. [35956]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) and its agencies paid a total of £26,641,641 in rent for properties in 2004–05. Of this amount £6,134,681 was recovered from tenants or other Government Departments occupying the property. ODPM also paid £211,214 in respect of rent to other Government Departments whose property they occupied. All the properties are in England and the amount of rent paid in respect of the regions of the UK was as follows:

Departmental Staff

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many staff are employed by his Department in each (a) region and (b) nation of the UK; and if he will make a statement. [35920]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I refer the hon. Member to Table D of the Civil Service Statistics website at: http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/managementof_the_civil_service/statistics/civil service_statistics/index.asp

This table covers permanent staff numbers on a full-time equivalent basis in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and agencies. Copies of Civil Service Statistics are also available in the Library of the House.

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the value is of (a) pay supplements, (b) bonuses and (c) other incentive packages that are payable in his Department on the basis of geographic location; how many people are in receipt of each payment; and what the total cost to his Department of each payment was in 2004–05. [35922]

Jim Fitzpatrick: In 2004–05, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (a) disbursed no pay supplements, (b) paid no bonuses, and (c) had no other incentive packages that were payable on the basis of geographic location.

Separate pay rates apply for staff within the London area and the rest of the country in both the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Headquarters and the Government Offices.

Deprivation Levels

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the levels of deprivation were in each ward in Kettering constituency in the last year for which figures are available, ranked from the least deprived to the most deprived. [38153]

Mr. Woolas: The Indices of Deprivation 2004 is the latest index for which data is available on deprivation in Kettering constituency. This index was not created at ward level but at Lower Layer Super Output Area (LLSOA) level, which covers approximately 1,500 people.

The following table lists the LLSOAs that fall within the wards in the Kettering constituency. This data shows that there are 67 LLSOAs in the constituency and that 40 per cent. (27) of these are ranked among the least deprived 20 per cent. of LLSOAs in the country. At the other end of the scale, only 6 per cent. (four) LLSOAs are in the most deprived 20 per cent. in England.

Designated Growth Areas

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 8 December 2005, Official Report, columns 1501–2W, on designated growth areas, what procedures his Department will put in place to respond to rapid population growth within designated growth areas; and what evidential sources will be used to trigger such a procedure. [37946]

Yvette Cooper: The answer to question reference 31849 referred to two forms of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's (ODPM) funding, namely Growth Areas funding and local government funding.

Growth Areas funding is being made available to support housing growth within the Growth Areas (including Thames Gateway). The £1.25 billion to be made available up to and including 2007–08 is based on the results of successive rounds of bidding and is not subject to further evidence on population growth.

Local government funding allocations for 2006–07 and 2007–08 are currently being consulted upon. This years assessment takes account of population projections as this allows the 2006–07 and 2007–08 settlements to be more forward looking. Previously settlements have been based on the latest available mid-year estimates as the dominant drivers. This change should provide more support for areas experiencing rapid population growth. The population projections are prepared by the Office for National Statistics using a trend-based methodology which projects forward the population (using 2003 mid-year population estimates as the starting point) into the future.

ODPM spending decisions for 2008–09 onwards are subject to future Spending Reviews. In its December 2005 response to Kate Barker's Review of Housing Supply, the Government announced that as part of the 2007 Comprehensive Spending Review it would undertake a cross-cutting review to:

"determine the social, transport and environmental infrastructure implications of housing growth in different spatial forms and locations;

establish a framework for sustainable and cost-effective patterns of growth, including by examining the use of targeted investment through the Community Infrastructure Fund and Growth Areas funding to support the fastest-growing areas; and ensure that departmental resources across government are targeted appropriately for providing the national, regional and local infrastructure necessary to support future housing and population growth."

The cross-cutting review provides an opportunity for evidence of the funding needs experienced by Growth Areas as a result of rapid housing growth to be taken into account in future spending decisions of ODPM and other Departments.

Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what work his Department has undertaken with organisations representing disabled people to ensure housing initiatives include disabled people; and if he will make a statement. [37432]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) is committed to working with a variety of disability organisations to ensure the requirements of disabled people are represented in its housing programmes.

For example, through consultation with the Disability Rights Commission and the Inclusive Environments Group of CASE, the Lifetime Homes Standard has been incorporated into the Code for Sustainable Homes.

In addition the Housing Corporation continues to be supportive of capital investment in housing for those in need of supported housing and extra care provision.

The ODPM is also working with the Disability Rights Commission to revise the code of guidance on the allocation of accommodation to ensure that housing authorities take into account the needs of disabled people when allocating social housing.

Organisations representing people with long-term disabilities were part of our consultation on the new HomeBuy scheme to help targeted groups, including those with disabilities, into home ownership.

The on-going review of the disabled facilities grant (DFG) has included wide-ranging consultation with groups representing disabled people and in particular those supporting families with disabled children. Following these consultations the Government have announced that from 31 December 2005 applications for a DFG from families with a disabled child will be exempt from a means test.

District Councils

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the procedures are for a district council which has adopted the cabinet system to revert to a committee-based system. [38114]

Mr. Woolas: Any local authority which is operating under the Cabinet system, which had a population of under 85,000 on 30 June 1999 may, by resolution of the council, move to the streamlined committee system. If the local authority has a directly elected mayor this move may only take place following a referendum of the local electorate endorsing the change. In all cases a local authority must first undertake consultation of residents, stakeholders and other interested parties on the proposed change, and have regard to the results of that consultation in determining the model and nature of constitutional arrangements.

English Partnerships

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much money has been raised by English Partnerships through the sale of assets in Lancashire in each of the last four years. [35476]

Yvette Cooper: The following amounts have been raised by English Partnerships through the sale of assets in Lancashire over the past four financial years, and also over the course of this financial year.

Financial year	Receipts (£ million)
2005–06[1]	5.0
2004–05	5.8
2003–04	5.8
2002–03	8.9
2001–02	2.7
Total	28.0

Fire Services

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many call outs each retained fire service in Staffordshire has had in each of the last five years. [37821]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold any data centrally on call outs by retained fire and rescue services.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many times out-of-county fire appliances have been called to emergencies in Staffordshire due to Staffordshire services already being engaged in each of the last five years. [37822]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold any data centrally on out-of-county fire appliance attendances.

Flood Plains (Building)

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister who makes the decision on appeals by companies wanting to build on a flood plain. [36120]

Yvette Cooper: The decision on a planning appeal is made by the planning inspector unless the appeal has been recovered for decision by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, the First Secretary of State.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the appeal procedure is for a planning application which has been refused on the grounds that the building should not be allowed on a flood plain as shown by an Environment Agency flood map. [36127]

Yvette Cooper: Guidance on planning appeals procedures is set out in DETR Circular 5/2000. Links to the relevant statutory instruments and information on making an appeal can also be found on the Planning Inspectorate's website at www.planning-inspectorate.gov.uk/making_appeals.

Government Offices (Visits)

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many visits (a) he and (b) the Minister for Local Government and Communities has made on departmental business to each Government office region since May. [35580]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Since May, my right hon. Friends the Deputy Prime Minister and the Minister for Local Government and communities have made visits on departmental business to each Government office region as follows:

North West	3	3
North East	2	1

Green Belt

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how much land changing to residential use was within (a) the designated green belt and (b) greenfield land, in each year since 1997, broken down by region; [4312]

(2) how much land within the 1997 designated green belt changed to developed use in each year since 1997, broken down by region; [4313]

(3) how many new dwellings have been built within the 1997 designated green belt in each year since 1997, broken down by region. [4314]

Yvette Cooper [pursuant to the reply, 16 November 2005, Official Report, c.1275–78]: The available estimates are from Land Use Change Statistics, shown in the following tables. The numbers and table titles are unchanged but the units for the tables headed "New dwellings within 1997 designated green belt", given previously as "hectares", are corrected to "dwellings". The order of the tables has also been changed to follow the order of the questions. The estimates for 2003 are provisional and are subject to revision. Figures are not shown for 1999 as the data received for that year were incomplete. Figures for 1997 to 2000 reflect planning policies and decisions made before this Government took office.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 18 July 2005, Official Report, column 1440W, on homelessness, what the value was of funding for the project transferred from the Corporation of London; and which authority is now responsible for administering funding for this scheme. [28835]

Yvette Cooper: At the end of 2004, the decision was taken by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) to transfer responsibility for funding and managing the operation of the Aldgate Advice Centre from the Corporation of London to the London borough of Tower Hamlets. £235,000 of ODPM grant funding was transferred from the Corporation of London to Tower Hamlets to carry out this work. Tower Hamlets is now responsible for funding and managing the operation of this single homeless day service, which is still operating.

Housing

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many compulsory purchase orders have been made on empty properties by (a) Tamworth borough council and (b) the local authority recorded as the best performing in each of the last three years. [32031]

Yvette Cooper: Tamworth borough council has not, in the last three years, made any compulsory purchase orders on empty properties.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not collect data on the number of compulsory purchase orders made on empty properties each year by local authorities and it is not possible to determine the best performing.

James Duddridge: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on progress towards the Government's target of 80 per cent. home ownership. [34161]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 2 December 2005]: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister set out our future ambitions with regard to housing supply and helping people into home ownership as part of our response to Kate Barker's Review of Housing on 5 December 2005.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many homes for key workers have been provided by each local authority in Hampshire in each of the last five years; how many are unoccupied; and if he will make a statement. [35048]

Yvette Cooper: For the financial years, 2000–01 to 2004–05 1,531 homes have been provided for key workers in Hampshire of which 48 are currently unoccupied.

Local authority	Homes provided	Homes unoccupied
Basingstoke and Deane	295	2
East Hampshire	115	0
Eastleigh	67	2
Fareham	43	4
Havant	42	0

Winchester	225	0
New Forest	48	0
Gosport	40	0
Hart	94	9

The figures above include Starter Home Initiative, Challenge Fund and Key Worker Living new build units and equity loans. For the equity loans for the Starter Home Initiative the figures provided are for key workers who work in Hampshire.

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has for large-scale housing developments in Bournemouth; what assessment he has made of the implications for greenbelt in the area; and if he will make a statement. [31332]

Yvette Cooper: The South West Regional Assembly—as the regional planning body—are working to prepare the new Regional Spatial Strategy for the South West which will look at housing need in the period to 2026. The Regional Assembly are due to put forward proposals for housing as part of the first draft of the Regional Spatial Strategy by spring next year. The Government have not made any proposals for housing developments in Bournemouth.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the housing capital allocations for each local authority in Hampshire were in (a) 2004–05 and (b) each of the previous four years. [33990]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is set out as follows alongside funding for affordable housing provided to registered social landlords through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme (ADP):

[1] Includes an element of funding to be met from council's capital receipts.
[3] Includes funding provided through the Starter Home Initiative and Challenge Fund.
[2] Funding to meet the on-going costs of maintaining council housing.
[4] The authority agreed to resources being switched to the Housing Corporation for provision of additional affordable housing in their area.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the identified need for housing in each local authority in Hampshire was in each year since 2001; how much of that need was represented by the need for affordable housing; and if he will make a statement. [33992]

Yvette Cooper: The agreed regional policy identifies around 6,030 dwellings as being needed across Hampshire each year since 2001, comprising both market and affordable housing. This policy is currently under review as part of the preparation of the South East Plan.

Hampshire exhibits high levels of housing demand for a wide range of housing including, shared equity and social housing. Average house prices in Hampshire have risen by 249 per cent. over the period 1997–2005, and projected household growth across the South East is substantially higher than the current building rates. Individual local authorities have undertaken local housing needs assessments covering households unable to buy or rent in the open market, which demonstrates high levels of need for affordable housing.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent assessment he has made of the availability of affordable housing in Coventry South. [36238]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 13 December 2005]: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has made no recent assessment on the availability of affordable housing in Coventry South. We are aware of a new housing scheme planned for the Stoke area of the constituency. This is at the development stage and it is hoped offices and 600 affordable homes will be built on the previous Peugeot site.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the percentage of 18 to 25-year-olds, excluding students, living independently in (a) self-contained accommodation and (b) accommodation where some facilities are shared. [38318]

Yvette Cooper: Excluding students, the percentage of 18 to 25-year-olds in England who were living independently (i.e. they were not in a household that included one of their parents) was 48 per cent. according to the 2004–05 Survey of English Housing. Of these, about 97 per cent. lived in self-contained accommodation and about 3 per cent. in accommodation where some facilities were shared.

Greg Clark: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what information his Department collects on the density of (a) existing and (b) new social housing. [38576]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister monitors the density of all new housing through its Land Use Change Statistics but these do not distinguish between social and private housing. Policies to increase the density of new housing apply to all tenures.

Local Government

Greg Clark: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what statistical measures the Government uses to compare the performance of different levels of regional and local government. [38575]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister sets a number of Best Value Performance Indicators (BVPIs) which may be used to compare the performance of local authorities across the range of their activities. Comparative data can be found at: www.bvpi.gov.uk

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what responses on the local government finance consultation he has received from (a) Ribble Valley borough council and (b) Lancashire county council; and when the responses were received. [35469]

Mr. Woolas: Lancashire county council responded on 10 October to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's public consultation on formula grant distribution. In addition, I met Lancashire county council on 5 October. No response was received from Ribble Valley borough council. Consultation on the local government settlement for 2006–07 runs from 5 December 2005 to 11 January 2006.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the likely impact of changes in the local government formula grant on public services delivered by (a) Ribble Valley borough council and (b) Lancashire county council. [35470]

Mr. Woolas: Consultation on the local government settlement for 2006–07 runs from 5 December 2005 to 11 January 2006. The provision of local services is a matter for Ribble Valley borough council and Lancashire county council themselves, bearing in mind their statutory responsibilities.

Opinion Research/Public Relations

Mr. Weir: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the value was of (a) public opinion research and (b) public relations contracts awarded by his Department in 2004–05 in (i) each (A) nation and (B) region of the UK and (ii) London. [35957]

Jim Fitzpatrick: In the financial year 2004–05 the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister undertook no public opinion research and awarded no public relations contracts.

Pathfinder Areas

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 191W, on pathfinder areas, if he will list the companies responsible for the constructions listed in (a) Manchester, Salford, (b) Birmingham, Sandwell and (c) Newcastle, Gateshead. [36586]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The following table shows the companies responsible for the construction/conversion of homes in the pathfinder areas of Birmingham Sandwell, Manchester Salford and Newcastle Gateshead.

Pathfinder	Construction Company
Birmingham Sandwell	Kier Construction
Manchester Salford	Permisson Homes
	Dylan Homes
	Nutalls

Playgrounds

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many local authority-owned playgrounds there were in each local authority in England in (a) 1997, (b) 2001 and (c) 2005. [37746]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Population Projections

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whose population projections are used by the Registrar General in the new calculations for local government formula grant funding. [36624]

Mr. Woolas: The population projections used by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in the 2006–07 and 2007–08 Local Government Finance Settlements are the 2003-based sub-national population projections for England produced by the Office for National Statistics.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list those Private Members' Bills introduced (a) under Standing Order No. 14(6), (b) Standing

Order No. 23 and (c) Standing Order No. 57 which were (i) supported and (ii) opposed by his Department in each Session since 1997–98. [36218]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was formed on 29 May 2002.

The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. (The ODPM's response to Private Members' Bills is normally set out by Ministers during the Second Reading debate.)

Recyclable Housebuilding Materials

Andrew Selous: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he is taking to promote recyclable house-building materials. [37708]

Yvette Cooper: The Government supported the passage of the Sustainable and Secure Buildings Bill-now the Sustainable and Secure Buildings Act (2004). Among other things, the Act gives powers to make regulations concerning the use of recycled materials or the re-use of materials. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently investigating ways in which these new powers should be used. The Government are also now consulting on a code for sustainable homes, that includes sustainable materials.

Revenue Transfers

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much was transferred from (a) housing revenue accounts and (b) right to buy revenues of all local authorities in each of the last three years; and for what purposes it was transferred in each case. [10271]

Yvette Cooper: The Housing Revenue Account (HRA) system is redistributive, and is supported by the Exchequer. The Exchequer adds to the surpluses collected from some authorities in order to subsidise those who would otherwise make a deficit. The intention is that all authorities should be able to offer a similar standard of service while charging affordable rents.

The figures for the last three years are shown in the following table:

Financial year	Contribution from authorities assumed to have a surplus	Additional funding provided by Exchequer	Total subsidy paid to authorities assumed to have a deficit
2002–03	654,659,330	252,084,486	906,743,816
2003–04	706,268,335	187,928,643	894,196,978
2004–05	620,543,656	82,879,824	703,423,480

Prior to 2004–05, authorities had to set aside 75 per cent. of the net capital receipts from right to buy sales to repay debt (if they had debt). Less debt meant less debt charges for Government to subsidise, allowing the Government to support more new investment where the need was greatest.

From April 2004 set-aside was abolished. All authorities were required to pay 75 per cent. of their net capital receipts from right to buy to the Government so that it could be used fund new investment. Receipts from debt-free authorities are used to support Sustainable Communities programmes including the construction of new affordable housing and the improvement of existing housing. Receipts from authorities with debt are not hypothecated to any particular purpose.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) collects data on total pooled receipts and total amounts set aside by housing authorities. These figures include the amounts arising from right to buy sales alongside amounts relating to other housing capital receipts, but the amounts relating to right to buy sales are not separately identified. The available data is as follows:

£ billion

Financial year	Total set-aside	Total pooled
2002–03	1.9	n/a
2003–04	[1]—	n/a
2004–05	n/a	1.7

[1] ODPM did not collect data on set-aside for 2003–04 because, with the abolition of set-aside, there was no longer a need to collect audited set-aside data.

Government housing capital investment totalled £4.5 billion in 2004–05.

Right to Buy (Leeds)

John Battle: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what proportion of Leeds council housing stock has been sold under the Right to Buy since 1980; [35119]

(2) what proportion of council (a) houses and (b) flats in each Leeds constituency have been sold under the Right to Buy since 1980; [35121]

(3) how many council homes were sold under the Right to Buy scheme in Leeds, West constituency in each year since 1980. [35123]

Yvette Cooper: An estimated 28 per cent. of council housing stock in Leeds has been sold through the Right to Buy scheme since 1980. Information concerning the type of dwelling is not available. Constituency level data are not held centrally. The numbers of Leeds council dwellings sold each year since 1980 through the Right to Buy scheme, as reported by Leeds are tabulated as follows.

Rough Sleepers (Severe Weather)

Tony Lloyd: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what account he takes of forecasts of severe weather when assessing the adequacy of provision of places for rough sleepers. [35478]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 7 December 2005]: Local authorities are required to have strategies in place for ensuring that accommodation and support are available for people who become homeless or are at risk of homelessness. In areas with significant rough sleeping problems there are more detailed plans and arrangements for additional provision in severe weather. Usual practice is that such additional provision should be triggered by a Met Office forecast of zero degrees Celsius or lower for three consecutive nights.

Walking (Planning Implications)

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment his Department has made of the planning implications of the promotion of walking. [35033]

Yvette Cooper: Government policy is to seek to reduce the reliance on the private car by promoting alternative forms of transport, such as public transport, walking and cycling. Planning guidance is given in Planning Policy Guidance Note (PPG) 13 "Transport". This says "walking is the most important mode of travel at the local level and offers the greatest potential to replace short car trips". Local authorities should consider walking within their local transport plans, which in turn inform local development frameworks (LDF). With reference to town centres, "Planning for Town Centres, Guidance on Design and Implementation tools", which accompanies Planning Policy Statement (PPS) 6 "Planning for town centres", states that local authorities should seek to improve the quality, convenience and safety of access on foot, by bicycle and public transport. It advises that further guidance is given in "Walking and Cycling Action Plan" (DfT, TINF391).

There is no national assessment of the planning implications of the promotion of walking but PPS1 "Delivering Sustainable Development" makes it clear that planning authorities should ensure their plans and policies are properly based on analysis and evidence.

NORTHERN IRELAND

A26

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the Department for Regional Development Road Service works on the A26 to conclude; and what the expected final cost is. [37806]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 19 December 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding when he expects the Department for Regional Development Roads Service works on the A26 to conclude, and what the expected final cost is. I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service.

Current work on the A26 at Ballynaloob between Ballymena and Ballymoney involves the construction of a "2+1" carriageway to create a safe overtaking opportunity for Ballymoney bound traffic, starting at Dunloy crossroads and continuing for some 1.6 kilometres towards Ballymoney. This is part of our programme to improve overtaking opportunities on single carriageways by widening of stretches to provide two lanes of traffic in one direction and one lane in the other.

An adjacent scheme to improve the Dunloy crossroads is being constructed at the same time. This is being undertaken in light of the poor safety record at the existing junction.

It is proposed to open the A26 at Ballynaloob to two-way traffic by 23 December 2005. However, finishing-off works including hedge and tree planting will continue for a few months after Christmas but most of this will be undertaken without the need for a diversion. The total cost for both schemes is expected to be £3.3 million.

I hope this information is helpful.

A6

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the dualling of the A6 between Londonderry and Dungiven to (a) commence and (b) be concluded. [38340]

Mr. Woodward: The Chief Executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Malcolm McKibbin, dated 19 December 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding when he expects the dualling of the A6 between Londonderry and Dungiven to (a) commence and (b) be concluded. 38340

I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service.

Roads Service commissioned consultants in April 2005 to identify a corridor for the future dualling of the A6 between Castledawson and Londonderry. It is envisaged that this study will be completed in spring 2006 when the development of the scheme will move to a more detailed phase (Stage 2 Assessment) and public consultation process.

As announced by the Secretary of State, on 13 December 2005, it is hoped that the scheme will commence on site in the latter half of the Regional Strategic Transport Network Transport Plan 2015 period.

At this preliminary stage of scheme development, it is not possible to predict with any degree of accuracy how long this scheme, given its magnitude, would take to construct. We will advise you of likely construction duration when we are in a better position to assess it with reasonable confidence.

I hope this information is helpful.

Accidental Deaths

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many accidental deaths there were in Northern Ireland in each of the last 20 years. [37599]

Angela E. Smith: The following table gives the number of deaths registered in Northern Ireland in each year between 1985 and 2004 where the death was recorded as being caused by an accident[1].

Agenda for Change

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been allocated to each health board area to meet the salary commitments arising from the Agenda for Change agreement. [38142]

Mr. Woodward: The amount allocated to each health board area to meet the salary commitments arising from the Agenda for Change agreement is as follows:

Eastern Board	30,645,592
Northern Board	10,078,041
Southern Board	9,134,583
Western Board	7,889,835

Apprenticeship (Insurance Costs)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he will take to assist with insurance costs employers who wish to take on young apprentices for training. [37607]

Angela E. Smith: The Government provide a training grant to organisations for each apprentice employed. There are no plans to provide direct assistance with insurance costs.

Belfast Hospitals (Security)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much funding each hospital in Belfast has allocated to security in each of the last five years. [37586]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Coleraine Bus/Rail Station

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the annual change in passenger throughput at the bus/rail station in Coleraine has been since its opening. [37880]

Mr. Woodward: Translink has advised that the information requested is not readily available. As Coleraine bus and rail station was officially opened on 21 September 2001, midway through a reporting period, it is not possible to disaggregate the annual passenger numbers. Translink has, however, provided details of the numbers of passengers passing through the station in the following table:

Financial year	Bus passengers	Rail passengers	Total passengers
2002–03	522,357	546,404	1,068,761
2003–04	524,738	[1]—	n/a
2004–05	553,954	589,881	1143,835

[1] Due to the introduction of a new ticketing system, rail passenger figures for 2003–04 are not available.

Crime

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the extent to which (a) paramilitary organisations and (b) organised criminal gangs have been involved in the manufacture and distribution of counterfeit (i) medical and (ii) veterinary pharmaceutical products in the Province. [36359]

Mr. Woodward: There is no evidence to suggest that Northern Ireland based paramilitary organisations, or organised crime gangs, are involved in the manufacture or supply of counterfeit pharmaceuticals or veterinary pharmaceutical products. The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSS&PS) and the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) continue to monitor the situation closely. A small number of counterfeit veterinary pharmaceuticals were seized in a joint operation between the PSNI and DHSS&PS in April and May 2004.

The Independent Monitoring Commission has reported extensively on paramilitary activity and criminality in Northern Ireland and has not identified any links from paramilitary groups, or organised crime gangs, to the manufacture or distribution of counterfeit medicines or veterinary pharmaceutical products.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the (a) salary bill was and (b) administrative costs were for his Department in (i) Northern Ireland and (B) region of the UK and (ii) London in 2004–05. [35869]

Mr. Woodward: All the costs of the Northern Ireland Office (NIO) relate to "Northern Ireland" as per the Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses.

The salary bill and administrative costs for the NIO, excluding its Agencies and NDPBs, for 2004–05, were as follows:

Salary bill	38,348,965
Administration (non-staff) costs[1]	33,617,207

[1] Administration costs cover the costs of all central Government administration other than the costs of direct frontline service provision or support activities that are directly associated with frontline service delivery.

Departmental Property

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was paid by his Department in rates in 2004–05, broken down by local authority; and how much was paid in rates in 2004–05 in London. [35991]

Mr. Woodward: Rates in Northern Ireland are paid to the Rates Collection Agency and distributed. It is, therefore, not possible to break the amount down by council. The amount paid in respect of buildings occupied by the Northern Ireland Office, excluding its agencies and NDPBs, in 2004–05, was:

Belfast—£509,182

London—£281,269.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what administrative savings have been made by his Department in each of the last eight years. [34944]

Mr. Woodward: Administrative savings are a target in the Northern Ireland Office's (NIO) Public Service Agreement (PSA).

1998 Comprehensive Spending Review period (1999–2000, 2000–01 and 2001–02)

Because of political uncertainties and doubts about the range of responsibilities for which the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland would be directly accountable to Parliament following devolution, the NIO did not publish a PSA in the 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review period (1999–2000 to 2001–02) and there was therefore no target to secure administrative savings. Actual savings made in this period were used to offset in-year pressures to allow the Department to live within its baseline allocations.

2000 Spending Review period (2001–02, 2002–03 and 2003–04)

The NIO published its first PSA as part of the 2000 Spending Review, setting out the Department's targets. This included a target of securing on-going savings of 3 per cent. in Core Departmental administration costs. This was met.

2002 Spending Review period (2003–04, 2004–5 and 2005–06)

The PSA for this period included a target of securing on-going savings of 2.5 per cent. in Core Departmental administration costs. This was met.

2004 Spending Review period (2005–06, 2006–07 and 2007–08)

During the 2004 Spending Review period, the NIO is committed to delivering 2.5 per cent. year on year efficiency targets. Efficiency Delivery Plans are in place to meet this target and the Department published an Efficiency Technical Note on 5 December.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff in his Department have (a) received official warnings and (b) faced disciplinary procedures in each year since 1995. [33072]

Mr. Woodward: The following warnings issued to Northern Ireland Office staff are in relation to poor attendance, performance and conduct. It is not possible to identify the number of staff who faced disciplinary action. This could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

Angela E. Smith: The information in respect of permanent and casual staff in the 11 Northern Ireland Departments as at 11 January 2005 (the latest date for which figures are available) is not available in the form requested. The information in respect of Fermanagh, Dungannon and Ballymena district council areas is contained in the following table.

Angela E. Smith: The two tick disability symbol is an initiative administered by Jobcentre Plus in Great Britain, under the control of the Department of Work and Pensions and does not operate in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people applied to be members of each District Police Partnership in the most recent selection process; and how many were deemed to be appointable candidates. [37602]

Mr. Woodward: The Policing Board has advised me that a total of 705 people applied to be members of the District Policing Partnerships in the most recent selection process and that 463 were deemed to be appointable candidates. The breakdown for each DPP is as follows:

Mr. Woodward: In Northern Ireland the only person who has authority to prescribe emergency hormonal contraception is a registered medical practitioner. However, emergency hormonal contraception, namely Levonelle(r) is available for purchase over the counter under the supervision of a pharmacist in accordance with a professional protocol. Levonelle 2 is the prescription only equivalent that, as well as being prescribed by a doctor, can be supplied by nurses and other health professionals under a patient group direction (PGD) signed by a doctor and a pharmacist.

Guest Speakers

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to his answer of 23 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1993–42W, on guest speakers, who the Irish Football Association nominated in advance as speakers at the reception held at Hillsborough Castle on Monday 14 November 2005; and what guidelines were issued about the content of contributions. [37805]

[37426]

Mr. Hanson: On 7 November I met with the Chief Constable of the PSNI regarding the Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill prior to its introduction to Parliament.

On 9 November I wrote to the Victims Commissioner and the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commissioner to inform them of the Bill's introduction.

I discussed the proposals within the Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill at a meeting with the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission on 15 November 2005. The Commission have offered to write to me following their consideration of the Bill.

The proposals were originally published in May 2003.

Northern Ireland Employer Champions

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the work of the four Northern Ireland Employer Champions appointed in 2004 to help increase the number of employers addressing essential skills issues in the workplace. [38584]

Angela E. Smith: The four Employer Champions are helping the Department implement Essential Skills in the Workplace by demonstrating their commitment to the strategy in their own organisations and, where possible, influencing others to take action, raising the profile of Essential Skills in the press and attending employer-focused events.

PricewaterhouseCoopers

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for which Departments of the Northern Ireland Office PricewaterhouseCoopers have been working on e-business strategies; on what date each contract with PricewaterhouseCoopers commenced; on what date the final documents were published; and what the cost was to each Department of each contract with Pricewaterhouse Coopers. Prisoners (Surgical Waiting Times)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average time prisoners in Northern Ireland waited before having (a) hip and (b) knee replacement surgery was in each of the last five years. [37801]

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many motorists from the Republic of Ireland were (a) stopped by the Police Service for Northern Ireland for motoring offences and (b) were prosecuted for motoring offences in each of the last 10 years. [36518]

Mr. Woodward: The Police Service of Northern Ireland does not hold a central record which would identify the number of motorists from the Republic of Ireland who were stopped for motoring offences in each of the last 10 years. To obtain this information would involve a manual trawl of records at disproportionate cost.

Statistics relating to prosecutions are available for the period 2000 to 2003 and are contained in the following table:

Prosecutions of motorists from the Republic of Ireland for motoring offences 2000–03

	Number of prosecutions
2000	244

[36981]

Angela E. Smith: This information is not readily available from the Education and Library Boards. I will write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Data is not collected by constituency and district council area as Education and Library Board areas do not correspond to either constituency or district council areas. The response will therefore be by Education and Library Board and by primary and secondary sector.

Royal Victoria Hospital (Waiting Times)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the waiting list for neurosurgery at the Royal Victoria Hospital in Northern Ireland. [37598]

Mr. Woodward: The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety has carried out an analysis of the capacity within each trust to meet waiting time targets for 2005–06. Neurosurgery at the Royal Victoria Hospital was identified as a regional specialty in which there is insufficient capacity locally to meet the target. As a result, the trust has developed an action plan with Commissioners that will utilise additional independent sector capacity in Northern Ireland, Great Britain and the Republic of Ireland. By March 2006 no one will be waiting longer than 12 months for neurosurgery in Northern Ireland.

Royal Group of Hospitals (Neurosurgery Nurses)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many nurses were recruited to work in neurosurgery at the Royal Group of Hospitals in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [37597]

Unmanned Railway Crossings

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many unmanned crossings there are on the rail line between Ballymena and Ballykelly; and how regularly they are checked for safety purposes. [37882]

Mr. Woodward: Translink has advised that the Belfast to Londonderry railway line has 27 unmanned public road crossings and 92 private crossings between Ballymena and Ballykelly. The private crossings are checked at least twice a week by track patrol staff with a full inspection carried out by infrastructure engineering staff twice each year and a risk assessment every five years.

Public road crossings are checked at least twice a week by track patrol staff to ensure that all equipment is intact and functioning, and are also subject to a monthly inspection and maintenance regime by signalling technicians. There is also an annual safety examination of all public road crossings by a combined group of inspectors from NI Railways, PSNI and DRD Roads Service.

In addition to the routine inspections carried out by Northern Ireland Railways, a 'Crossings Management Group' consisting of experts from within NI Railways and the Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company meets bi-monthly and prioritises crossings for additional inspection and surveys based on a combination of risk and reports of misuse.

Water Service

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many water connections to consumers in Northern Ireland are metered; and how many of these connections also serve a domestic pipeline. [38560]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katharine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Katharine Bryan, dated 19 December 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about how many water connections to consumers in Northern Ireland are metered and how many of these connections also serve a domestic pipeline (38560). I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

Water Service's current policy is to fit water meters to properties which are not used exclusively for domestic purposes. These include industrial, commercial, agricultural, public buildings and dwelling houses, which are also used for business purposes. 73,650 properties are currently metered.

50,181 of these properties currently attract the free domestic allowance of 200 cubic metres per annum, since they are deemed to include an element of domestic usage. Our metering records do not at present identify how many of these are dwelling houses.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the standing charge was for each diameter of water supply pipe in each of the last five years. [38600]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katharine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Katharine Bryan, dated 19 December 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about what the standing charge was for each diameter of water supply pipe in each of the last five years. (38600). I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

The table below lists the standing charges for all water supply pipe sizes for the past five years.

Pipe size (mm)	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06
Up to 15	46	46	46	46	47
16–20	69	69	69	69	71
21–25	92	92	92	92	94
26–40	173	173	173	173	177
41–50	289	289	289	289	296
51–75	578	578	578	578	593

>100	1,502	1,502	1,502	1,502	1,540

Standing charges are not payable where the internal diameter of the supply pipe is 20 millimetres or less, provided that (i) consumption for the period is less than the domestic allowance of 200 cubic metres per year where the allowance applies; or (ii) consumption is nil if the domestic allowance does not apply.

School Building

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the building work on the new Foyle and Londonderry college and Ebrington school to (a) begin and (b) be concluded. [38341]

Angela E. Smith: A master plan is currently being produced for the Clooney lands which will inform decisions on the utilisation of the site to accommodate education and other facilities. Foyle and Londonderry College, Ebrington Primary School and the Western Education and Library Board will be involved in this exercise. At this stage of the process it would be premature to indicate a commencement date for building work.

HEALTH

Accident and Emergency Services

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will assess the demand on accident and emergency services at Southampton General Hospital between midnight and 4 am on 4 December compared with the corresponding time and date in 2004. [37564]

Caroline Flint: This information is not held centrally.

Alcohol

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many finished consultant episodes relating to alcohol there have been in England in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) patients aged under 18 years and (b) patients aged 18 years and over, (i) in total and (ii) broken down by strategic health authority. [34207]

Caroline Flint: The information in the following table gives finished consultant episodes relating to alcohol in England in each year from 1997 to 2004, for patients under 18 years and patients aged 18 years and over. This is by strategic health authority and by total.

Alzheimer's Disease

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will estimate the cost of (a) treating sufferers of Alzheimer's disease with drugs according to National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines and (b) providing such sufferers with residential care in lieu of drug treatment. [37796]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has not made such an estimate in the difference in costs between treating sufferers of Alzheimer's disease with drugs according to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines and providing such sufferers with residential care in lieu of drug treatment.

Ambulance Service

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many times East Midlands ambulance response times in North Nottinghamshire have been in excess of 30 minutes in each of the last 10 years. [36233]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The information requested is not centrally collected. The data which the Department does collect on ambulance response times is published in the statistical bulletin, "Ambulance services, England: 2004–05". Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many assaults were recorded on Ambulance Service staff in each trust while on duty in each of the last 10 years; how many prosecutions resulted; and if she will make a statement. [32630]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally in the format requested.

Estimated violent or abusive incidents in NHS ambulance trusts for 2000–01, 2001–02 and 2002–03 are shown in the table. Information relating to the number of physical assaults for NHS ambulance trusts in England for 2004–05 will be published shortly.

Information about the number of prosecutions resulting from reports of assaults on ambulance staff was not collected centrally for the period 1995 to 2003. For 2004–05, the number of prosecutions identified involving assaults on ambulance staff in England totalled 100.

Department of Health (DH)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate she has made of the cost of (a) IT, (b) redundancies, (c) property and (d) other costs of merging the Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire ambulance services; [35708]

(2) what estimate she has made of the (a) short, (b) medium and (c) long-term savings of merging the Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire ambulance services. [35709]

Caroline Flint: It is for the local national health service to make estimates into costs of reconfiguring local NHS services.

However, Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire Strategic Health Authority (SHA) has informed the Department that the independent consultants who reviewed the options for the ambulance service reconfiguration, set out broad estimates of costs and savings in a report published on the Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire SHA public website at: www.agwsha.nhs.uk/pdf/pricewaterhouserep05.pdf

The report sets out costs for some redundancies at senior level. However, as planned structure and siting has not yet been finalised, savings and other costs such as property costs and transitional costs cannot yet be estimated.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incident prioritisation systems are in operation in the Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire ambulance services; how they would be unified in the event of a merger of the ambulance services; and what estimate she has made of what the unification would cost. [35710]

Caroline Flint: I am informed by Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire strategic health authority that there are two incident prioritisation systems in operation in the Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire ambulance services. Two of the three trusts operate the same system.

It has not yet been agreed how these systems would be unified or what the cost of unification would be as the planned structure of the new ambulance trust has not yet been finalised.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will assess the level of demand on Hampshire Ambulance Trust for ambulance services between midnight and four am on 4 December 2005 compared with the corresponding time and date in 2004. [37563]

Caroline Flint: This information is not collected centrally. The data which the Department does collect on ambulance response times is published in the statistical bulletin, "Ambulance services, England: 2004–05". This is available in the Library and on the Department's website at:

http://www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/11/36/79/04113679.pdf

Bone Fractures

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the incidence of fractures in (a) the UK population and (b) in the under fives was in each of the last five years; [37136]

(2) what the incidence of fractures was in the under fives in each year from 1970 to 1975. [37137]

Caroline Flint: Information on the incidence of all fractures is not collected centrally. Information is collected centrally on people with fractures admitted to hospital as an in-patient, but this excludes a large proportion of fractures that are treated without requiring in-patient admission.

Carers

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to promote a better understanding of the Carers (Equal Opportunities) Act 2004 in England with respect to (a) individual assessments for carers and (b) the role of local authorities in working in partnership. [37627]

Mr. Byrne: The Carers (Equal Opportunities) Act 2004 has been warmly welcomed by carers and the organisations that represent them.

The Act requires local authorities to inform carers that they may be entitled to an assessment of their needs. The Act also requires that when a local authority requests another pubic authority, such as an education, housing or health body, for assistance in planning services for a carer, that authority must give due consideration to that request.

Monitoring is being undertaken through the Commission for Social Care Inspection's performance assessment framework and data on carers' services is being collected. However, it is too early to have hard data on the effect of the new Act on carers at this stage.

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps her Department is taking to enhance the rights of carers; [37907]

(2) if she will meet care organisations to discuss the merits of a carers' commissioner. [38013]

Mr. Byrne: We have supported legislation which gives new rights to carers. The Carers and Disabled Children Act 2000 strengthens the rights of carers to an assessment of their own needs as carers and involves a new right to a carers assessment. It gives local councils mandatory duties to support carers by providing services to carers directly and in the provision of breaks, and as well, directly supporting carers by providing direct payment for carers services.

The Carers (Equal Opportunities) Act 2004 builds on previous legislation and makes changes to the existing law around carers services.

There is now a duty on councils to inform carers of their right to an assessment of their needs. When assessing carers councils must also take into account whether the carer works or wishes to work, undertakes or wishes to undertake education, training or leisure activities. The Act also facilitates co-operation between authorities in relation to the provision of services that are relevant to carers.

Further proposals will be brought forward in the forthcoming White Paper on social care and health.

I would be happy to meet with care organisations to discuss the merits of a carers' commissioner.

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) strategies and (b) policies her Department is developing to enhance the rights of carers; and what discussions she has had with local government representatives on this topic. [38019]

Mr. Byrne: This Government are the first ever to recognise the contribution and concerns of all carers formally and are supporting carers on a number of fronts through the work of several departments.

We have supported two pieces of legislation which give new rights to carers. The Carers and Disabled Children Act 2000 strengthens the rights of carers to an assessment of their own needs as carers and involves a new right to a carer's assessment. It gives local councils mandatory duties to support carers by providing services to carers directly and in the provision of breaks, and as well, directly supporting carers by providing direct payment for carers' services.

The Carers (Equal Opportunities) Act 2004 builds on previous legislation and makes changes to the existing law around carers services.

There is now a duty on councils to inform carers of their right to an assessment of their needs. When assessing carers councils must also take into account whether the carer works or wishes to work, undertakes or wishes to undertake education, training or leisure activities. The Act also facilitates co-operation between authorities in relation to the provision of services that are relevant to carers.

Further proposals will be brought forward in the forthcoming White Paper on social care and health.

I will continue to meet with local government representatives in the future as appropriate.

Children's Hospices

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to enforce passporting of funding by primary care trusts to children's hospices. [30393]

Mr. Byrne: In line with our guidance "National Standards, Local Action" in the three years to March 2008 80 per cent. of national health service funding will go direct to primary care trusts (PCTs) to give them control in shaping services to meet local needs. PCTs, along with their local partners and stakeholders, are in the best position to judge how the available funding can be used effectively in providing a range of palliative care services for children and young people.

On the 29 November, we launched a guide for the commissioners of palliative care for children and young people "Commissioning Children's and Young People's Palliative Care Services". This practical guide will stimulate improvements in commissioning and promote quality care for children, young people and their families, in a range of settings, for example, palliative care at home, in hospital or in a hospice.

Chiropodists (Registration)

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date it will become a requirement for health care practitioners working as chiropodists to be registered with the Health Professions Council in order to use the title chiropodist; and whether exemption will be given after this date for health care practitioners whose applications to be placed on the register are waiting to be processed. [36748]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The date from which it became a requirement for health professionals working as a chiropodist or podiatrist to be registered with the Health Professions Council (HPC) was 9 July 2005. Health professionals whose application was received by the HPC before the deadline can continue to use the protected title while their application is being processed. Applications received after this deadline will not be dealt with as part of the grandparenting process.

Cholesterol

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps are being taken to treat adults who suffer from high cholesterol; [36612]

(2) what measures the Government are taking to encourage adults to take responsibility for their cholesterol levels. [36613]

Caroline Flint: The Government provides practical guidance on how consumers can reduce the saturated fat in their diets through healthy eating advice, and increase physical activity. The "Choosing Health" White Paper, food and health action plan and physical activity plan all set out actions to deliver improvements in diet and physical activity.

The first route of managing raised cholesterol levels is through lifestyle modification. If required, this can be followed by medication in the form of statins. The quality and outcomes framework of the new general practitioner (GP) contract also includes indicators that encourage GPs to measure and control cholesterol in patients with cardiovascular disease, including diabetes.

The Government are also committed to support people by a new kind of personal health resource in the form of national health service health trainers, who will work with individuals to develop personal health plans as a tool to identify their own priorities for health to make necessary lifestyle changes.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to communicate the risk factors for heart disease to the general public. [36614]

Caroline Flint: The Department, working with other non-governmental organisations, has strong communications programmes that highlight the risk factors for heart disease. These include messages to promote a healthy, balanced diet, becoming more physically active, moderating alcohol intake and highlighting the dangers of smoking and second hand smoke.

The Department produces a family of free consumer magazines, which give health messages and regularly feature articles that communicate the risk factors for heart disease and promote a healthier lifestyle. It has also supported the production of a toolkit for health professionals to develop a strategy to reduce hypertension. The Food Standards Agency has also launched a high profile consumer awareness campaign to bring the 6 gram per day target on salt consumption to people's attention.

Dentistry

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the written ministerial statement of 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 17WS, on national health service dentistry, if she will break down the dentists recruited from 'local international recruitment' by country of origin; and how many (a) are registered with the General Dental Council and (b) have been offered places in (i) general dental service practices, (ii) salaried primary care dental services and (iii) the hospital dental service. [31967]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 28 November 2005]: This information was not collected by country of origin. However, we are aware that the majority of the dentists were recruited from Poland, with smaller numbers from Germany, Spain and Portugal.

Of the local international recruits, all are registered with the General Dental Council; otherwise, they would not be able to work in dental practice and so would not have been eligible to be included in the Department's data collection for the 1,000 dentist target, which only counted newly recruited dentists in practice on 31 October 2005.

We do not collect routine information about the type of national health service dental services in which international recruits are working.

However, the 1,000 dentists targets covered primary care dental services and none of the 1,000 dentists were employed in the hospital dental service. The vast majority were employed under a personal dental services (PDS) contract and a much smaller number under general dental services. A small number of the PDS dentists were employed in the community dental service as salaried PDS dentists.

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the written ministerial statement of 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 17WS, on national health service dentistry, what schemes were used in the domestic recruitment of 88 new dentists. [31968]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 28 November 2005]: Domestic recruitment was undertaken via the keeping in touch scheme, which provides advice and support for dentists returning from a career break. The Department has a network of retaining and returning advisers, located in each of the post graduate dental deaneries, offering advice to returning dentists and arranging returning to practice schemes. The 88 dentists is a whole-time equivalent figure and was compiled from returns submitted by the retaining and returning advisers to the Department.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in Beverley and Holderness were registered with an NHS dentist in each of the last 10 years for which records are available. [37438]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is in the table.

Number of people registered with an NHS dentist in Beverley and Holderness constituency in September each year

	Number of patients
1997	38,019
1998	34,290

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received from dentists who have indicated their intention to leave the NHS if the new contract is introduced; and what steps her Department is taking to retain them. [34169]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has received a number of representations from dentists who are considering whether or not to take up a new national health service dental contract.

The Department has taken a range of steps to promote the benefits of the new contracts to dentists.

The acting chief dental officer and other professional dental officers have attended a large number of local meetings with dentists to discuss the reforms. The reforms are designed to make the NHS a more attractive place for dentists to work by removing the 'treadmill' effect caused by the current fee-per-item system of remuneration, providing a guaranteed annual NHS income with earnings guaranteed for three years at the level of dentists' current NHS commitment, reducing the number of courses of treatment expected over a 12-month period by 5 per cent. for general dental services dentists, and freeing up time to allow a more preventative approach to dental care. Dentists will also continue to benefit from access to the NHS pension scheme.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in (a) the East of England, (b) Suffolk and (c) the constituency of Bury St. Edmunds are registering NHS patients and how many were so doing in each case in each of the last five years. [35465]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of national health service dentists with an open general dental services (GDS) or personal dental services (PDS) contract are in the following table.

Number of GDS and PDS dentists in the specified geographic areas as at 30 September each year

	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005
East of England Government Office Region	2,159	2,141	2,179	2,261	2,459
Suffolk County	255	265	268	272	279
Bury St. Edmunds constituency	50	57	62	63	67

Notes:
1. Data includes all notifications, received by the Dental Practice Board, up to 19 October 2005. Figures for the numbers of dentists at specified dates may vary depending upon the notification period, e.g. data with a later notification period will include more recent notifications of dentists joining or leaving the GDS or PDS.
2. Dentists include principals, assistants and trainees. Prison contracts have been excluded from the data.
3. The postcode of the dental practice was used to allocate dentists to specific geographic areas. County and constituency areas have been defined using the Office for National Statistics All Fields Postcode Directory. The Government office region has been defined by summing the totals for Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire, Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire and Essex strategic health authority areas.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average retention rate of NHS dentists within Lancashire was in each of the past 10 years. [36240]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the requested format. However, the following table shows national health service dentists with a general dental services (GDS) or personal dental services (PDS) contract who have left the GDS or PDS during each specific year as a percentage of total dentists as at 30 September each year within Cumbria and Lancashire strategic health authority area. It should be noted that these figures include dentists who leave for a variety of reasons including retirements and career breaks or maternity leave.

Departmental Estate

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) land and (b) property her Department owns in Southend West constituency. [35965]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not own any land or property in the Southend West constituency.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) building and (b) refurbishment projects are planned by her Department in (i) 2005–06 and (ii) 2006–07; and what the expected costs are of each project. [37386]

Jane Kennedy: No building projects are planned in either 2005–06 and 2006–07. The following refurbishment projects are planned or have been completed during the years in question:

Building	Cost (£) (excluding valued added tax)
Quarry House, Leeds	2,361,776
Wellington House, London, SE1	2,572,000
New Kings Beam House, London, SE1	3,015,000
Richmond House, Whitehall	964,500
Skipton House, London, SE1	530,000

Departmental Property

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) land and (b) her property her Department owns in West Lancashire constituency. [37321]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not own any land and property in the West Lancashire constituency.

Departmental Single Assessment Team

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will set out the progress made by her Department's single assessment change agent team on (a) long-term conditions, (b) care programme approach, (c) person centred planning, (d) individual budgets, (e) the IT programme and (f) other related work programmes. [37298]

Mr. Byrne: We will consider in the forthcoming White Paper how to ensure greater consistency in approach to assessing the needs of all people with health and social care needs and how needs assessment processes could be better supported by IT.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the single assessment process contributes to the (a) recording and (b) commissioning of non-care services. [37299]

Mr. Byrne: The single assessment process (SAP) for older people does not extend to non-care services, although the guidance on implementing the SAP (LAC (2002) 1) makes it clear that the framework could support links with housing, benefits and transport, which all make important contributions to independence and wellbeing. Where possible local national health service bodies and councils are encouraged to engage with these wider interests as they implement the single assessment process.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to promote the development and delivery of joint training on the single assessment process to health, care and housing staff. [37300]

Mr. Byrne: There are currently no plans in place to support joint training on the single assessment process (SAP) for health, social care and housing staff at a national level but such arrangement may exist locally.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to revise single assessment process guidance to give carers (a) housing-related needs and (b) housing-related service options. [37421]

Mr. Byrne: Carers have a right to approach social services for an assessment of their individual needs, in recognition of the fact that many people with caring responsibilities have, or are at risk of developing, a social care need. Where a carer is an older person they should be assessed in accordance with the single assessment process (SAP), which includes consideration of risks to an individual's independence from their immediate environment. The SAP does not currently extend to housing-related support, but the Department and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister are committed to exploring development of an integrated assessment process, which covers health, care and housing-related support.

Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what progress has been made towards piloting individualised budgets to bring together sources of funding for services, equipment and adaptations to meet disability needs; and if she will make a statement; [37096]

(2) what steps her Department has taken to extend self-directed control to young disabled people; and if she will make a statement. [37101]

Mr. Byrne: The Department is working with the Department for Work and Pensions and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister to take forward a programme of individual budget pilots in 13 local authorities across England. The pilots cover older people, people with physical disabilities or sensory impairments, people with learning disabilities and people with mental health needs.

An individual budget would give the individual being supported a transparent resource allocation which could then be used flexibly in the best way to meet that person's needs. The individual budget pilots will bring together different combinations of funding from a number of sources. The income streams being included in the pilots are:

Council-provided community care services,

Independent living fund,

Supporting people,

Disabled facilities grants,

Access to work and Integrated community equipment services.

The first pilot, in West Sussex, will focus on older people and will begin in December this year. The remaining pilots will come on stream during the first half of 2006 and will last for between 18 months and two years. The pilots are being comprehensively evaluated by a consortium of academic research teams in order to provide Ministers with evidence to inform national roll out.

At least three of the 13 pilots will include a focus on young people undergoing transition into adulthood. The Department for Education and Skills will be working closely with us during the piloting activity and considering options for piloting individual budgets for disabled children, young people and families.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her Department's definition is of disabled persons for the purpose of community care services; and when this definition was last (a) consulted on and (b) reviewed. [37097]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not have a definition of disability. The term, together with other terms, is used in primary legislation, the National Assistance Act 1948, but is not defined. The word therefore bears its ordinary meaning for the purpose of community care services, which are provided based on an assessment of need and locally determined eligibility.

There is generally no legal requirement to consult before making primary legislation; however, the eligibility criteria for community care services set out in the National Assistance Act 1948, as amended, were considered as part of the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit report, Improving the life chances of disabled people (2005).

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultation she has undertaken on the merits of a right for disabled persons to request not to live in a residential or nursing care setting; and if she will make a statement. [37098]

Mr. Byrne: A right for disabled persons to request not to live in a residential or nursing care setting was consulted on in the 'Independence, Well-being and Choice' Green Paper, between 21 March and 28 July 2005.

Responses to the consultation were mixed and no clear view emerged.

Elderly Care

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assistance her Department provides for elderly people leaving hospital who live in rural areas. [37233]

Mr. Byrne: It is for individual national health service organisations and local authorities, to ensure that the health and social care needs of all patients are met following discharge from hospital.

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by the NHS on (a) medicines, (b) community health services and (c) outpatient services for elderly mentally impaired patients in (i) 1997 and (ii) the latest year for which figures are available. [38052]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 15 December 2005.]: The information requested is shown in the following table. The latest year for which data is available is 2003–04.

£ million

	1997–98	2003–04
Medicines	5,173	9,272
Community health services	3,612	6,197
Mental health out-patients for elderly (65 plus)	107	328

Notes:

1. Medicines figures are NET expenditure and includes family health service (FHS) drugs and hospital and community health service (HCHS) drugs.
2. The medicines figure for 1997–98 is in cash terms, in comparison the 2003–04 figure is based on resource terms.

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) acute and (b) long stay (i) NHS and (ii) private and voluntary sector beds for elderly mentally impaired people there were in England (A) in 1997 and (B) on the latest date for which figures are available. [38051]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 15 December 2005]: The information requested is shown in the following table. This covers the number of hospital beds and places in residential and nursing care homes for elderly people with mental illness in England for 1996–97 and 2003–04[1]. However, data on private hospitals and clinics is not available in a comparable form, due to service definitional issues. Data on places in care homes from 2002–03 is not comparable to data for earlier years.

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by English local authorities on (a) residential and (b) community care services for the elderly mentally impaired in (i) 1997 and (ii) the latest year for which figures are available. [38053]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 15 December 2005]: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Extra Care Schemes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions her Department has had with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on the extension of the single assessment process to include housing-related support in respect of Extra Care schemes; [37294]

(2) what discussions her Department has had with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on the relationship between the requirements of the single assessment and the supporting people quality assessment framework in respect of Extra Care schemes. [37295]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has held early discussions with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister about the possibility of extending the domains of the single assessment process for older people to include housing-related support. In principle, both Departments believe that a single assessment process covering health and social care and housing-related support would be in the interests of individuals who may have a need for support. These discussions are at an early stage.

Foundation Hospitals

Jim Sheridan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria are used for hospitals in England to move from acute status to foundation hospital. [34310]

Mr. Byrne: To apply for national health service foundation trust (NHSFT) status applicants must be an acute, specialist or mental health NHS trust and hold a three or two star performance rating.

The Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003 provides that an NHS trust may make an application to Monitor, the statutory name of which is the independent regulator of NHS Foundation Trusts, for consideration for authorisation as an NHSFT, if the application is supported by the Secretary of State.

To be considered by the Secretary of State, applicants are required to develop a five-year strategic business plan, show strong leadership and commitment to modernising services, demonstrate the involvement of staff and other key stakeholders for their vision for reform, undertake a public consultation and be subject to an independent due diligence review of their business plan. To be authorised as an NHSFT by Monitor, applicants must meet the criteria laid down in the Health and Social Care Act 2003 and Monitor's own criteria. The criteria reflect the need for an NHSFT to be legally constituted, well governed and financially viable.

General Practitioners

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioner referrals have been made using the choose and book system in each month since July 2004; and how many of those referrals were (a) telephone-only bookings and (b) online bookings. [29832]

Mr. Byrne: Prior to April 2005, choose and book was available in only a small number of early adopter sites. The number of general practitioner referrals made using choose and book in each month since April 2005 is shown in the table. In addition to the figures given, a total of 2,328 additional transactions have been made successfully through the choose and book system. This includes re-booked appointments that were made by patients who, for example, chose to change the date and/or time of their appointment.

Number of referrals using choose and book

Month/year	New bookings
April 2005	285
May 2005	339
June 2005	367
July 2005	644
August 2005	1,597
September 2005	4,227
October 2005	12,813
November 2005	21,969

The breakdown by channel of the appointment bookings is collected only for those primary care trusts (PCTs) associated with the national choose and book appointments line. A number of PCTs run their own local appointments lines for which data is not collected centrally. The Department is currently validating data from the national appointments line and I will write to you with this data once it is available.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans the Government have to extend the opening hours of NHS primary care trusts; [30104]

(2) what representations the Government have received on making general practitioner surgeries become more accessible; [30105]

(3) what incentives will be provided for doctors to have longer surgery opening hours; [30106]

(4) she plans to make longer opening hours a requirement in general practitioner contracts. [30107]

Mr. Byrne: It is clear from the recent 'Your Health, Your Care, Your Say' public consultation that patients would prefer general practice to offer extended opening hours. We will set out proposals to respond to that challenge in our forthcoming White Paper and in doing so we will want to work with general practitioners, nurses, the British Medical Association and others. The general practice contract framework includes incentives for improved access and these are being renewed.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she plans to encourage nurse-led practices, mainly staffed by senior nurses with a general practitioner acting in an overseeing capacity; and what steps she will take to secure a good quality of care in such circumstances. [30108]

Mr. Byrne: Provision of primary medical services by nurse led practices has been available to the national health service for some time, having been introduced under personal medical services.

With the introduction of the new primary medical services arrangements in 2004, primary care trusts now have a range of flexibilities over what services they commission and from whom in order to better meet the needs of patients locally. Common requirements and safeguards apply to all providers of primary care to ensure minimum standards are met and encourage high quality care.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to recruit general practitioners in rural areas. [37232]

Mr. Byrne: It is the responsibility of primary care trusts (PCTs) to assess and make provision for the healthcare needs of their local communities. PCTs have the resources to commission services and identify the number of professional staff that they need to deliver those services.

A range of recruitment and retention initiatives are in place to help expand the national health service workforce across England. These include improving pay and conditions, encouraging the NHS to become a better, more flexible and diverse employer, help with accessing child care, increasing training, attracting back returners and running national and international recruitment campaigns. More recently, the new primary care development scheme will allow local employers to use funding for innovative approaches to boost recruitment to local primary care services.

As a result of these measures, the primary care workforce has expanded. Between September 1997 and June 2005, the number of general practitioners, excluding retainers and registrars, employed by the NHS has increased by 4,372 (15.6 per cent.) and between September 1997 and September 2004 the primary care nursing workforce has increased by 25,115 (32.5 per cent.).

Health Bill

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate she has made of the number of public houses in Gravesham constituency likely to be exempt from a smoking ban under the provisions of the Health Bill; [36959]

(2) what assessment she has made of the likely impact of the Health Bill on health inequalities within Gravesham constituency. [36960]

Caroline Flint: The Health Bill has not been assessed on the basis of its likely impact on the constituency of Gravesham. No estimate has been made of the number of public houses in Gravesham in this context.

A partial regulatory impact assessment for the Health Bill has been published and is available in the Library.

Health Services

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Leader of the House's statement of 17 November 2005, Official Report, column 1118, on health services, (a) what the cost is of the 168 more NHS consultants and (b) what proportion of the staff to which she refers work part-time. [32001]

Mr. Byrne: Information as to the annual cost of the additional national health service consultants is not held centrally. However, the information in the table shows the number of Hospital and Community Health Services consultants for each year since 1997 in Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire Strategic Health Authority.

HCHS consultants within Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire Strategic Health Authority: 1997–June 2005

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when her Department last discussed with local hon. Members proposals for future provision of health care services at (a) Royal Liverpool University hospital and (b) Liverpool Women's hospital; and if she will make a statement. [37996]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 15 December 2005]: The process of discussing any proposals for the future provisions of health care services at the Royal Liverpool University hospital and the Liverpool Women's hospital with local hon. Members falls within the remit of Cheshire and Merseyside strategic health authority.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average length of time to make an appointment with a general practitioner was in the Northamptonshire primary care trust area in each year since 1997. [36140]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not collect the data in the format requested. However, as at September 2005, 100 per cent. of patients in the Northamptonshire and Heartlands primary care trust area were able to be offered an appointment with a general practitioner or primary health care professional within one working day.

Hepatitis C

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects that home tests for hepatitis C will receive CE registration and be available for sale over the counter in England. [38154]

Jane Kennedy: Since December 2003, in vitro diagnostic devices placed on the United Kingdom market have to conform to the requirements of the In Vitro Diagnostic Devices Directive (98/79/EEC) which has been transposed into UK law by the Medical Devices Regulations 2002 (SI2002 No.618).

In vitro diagnostic test kits for hepatitis C attract the highest level of control and need to have their compliance with the directive assessed by an independent certification body known as a Notified Body. The manufacturer also needs to register with the regulatory authority in the member state where the device is to be placed on the market.

In so far as can be determined, no such registrations have been made for this type of test kit with the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency in the UK, and we are not aware of any hepatitis C home test kits that are in development.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to promote testing for hepatitis C; and if she will make a statement. [38155]

Caroline Flint: The Department has published information and guidance for health professionals and for the public, highlighting those considered to be at risk of hepatitis C infection and who should consider being tested, or should be offered testing, for hepatitis C infection. This forms part of the hepatitis C awareness campaign and there is currently a continuing programme to raise awareness of hepatitis C among the public and those groups at risk.

In addition, a new national health service hepatitis C awareness website was launched and has been published at www.hepc.nhs.uk and a new national hepatitis C freephone information line at 0800 451451.

HIV (Staffordshire)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were recorded as HIV positive in Staffordshire in each of the last 10 years. [35657]

Ms Rosie Winterton: HIV data is not available by county, but by strategic health authority (SHA) or region. The latest data on HIV diagnoses for Shropshire and Staffordshire SHA can be found on the Health Protection Agency's website at:

www.hpa.org.uk/infections/topics_az/hiv_and_sti/hiv/epidemiology/hars_tables.htm

Hospices

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the written answer to the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland, of 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 258W, on hospices, what percentage of total funding she estimates was provided to (a) adult hospices and (b) children's hospices from NHS budgets in (i) 1997 and (ii) the most recent period for which figures are available. [36347]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland (Dr. Kumar) on 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 258W. The Department does not routinely collect data on national health service funding for adult and children's hospices. We are not aware of published data Help the Hospices prior to 2004.

Hospitals (West Sussex)

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost per patient treated at (a) foundation hospitals and (b) hospitals in West Sussex was in the most recent year for which figures are available. [35163]

Caroline Flint: There are no data collected centrally at individual patient level. However, data are collected on a finished consultant episode (FCE) basis. An FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one health care provider. The latest cost data available is for 2003–04.

It is not possible to assess the average cost per FCE for foundation trusts, as they did not become operational until 2004–05 and cost data for that year are not yet available.

In 2003–04, the average cost per FCE for hospitals in West Sussex, was as follows:

	Average cost per FCE
Royal West Sussex National Health Service Trust	1,164
Surrey and Sussex Healthcare NHS Trust	1,482
Worthing and Southlands Hospitals NHS Trust	1,006

Independent Sector Treatment Centre

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what services to NHS patients in South Gloucestershire will be provided by the proposed Independent Sector Treatment Centre; where the centre will be located; and if she will make a statement. [35201]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 6 December 2005]: The exact nature of the facilities are subject to the outcome of the current procurement process. They will, however, be located so that patients have limited travel times and easy access. The services provided may include orthopaedics, general surgery, urology, ear, nose and throat, gynaecology and plastic surgery.

Influenza Vaccinations

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the number of people in at-risk groups who have been unable to obtain a seasonal influenza vaccination in Gravesham constituency. [36952]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not collected centrally.

McKinsey's

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the (a) length, (b) terms and (c) cost are of the contract for the project being undertaken by McKinsey's into the structural and service reconfiguration of

(a) Merseyside and Lancashire Acute Trusts and (b) North Cheshire, Warrington, St. Helens and Knowsley hospitals; [37316]

(2) how much has been paid by Merseyside and Cheshire strategic health authority to McKinsey's for work carried out in (a) 2002, (b) 2003, (c) 2004 and (d) so far in 2005. [37317]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally and can instead be obtained via Cheshire and Merseyside strategic health authority.

Medicine Reviews (Older People)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to the answer of 14 July 2005, Official Report, column 1198W, on older people (medication review), if she will publish Part Two of the Taskforce on Medicine Partnership's evaluation of Room for Review; and what the reasons are for the delay in publication of the evaluation; [32547]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 1220W, on Taskforce on Medicine reviews, why in the answer of 14 July 2005, Official Report, column 1198W on older people (medicine review), she stated that the evaluation would be published in the summer of 2005; when the need for ethics approval was (a) identified and (b) obtained; and if she will make a statement; [33170]

(3) pursuant to the answer of 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 261W, on medicine reviews (older people), what methodology was used to make the assessment that good progress has been made. [34524]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the statement given by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Mr. Byrne) on 6 December 2005, Official Report, column 847–48.

Mental Health

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations she has received from (a) staff employed by Oxfordshire Mental Health NHS Trust and (b) other interested parties on proposed changes to the services the trust offers; and what the content of these representations was. [25103]

Caroline Flint: A search of the Department's correspondence and parliamentary questions databases shows that since 27 June 2005, there have been three letters received from staff employed by Oxfordshire Mental Health Trust. There have also been six private offices cases. Nigel Crisp, chief executive of the national health service has received a letter from the director of the Centre for Suicide Research based at the University of Oxford. No parliamentary questions have been tabled to the Department.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many adolescent mental health beds there are in (a) Shropshire and Staffordshire strategic health authority and (b) Burntwood, Lichfield and Tamworth primary care trust. [35656]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The latest available data shows that in 2004–05, there were ten beds available in wards classified as mental illness: children: short stay or mental illness: children: long stay within Shropshire and Staffordshire strategic health authority. These categories include adolescents.

None of these beds were within Burntwood, Lichfield and Tamworth primary care trust.

Department of Health form KH03.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answers of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 272W and 31 October 2005, Official Report, column 842W, in what year data on the number of hospital bed days of patients aged (a) under 16 and (b) under 18 on admission on adult psychiatric wards started being collected. [36968]

Mr. Byrne: The data was first collected in 2001–02. The data is currently collected on a quarterly basis in connection with local delivery plan returns. The Mental Health Act Commission also collects information on bed occupancy.

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether the review of the tribunal model and assessment of the workforce prior to the introduction of the Mental Health Bill has been completed; [35424]

(2) what assessment she has made of the conclusion of the Mental Health Bill working group on the viability of the proposed new mental health tribunal. [35425]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Joint Parliamentary Committee welcomed our proposals for a new mental health tribunal, but expressed concerns about its practicability. We have consulted with key stakeholders, in particular through the medium of the tribunals project group. We will ensure that our proposals improve the accessibility of the tribunal system, but do so in a way which is practicable and affordable.

Microbiology Water Specialists

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Health Protection Agency teams have appointed microbiology water specialists, broken down by region. [35793]

Caroline Flint: The Health Protection Agency (HPA) has six specialist water microbiologists in post. Four of these are employed at the Centre for Infections, at Colindale; one is at the Newcastle regional laboratory; and one is at the South East regional laboratory.

Midwife-led Birthing Centres

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the role of midwife-led birthing centres. [37423]

Mr. Byrne: Midwife-led birth centres offer a comfortable, low-tech environment for women who have been assessed as being at low risk of developing complications during birth.

Midwife-led care should be provided within a framework that enables easy and early transfer of women and babies who unexpectedly require specialist care. As with other options, the outcome of these types of care should be regularly audited.

The maternity standard of the national service framework for children, young people and maternity services requires national health service maternity care providers and primary care trusts to ensure that the range of services available locally constitutes real choice for women. Local options for midwife-led care may include midwife-led units in the community or on a hospital site.

Mobile Phone Masts

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will commission an independent study of epidemiology in relation to mobile telephone masts and their possible impacts on health; and if she will make a statement: [31165]

(2) if the Government will carry out epidemiological research into cancer clusters around mobile phone masts that have been in place for 10 years or more; and if she will make a statement. [38335]

Caroline Flint: The independently managed mobile telecommunications and health research (MTHR) programme, jointly funded by Government and industry, has supported about 30 individual studies to investigate the potential health effects of radiofrequency (RF) exposures from mobile phone technology. The programme has commissioned a study of cancer incidence in pre-school children living near mobile phone base stations compared with those living further away. Infants and young children are more likely to be home-based and this is the reason why the MTHR childhood cancer study has, to date, been the only scientifically viable option for epidemiology around base stations. Studies of older children and adults have not been recommended because proximity to base stations has been shown to be a poor representation of exposure to RF fields. The MTHR studies concentrate largely on the exposures from the mobile phone handsets because these exposures are considerably higher than those from base stations. A description of the programme and the individual studies can be found on its web site www.mthr.org.uk.

The report entitled Mobile Phones and Health 2004 published by the National Radiological Protection Board (now the Radiation Protection Division of the Health Protection Agency, HPA) noted that there are continuing concerns about the impact of base stations on health and well-being

> "despite the current evidence which shows that exposures of individuals are likely to be only a small fraction of those from phones".

This report is published as Documents of the NRPB, Vol 15, No 5 and can be found on the HPA's website at: www.hpa.org.uk/radiation. The report recommended

> "studies focused on ascertaining the exposure of people to RF fields".

In line with this recommendation, the MTHR programme has supported an assessment of a prototype RF exposure meter for the possible use in future epidemiological studies in relation to base stations.

Morecambe Primary Care Trust

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will assess the proposal by the Morecambe primary care trust to close the mental health wards that it rents at Westmorland General hospital. [37876]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 15 December 2005]: This is a matter for the Morecambe Bay primary care trust in discussion with interested stakeholders.

MRSA

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many official complaints were made during the last eight years from people or relatives of people who contracted MRSA living in (a) London, (b) the London borough of Havering and (c) Hornchurch constituency in connection with hygiene conditions at the hospital or health centre where they or their family member contracted MRSA. [35306]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 14 December 2005]: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Neurology

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many full time equivalent medical staff there were within neurological specialty practising in the NHS in each year since 2001; and how many were (a) consultants, (b) registrars and (c) senior house officers. [31927]

Mr. Byrne: The requested information is shown in the following table.

Hospital, public health medicine and community health services: Medical staff within the neurology and neurosurgery specialties by specified grade—England[1]

NHS Administration

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the average number of hours each week a (a) nurse and (b) doctor spent on administrative tasks in (i) 1997, (ii) 2000 and (iii) the most recent period for which figures are available. [29831]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally.

NHS Commissioning

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps she plans to take to consult local communities and other stakeholders about proposals to outsource the commissioning function of primary care trusts; [20964]

(2) whether as part of her plans for a patient-led NHS local authorities will be able to bid to discharge the commissioning function of primary care trusts. [21047]

Mr. Byrne: As part of the proposals for primary care trust (PCT) reconfiguration, one strategic health authority (SHA) has proposed to procure an external management team to run one of their newly proposed PCTs. However, this proposal will not be considered during the forthcoming local consultation as it is for the new PCTs, not the current SHAs, to decide how best to manage their responsibilities after reconfiguration.

NHS Finance Data

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her written statement of 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 37WS, on publication of NHS finance data, what criteria she is setting in selecting which NHS trusts will be supported by turnaround teams; and whether any NHS trusts in Worcestershire are planned to be so supported. [34995]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 6 December 2005]: The turnaround teams will undertake an assessment of organisations that are forecasting the most significant deficits, to ensure that there is an agreed understanding of the local financial problem and that the necessary immediate actions are in hand to address it. Following this there will be the opportunity to agree tailored packages of support with the strategic health authority (SHA) and the organisation. It is planned that there is an assessment with West Midlands South SHA of the financial position of Worcestershire Acute Hospitals National Health Service Trust.

NHS Reconfiguration

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many job losses she expects as a result of the merger of primary care trusts in Lincolnshire; what budget has been allocated for severance payments; and if she will make a statement. [36701]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Ministers have given the go-ahead for all 28 strategic health authorities (SHAs) to begin local consultations on boundary changes to SHAs and primary care trusts. Consultations will start on 14 December for a period of 14 weeks (until 22 March). No decisions on boundary changes will be taken until these local consultations have been completed and their outcomes considered by Secretary of State. Until any boundary changes are agreed, it is not possible to calculate the impact on jobs in any one area.

There will be no central budget to finance any cost of severance. Guidance to SHAs is that severance costs should be minimised and, where necessary, financed from in-year management cost savings in 2005–06, 2006–07 and 2007–08.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether (a) her Department and (b) the relevant strategic health authority plans to support a merger of Alder Hey NHS Trust with Liverpool Women's Hospital Foundation Trust. [37315]

Mr. Byrne: Any proposals to merge national health service trusts need to be considered by the local NHS. Once a set of proposals has been produced, the relevant NHS organisation will, as is their duty, consult patients, the public and their representatives.

NHS Records

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure all NHS patients are made aware of their rights as set out in the NHS Care Records Guarantee; and if she will make a statement. [34982]

Mr. Byrne: A major public information campaign will be launched in 2006. Its purpose will be to advise patients and the wider public about the implications of the NHS Care Records Service (NHS CRS) for the way in which information about them is held and used. The campaign will provide the information people need to make choices about sharing and accessing their health information. This will cover controls on access by health professionals; how access will be monitored and policed; options people have to further limit access; access in an emergency; and what happens when someone is not able to make decisions for themselves.

We intend to provide front-line national health service staff, including the Patient Advice and Liaison Service and NHS Direct, and also key voluntary sector organisations, with briefing materials and web resources to enable them to answer questions. In addition, a simple explanatory leaflet will be sent to every household in England, available in a range of formats and languages, with an easy-read version for people with learning disabilities and limited literacy.

Other planned initiatives include a series of roadshows to give information face to face and to act as a focus for local publicity, and a short video/DVD to be played in waiting rooms at NHS sites, backed by posters and leaflets.

Preparatory work to inform front-line NHS staff about the NHS CRS has already begun. Some one million leaflets have been distributed, along with posters and DVDs.

Final details of timing and phasing of the campaign have yet to be determined, but the main period of activity is expected to be in mid 2006.

NHS Staff

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her most recent estimate is of the total number of staff who have left employment in the NHS in a year. [36435]

Mr. Byrne: Information on numbers of staff leaving the national health service is not collected centrally.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the independent and voluntary sectors about their willingness and preparedness to absorb staff from the primary care trusts as they divest themselves of their provider responsibilities. [21875]

Mr. Byrne: None. Any such discussions would be a local matter for primary care trusts.

NHS Superannuation Scheme

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will estimate the cost of equalising widowers' entitlement with widows entitlement for pre-1988 members of the NHS superannuation scheme. [35175]

Mr. Byrne: The cost of backdating entitlement to widower's pension before 1988, in respect of active female members of the NHS pension scheme for England and Wales is estimated to lie in the range of £300 to £400 million.

Nurses

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nursing vacancies there are, broken down by grade. [32068]

Mr. Byrne: Information on the number of vacancies in the national health service lasting three months or more is collected in the NHS vacancy survey. As at March 2005, there were 5,801 three month vacancies for qualified nurses, which represents a rate of 1.9 per cent. This represents the fourth successive annual fall in vaccines for qualified nurses.

Information on vacancies for qualified nurses is not collected by grade.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) agency and (b) NHS nurses were employed by the NHS in Gravesham constituency in the last year for which figures are available; and what the cost was in each case. [36957]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average time taken to process NHS nurses' bursary applications was in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06 to date; and if she will make a statement. [29705]

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many students have applied for bursaries for nursing courses which started in September; and to date how many applications have not been processed. [30574]

Mr. Byrne: The following information has been provided by the NHS Pensions Agency who are responsible for the student grants unit.

The average waiting time for nurses' national health service bursary payments in 2004–05 was five days from the start of the course. Bursary payments in academic year 2004–05 were made on receipt of a provisional list of students who were expected to enrol at the university. Payment was made by cheque, which was sent to the university for collection by the student.

The average waiting time for nurses' NHS bursary payments in 2005–06 is 11 days from the course start date. Bursary payments in academic year 2005–06 are made on receipt of confirmation of enrolment from the university and by the banks automated clearing system payment into students' bank account.

There could be several reasons for delayed payment:

internal handling by the NHS Student Grants Unit;

the university has not advised the unit that the student has actually started the course;

Universities are required to notify the student grants unit within five working days of the student starting the course. The unit aims to pay students within 10 working days of the start of the course; there is a query with the student regarding their application form; late application submitted by the student.

11,941 students have applied for bursaries for nursing courses which started in September 2005, all of which have now been processed.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what pay increases have been awarded to auxiliary nurses in each year since May 1997. [34134]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is in the table.

Obesity

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Obesity Care Pathway being produced by her Department will include appropriate references to slimming on referral programmes. [36991]

Caroline Flint: The draft Obesity Care Pathway is currently out for consultation until 3 January 2006. Consultation responses, including those on slimming on referral programmes, will be evaluated in the light of the evidence before a final text is produced.

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on (a) progress made to date and (b) the timetable for future action in relation to obesity initiatives in the Implementation Programme of the White Paper on Public Health, with particular reference to (i) the Weight Loss Guide, (ii) the Obesity Care Pathway and the Obesity Tool Kit, (iii) the National Partnership for Obesity, (iv) establishment of the Obesity Programme Board, (v) the development of a job description and management structure for health trainers and (vi) the work of the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence in assessing weight loss options. [36993]

Caroline Flint: The Obesity Care Pathway and the Weight Loss Guide are currently out for consultation until 3 January 2006. They will be published in the new year.

The Obesity Tool Kit has been circulated in draft to consultees, and is expected to be published in the new year by the National Heart Forum and Faculty for Public Health.

The National Partnership for Obesity will no longer be established. However, relevant groups will be included in the stakeholder consultation list for the delivery of the Obesity PSA Target.

The Obesity Programme Board had its first meeting on 27 August 2005.

A draft job description for health trainers has been sent to all the partnerships involved in the early adopter phase for review, to be agreed by the end of March 2006. Management structures for health trainers will be agreed and implemented at a local level.

The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's draft guidance on assessing weight loss options will be going out for full consultation next year with publication expected in early 2007.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children were suffering with obesity in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire, (d) Greater London and (e) England in (i) 1994 and (ii) 2004. [35970]

Caroline Flint: The data are not available in the exact format requested. We are unable to supply the data for Southend, Essex, Hertfordshire and Greater London. Data is available by Government office region (GOR) for 2001–02 and we have provided the areas that most closely match those requested; London GOR (for Greater London) and the East of England GOR (for Southend, Essex and Hertfordshire).

The 2003 data are the most recent available. Comparable data for 1994 are not available; therefore, we have provided 1995 data. The information requested is in the following table, using the estimated obesity prevalence results of the Health Survey for England (HSE) for 2002 and 2003.

Prevalence of obesity among children aged 2 to 10 (with a valid BMI), by gender, England, 1995 and 2003

Operation Costs

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total cost was of (a) sex change, (b) bunion and (c) cosmetic surgery operations for the last year for which figures are available; how many of each category of operation took place; and if she will make a statement. [32187]

Mr. Byrne: The cost information requested is not collected centrally.

The table on activity shows the number of finished consultant episodes (FCEs) where the main operation was one of the operative procedures requested.

Count of finished consultant episodes for sex change, bunion and cosmetic surgery operative procedures in national health service hospitals in England 2003–04

Sex change operations	95
Bunion operations	17,796
Cosmetic surgery operations	67,804

Hospital Episode Statistics, Health and Social Care information centre

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost is of (a) each operation provided at independent treatment centres and (b) the same operation undertaken by an NHS trust. [35649]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 8 December 2005]: The average cost of operations provided at independent sector treatment centres is commercially confidential.

National health service (NHS) tariff data has been placed in the Library and is also available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/09/15/31/04091531.pdf.

These data are not comparable with independent sector contracts as they have to cover a range of costs, which are not applicable to the NHS but we know that overall costs in the independent sector contracts in 2004–05 was estimated to be less than the NHS equivalent.

Ophthalmic Services

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total expenditure on general ophthalmic services has been in each year since 1997–98. [4224]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Total expenditure on general ophthalmic services in England from 1997–98 to 2004–05 is shown in the table.

Expenditure on General Ophthalmic Service: England

£ million[1]

	Gross resource expenditure
1997–98	243.1
1998–99	242.2
1999–2000	286.0
2000–01	289.9
2001–02	302.3
2002–03[2]	303.9
2003–04	321.6
2004–05	340.0

[1] Expenditure is on an accruals basis.
[2] The consistency of data may have been affected by the changeover in accounting responsibilities from strategic health authorities to primary care trusts from 1 October 2002.

Palliative Care (Children)

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what weighting is applied to palliative care for children in the primary care trust capitation formula. [36735]

Mr. Byrne: There is no specific weighting in the weighted-capitation formula, used to inform revenue allocations to primary care trusts (PCTs), but the formula is the best available measure of need for all aspects of health care.

The components of the weighted-capitation formula are used to weight each PCTs population according to their relative need (i.e. age, and additional need) for health care and geographical differences in the cost of providing health care (i.e. market forces factor).

Parliamentary Questions

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to answer the Question on the emergency bed service (18771) tabled by the hon. Member for Romsey on 12 October. [30998]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1709W.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will answer question reference 30777 tabled by the hon. Member for Pendle on 16 November 2005, on primary care trusts. [35208]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 6 December 2005]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on Monday 12 December, Official Report, column 1816W.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to reply to the questions tabled by the hon. Member for Billericay relating to overseas nurses for answer on (a) 24 October, references 21223 and 21224 and (b) 17 November, reference 29318. [36234]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 12 December 2005]: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave him on Monday 12 December 2005.

Patient Appointments

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the average cost of a missed general practitioner appointment was in 2004–05; and what assessment she has made of the merits of primary care trusts using text message reminder systems for patient appointments; [18567]

(2) how much has been saved by hospitals using text message reminder systems for patient appointments; and if she plans to encourage all NHS trusts to use this technology; [18569]

(3) what assessment she has made of the impact on patient outcomes of schemes that use text messages to remind patients to take their medication; [18571]

(4) what assessment she has made of the use of mobile handset remote monitoring systems that allow doctors to monitor patients in their own home rather than having them stay in hospital. [18595]

Mr. Byrne: Information on the cost of missed general practice appointments is not collected or held centrally. However, there is evidence from the work of the National Primary Care Development Team that better management of patient access arrangements, including the use of telephone technology can reduce the incidence. More than 5,000 practices, some 60 per cent. of the total, have taken part in the team's Advanced Access programme. Information on savings made by hospitals using text messaging reminder systems is similarly not collected or held centrally. However, the Department is currently undertaking a strategic review of assistive technology, including text messaging reminder and remote monitoring systems, which will inform the forthcoming White Paper.

Patient Forums

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list each patient and public involvement forum in England; and what the funding body is for each forum. [37118]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 14 December 2005]: There is a patient and public involvement forum for every national health service trust, foundation trust and primary care trust in England.

The Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health (CPPIH) provides funding for forums via forum support organisations. There are around 140 of these organisations, each supporting several forums.

A list showing all patient and public involvement forums in England and the forum support organisations that support them has been placed in the Library.

Pesticides

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Chief Medical Officer will report on the evidence received from the Royal College of Physicians following the oral submission given by the Health Protection Agency to the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution on its investigation of non-NHS clinics visited in relation to the impact of pesticides. [33896]

Caroline Flint: The Department of Health is not aware of any evidence received from the Royal College of Physicians to the Royal Commission of Environmental Pollution (RCEP), in the preparation of its report on crop spraying and the health of resident and bystanders. Also, we are not aware that the RCEP in its investigations carried out any visits to non-national health service clinics, and can find no reference to this in the RCEP report.

Physiotherapy

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate she has made of the number of new graduate physiotherapists who have not found employment as physiotherapists in 2005; [33182]

(2) how many overseas nationals are working as physiotherapists within the NHS; [33242]

(3) what steps she is taking to increase the number of physiotherapists in the NHS; [33243]

(4) what representations she has received on the number of posts available in the NHS for newly-qualified physiotherapists; [33245]

(5) how many new graduate physiotherapists will qualify in 2005. [33244]

Mr. Byrne: The latest available figure shows that at September 2004, there were 19,139 physiotherapists employed by the national health service. It is the responsibility of local NHS employers and strategic health authorities to ensure there are sufficient numbers of physiotherapists to meet service needs.

There were 2,157 NHS physiotherapy training places in England in 2002–03. It is not possible to identify the number of these who successfully graduated in 2005. Data regarding the level of overseas nationals working as physiotherapists is not collected centrally.

We are working closely with the Chartered Society of Physiotherapy, the NHS workforce review team and NHS organisations to help physiotherapy graduates find opportunities. As a result of this collaborative work, there is an action plan in place to ensure local managers have access to a range of strategies across recruitment, commissioning and skill mix. In addition, NHS employers have extended the NHS jobs service from December, which will enable physiotherapy graduates to register their details and be automatically alerted to NHS vacancies.

Podiatrists

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps her Department is taking to increase the number of podiatrists in (a) England and (b) Weston-Super-Mare; [36395]

(2) how many podiatrists per 100 people there are in (a) England and (b) Weston-super-Mare. [36396]

Mr. Byrne: Information on the number of podiatrists per 100,000 population in England and Avon Gloucestershire and Wiltshire strategic health authority is shown in the table.

Information is not available specifically for the Western-Super-Mare area.

A range of workforce supply initiatives are in place to ensure the NHS workforce continues to meet service needs. These include: improving pay and conditions; encouraging the NHS to become a better, more flexible and diverse employer; increasing training; investing in child care and continuing professional development; attracting back returners and running national and international recruitment campaigns.

It is the responsibility of primary care trusts and SHAs to analyse their local situation and assess the needs of the local population and to secure services to meet those needs including podiatry services.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether primary care trusts will face financial penalties or suffer any form of detriment if they choose to remain direct providers of clinical services. [30778]

Mr. Byrne: If primary care trusts choose to do this, they will face no financial penalties.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why Mr. John Bacon's letter of 30 November 2005 to Pearse Butler of the Cumbria and Lancashire strategic health authority does not refer to Pendle in the latest proposals for primary care trust reconfiguration. [35202]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 6 December 2005]: The letter from John Bacon to Pearse Butler of Cumbria and Lancashire strategic health authority omitted reference to Pendle in error. The option to consult on six primary care trusts (PCTs) should read as follows:

"Option 3-6 PCTs: Blackpool PCT, Blackburn with Darwen PCT, Cumbria PCT, Lancaster, Fylde and Wyre PCT, Burnley, Rossendale, Pendle, Hyndburn and Ribble Valley PCT and West Lancashire, South Ribble, Chorley and Preston PCT".

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will rank by population the proposed re-configured primary care trusts in England which are now to go out to public consultation. [35207]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 6 December 2005]: No decisions will be taken on the population size of reconfigured primary care trusts until after the 14 week local consultation exercise.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether strategic health authorities will have further powers to determine whether primary care trusts can exercise financial autonomy and control their own budgets under the proposals for reconfiguration of strategic health authorities and primary care trusts. [28656]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 15 November 2005]: There are no plans to give strategic health authorities (SHAs) further powers to determine whether primary care trusts can exercise financial autonomy and control their own budgets under proposals for reconfiguration of SHAs and primary care trusts. SHAs will continue to undertake performance management functions in relation to local national health service bodies.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons she is seeking to restructure primary care trusts; and what estimate she has made of the costs of restructuring. [31719]

Mr. Byrne: The reasons for reconfiguration are set out in "Commissioning a Patient Led NHS", published 28 July 2005 and the written ministerial statement by the Secretary of State of 27 October 2005, Official Report, column 15WS.

Since proposals on restructuring are subject to local consultation, at this stage we have not made an estimate of the costs.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what allocation of funding was made to each Essex primary care trust at the start of the current financial year, what the projected outturn is in each case; and how deficits will be funded. [35809]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 8 December 2005]: The information requested is provided in the tables. Table 1 shows the revenue allocations made to primary care trusts (PCTs) in Essex for 2005–06 as part of the 2003–04 to 2005–06 revenue allocations. Table 2 shows the 2005–06 Month 6 (unaudited) forecast of PCTs in Essex.

Strategic health authorities (SHAs) are responsible for delivering overall financial balance for their local health economy. If the SHA as a whole overspends, it requires underspending elsewhere to allow the Department to live within its overall spending limit.

Public Health (Control of Disease) Act

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding was allocated to local authorities to meet their responsibilities under section 46 of the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984 in relation to funeral provision in each of the past five years; and how much was spent by each local authority in England on section 46 funeral provision in each year. [35358]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public Interest Reports

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the NHS bodies that have been issued with public interest reports in each year since 2001; and if she will make a statement. [29971]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 21 November 2005]: Public interest reports are made, by the auditors of national health service bodies, under section 8 of the Audit Commission Act 1998. Since 2001, they have been made in respect of the following NHS bodies. They are listed by year of publication.

During 2004–05, the Audit Commission developed, consulted on and revised guidance to auditors—which is published on their website—about how they should report their concerns about financial standing, initially to the boards of NHS bodies, but ultimately escalating to use of their special powers to report publicly and refer bodies to the Secretary of State. This revised guidance has prompted auditors to issue significantly more public interest reports.

Rehabilitation Services (Visually Impaired People)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what advice she provides to (a) primary care trusts and (b) acute trusts on the provision of rehabilitation services for the visually impaired, with particular reference to the recently diagnosed; and how many rehabilitation staff for visually impaired people are employed by each (i) primary care trust and (ii) acute trust; [37840]

(2) if she will provide funding for training centres run by Guide Dogs for the Blind. [37841]

Mr. Byrne: It is for local authorities to determine how best to provide services to meet the needs of individuals in their populations, in the light of local priorities. This includes the assessment and provision of appropriate support and rehabilitation services for blind and partially sighted people and decisions on the number of staff necessary.

The Association of Directors of Social Services published national standards of social care for visually impaired adults in October 2002. The Department funded the improving lives coalition, from 2003 to 2005, to help them to raise awareness and to publicise the standards. The final report is available at: www.adss.org.uk/eyes.shtml.

The Department no longer directly commissions services or training facilities.

Residential Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 273W, on residential care, on what legal basis local authorities can set cash limits on the amount they will pay for residential placements to meet assessed needs. [34712]

Mr. Byrne: The Department allocates funding to local authorities (LAs) to enable them to carry out their social service functions. It is for LAs to decide how they spend this money, taking account of the need to balance their overall budgets and meet their statutory obligations.

Under section 7 of the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970, the Secretary of State may issue guidance to local authorities on how they carry out their social services functions and LAs are required to act in accordance with such guidance, unless they have good reason for departing from it but without freedom to take a substantially different course. The latest guidance is contained in local authority circular LAC(2004)20, which is available in the Library.

Under that guidance, LAs should set the amount they would usually expect to pay for accommodation having regard to assessed care needs-the 'usual cost'. This cost should be set by LAs at the start of a financial or other planning period, or in response to significant changes in the cost of providing care, to be sufficient to meet the assessed care needs of supported residents in residential accommodation. LAs should set more than one usual cost where the cost of providing residential accommodation to specific groups is different. When placing people in residential care, councils are not required to pay more than they would usually pay, having regard to the usual cost.

Scanning Services (Alliance Medical Ltd.)

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether concerns about Alliance Medical and the provision of scanning services were raised at the meeting between her Department and County Durham and Tees Valley strategic in early June. [19088]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 18 October 2005]: The operational performance and take-up rates of the Alliance Medical contract were discussed with strategic health authority representatives as part of the contract management arrangements.

Screening Services

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to receive advice from the National Committee on Screening on the screening of older men for abdominal aortic aneurysms. [36716]

Mr. Byrne: The UK National Screening Committee considered screening for abdominal aortic aneurysms at its meeting on 29 November 2005 and will provide advice in the new year.

Smoking/Alcohol

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons the Health Bill proposes to ban smoking in public houses which serve food where the owners do not employ any staff. [34585]

Caroline Flint: The smoke-free provisions of the Health Bill will protect the health of the public from the harm done by second-hand smoke. Under these provisions 99 per cent. of people's enclosed workplaces will become smoke-free.

The extensive public consultation that we conducted before publishing the Choosing Health White Paper demonstrated enormous support for a ban on smoking in restaurants and pubs where meals are served. People clearly want to be able to enjoy their meal without smoke over their food and in their face.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what diseases and conditions are associated with (a) smoking and (b) passive smoking; and if she will make a statement; [36180]

(2) if she will list the studies undertaken by her Department which demonstrate the diseases and conditions caused by (a) smoking and (b) passive smoking; and if she will place such studies in the Library. [36181]

Caroline Flint: The White Paper "Smoking Kills" sets out in Chapter 1 some of the major fatal diseases and conditions caused by smoking and passive smoking. For each disease and cause of death quoted there is a reference to relevant studies and/or source documents.

The 1998 Report of the Scientific Committee on Tobacco and Health (SCOTH) provided fuller information on fatal and other disease caused by smoking and second hand smoke.

The 2004 Report by SCOTH states that new evidence reinforces and strengthens the conclusion in the 1998 report that second hand smoke is a substantial public health hazard. Copies of these documents are available in the Library.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to discourage the consumption of alcohol by pregnant women; and what progress has been made. [34877]

Caroline Flint: The Department's advice can be found in the leaflet "Drinking for Two?" and in the "Pregnancy Book", copies of which have been placed in the Library, and also on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/PolicyAndGuidance/HealthAndSocialCareTopics/AlcoholMisuse/AlcoholMisuseGeneralInformation/AlcoholMisuseGeneralArticle/fs/en?CONTENT_ID=4062199&chk=J782BY The advice says women who may be pregnant should not drink more than one to two units of alcohol once or twice a week and should avoid being intoxicated. This guidance is based on advice form medical experts to the sensible drinking working group who reviewed a range of studies and found little evidence of harm when such low levels of alcohol are consumed.

Information is also available from the charity Foetal Alcohol Syndrome Aware UK.

However, we know that some people have raised concerns that consuming any alcohol during pregnancy is unsafe. It is vital that public health messages are based on sound evidence and retain the credibility and confidence of health professionals.

That is why we have commissioned a research scoping exercise on the effects of alcohol on the developing foetus. This will look at existing and new evidence of the effects of very low levels of alcohol consumption during pregnancy on the developing embryo, foetus and child. The report is due in the new year.

Southport and Ormskirk NHS Trust

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons Southport and Ormskirk NHS Trust is required to pay interest on the money it has borrowed. [37318]

Mr. Byrne: There is a well established carry-forward regime in the national health service, whereby over spends in one year are repaid in the following year. The strategic health authority (SHA) surplus incentive scheme includes an uplift to the amount that organisations must repay if they overspend in 2005–06.

The aim of the scheme is to support good financial management. The scheme is being managed by the NHS Bank. Arrangements with trusts or primary care trusts are for individual SHAs to manage.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many reported cases of tuberculosis there were in (a) Northamptonshire and (b) England in each of the last 10 years. [34875]

Caroline Flint: Tuberculosis notification numbers for Northamptonshire and from England from 1994 to 2004 are shown in the table.

Tuberculosis infections, Northamptonshire and England: 1994 to 2004

Number

	Northamptonshire	England

The tuberculosis notification rates (per 100,000 population) for Northamptonshire remained similar to the overall rate for England during this 10-year period.

Turnaround Teams

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) terms of reference, (b) powers and (c) expected costs are of the turnaround teams she is sending into Southport and Ormskirk Hospital. [37314]

Mr. Byrne: Following the initial assessment the teams will agree a tailored package of turnaround support with each organisation and the strategic health authority. The teams will then support the chief executives of the organisations in delivering turnaround. The type and length of engagement will be tailored to the needs of specific organisations. The chief executives will remain responsible for delivery in their organisations.

The initial assessment was awarded in accordance with departmental tendering arrangements. The amount of the contract is to be treated as commercial in confidence.

The cost of the turnaround support will be dependant on the type of engagement.

Velcade

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list the criteria according to which a district prescribing committee in England can overrule the recommendation of a consultant haematologist that Velcade should be prescribed to a patient suffering from multiple myeloma; [35100]

(2) what advice she has received about the use of Velcade as a treatment for multiple myeloma in comparison with other possible treatments for that condition; [35101]

(3) what discretion is available to consultant haematologists in England (a) to arrange bone marrow transplants and (b) to prescribe Velcade to treat multiple myeloma without reference to a (i) district prescribing committee and (ii) any other body; [35102]

(4) what account her Department took of the procedures in place in other parts of the UK for prescribing Velcade to treat multiple myeloma before deciding that district prescribing committees in England could overrule the recommendations of consultant haematologists that it should be prescribed in individual cases; [35103]

(5) what assessment she has made of the comparative (a) cost and (b) effectiveness in treating multiple myeloma of (i) a course of Velcade authorised by a district prescribing committee and (ii) a bone marrow transplant authorised by a consultant haematologist. [35104]

Jane Kennedy [holding answers 8 December 2005]: Velcade is licensed for the treatment of adults with cancer of the bone marrow (multiple myeloma) who have received at least one prior treatment and whose disease is worsening on their last treatment.

Velcade has been referred to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) for appraisal. Velcade is one of the first five drugs to be appraised under NICE'S new single topic appraisal process announced by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Health (Ms Hewitt) on 3 November 2005. Guidance resulting from the new process is expected as early as mid 2006.

In the interim, there are no national restrictions on or guidelines for prescribing Velcade on the national health service for patients who fit the licensed indication.

How best to treat patients with multiple myeloma will be a matter for local decision. The mechanisms used for making such decisions are also be local arrangement.

Funding for licensed treatments should not be withheld because guidance from NICE is unavailable. In these circumstances, we expect primary care trusts to take full account of available evidence when reaching funding decisions. This is confirmed in "Health Service Circular 1999/176", which asks NHS bodies to continue with local arrangements for the managed introduction of new technologies where guidance from NICE is not available at the time the treatment or technology first became available.

No assessment has yet been made of the comparative cost and effectiveness of Velcade and bone marrow transplants in treating multiple myeloma. NICE may look at this as part of the appraisal process.

Vitamin D

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans she has to review (a) the available information on vitamin D daily intake level for different age groups and (b) recommended levels of vitamin D; [37130]

(2) what plans she has to improve vitamin D levels in the UK population. [37132]

Caroline Flint: The Scientific Advisory Committee on Nutrition (SACN) is considering a draft report on the nutritional health of the population, based on evidence from the national diet and nutrition surveys. This report is due to be published by mid-2006 and will include evidence on vitamin D.

In the United Kingdom, reference nutrient intakes (RNI-the amount of the nutrient which is enough to meet the dietary needs of around 97 per cent. of the population) have only been set for certain age groups considered to be at risk of vitamin D deficiency, which is not common in the UK. Hence there is no RNI for people aged between four and 64-years-old, other than for pregnant and lactating women; it is considered that most people will get the vitamin D they need from exposure to sunlight, which aids synthesis of vitamin D in the skin.

Waiting Times

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress the Government have made towards its aim to eliminate waiting times of over six months for in-patient treatment by the end of 2005; and if she will make a statement. [36903]

Mr. Byrne: The national health service has made substantial progress in reducing waiting lists and eliminating waits of over six months for in-patient treatment. As shown in the table, in October 2005 the number of patients waiting more than six months was 24,812, down 8,690 (25.9 per cent.) on the previous month and down 45,079 (64.5 per cent.) from October 2004. Waiting lists are now at an all-time low and below 800,000 for the first time.

Ward Closures

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which hospitals are planning ward or capacity closures. [32188]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not routinely collect and hold centrally operational management information on proposals to change wards or capacity.

Warrington Primary Care Trust

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what briefings have been given to members of Warrington primary care trust on possible changes to acute services in the area; and what options have been considered during those briefings. [37877]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 15 December 2005]: The responsibility for briefing members of the Warrington primary care trust on any possible changes to acute services in the area resides with the local national health service.

Wind Turbines

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has evaluated on the impacts on health of wind turbines. [37242]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not undertaken work on wind turbines. Defra has undertaken studies and officials in this Department are in contact with the leading United Kingdom authority on low frequency noise (LFN), a frequent subject of complaint. There is currently very little or no evidence to suggest that exposure to noise generated by wind turbines is damaging to health though it may cause annoyance.

Worcestershire Acute Hospitals Trust

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the oral statement of the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health of 15 November 2005, Official Report, column 226WH, on Worcestershire Acute Hospitals Trust, when she will write to the hon. Member for Wyre Forest (Dr. Taylor) on trusts that are in the upper quartile in relation to length of stay. [34690]

Caroline Flint: The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Public Health wrote to the hon. Member on 13 December 2005.

Your Health, Your Care, Your Say

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance she issued to strategic health authorities for the conduct of the "Your Health, Your Care, Your Say" consultation exercise; and if she will make a statement. [26381]

Mr. Byrne: The Department wrote to chief executives of strategic health authorities (SHAs) on 23 August 2005 inviting a nominated contact who could co-ordinate activity across their area in partnership with local authority colleagues. The Department and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister jointly wrote to a range of stakeholder organisations, including the chief executives of SHAs on 8 September 2005 giving details of a website which provided guidance on running local events and about the importance of working with local partners. Nominated contacts in SHAs were also copied into a letter to stakeholders dated 27 September 2005 encouraging the organisation of local events for staff and service users.

A resource pack website was set up to support those organisations running or facilitating local deliberative consultation events. SHA nominated contacts were invited to a briefing event on the website's use and the consultation process in general on 8 September 2005.

Copies of all three letters have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister how many civil servants in each grade have left his Office in each of the last three years to join consultancy firms; and which firm each joined. [37361]

Public Appointments

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Prime Minister (1) to what position in Government Departments (a) Mr. Ahmed Thompson and (b) Mr. Inyat Bungawala has been appointed; when the appointment was made; what the remit is; and what process was used in making the appointment; [37993]

(2) what advice the Government have been given by the unit Engaging with the Muslim World concerning (a) the Muslim Brotherhood, (b) the Muslim Association of Britain and (c) Hamas; and what the accountability arrangements for the unit are; [37995]

(3) what the Government's policy is on (a) employing and (b) appointing to public appointments people who may have made anti-semitic statements. [37994]

Paul Goggins: I have been asked to reply.

Neither Mr. Ahmad Thompson nor Mr. Inyat Bungawala has been appointed to any positions within Government Departments.

In the formulation of policy, the Government receives advice and information from a wide range of sources. The Engaging with the Islamic World Group is a part of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO). Like all departments, groups and teams within the FCO, the Group is accountable to Ministers and works to help achieve the international priorities, aims and objectives set out in the FCO Annual Report.

The Government adheres to the Commission for Public Appointments' code of practice when considering individuals for either employment or public appointments. Individuals from all sections of society and diverse backgrounds have much to offer public bodies. In consulting and working with a diverse range of people we inevitably deal with people with whose views we do agree. When this involves discriminatory statements by an individual decisions are made on a case by case basis, taking account of such factors as severity, context and the time elapsed since they were made.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Anschutz Entertainment Group

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) when (a) Ministers and (b) officials have held meetings with the Anschutz Entertainment Group; where each meeting took place; and which potential sites for casinos were discussed; [38049]

(2) what meetings (a) Ministers and (b) officials have held in the last four months with casino operators interested in securing licences under the Gambling Act 2005. [38050]

Mr. Caborn: DCMS Ministers and officials have met representatives of the Anschutz Entertainment Group and Kerzner International, its partner in the development of the Millennium Dome site, as they have representatives of many companies that may be interested in securing one of the 17 new casino licences permitted by the Gambling Act 2005. The meetings that have been identified are listed in table 1. All these meetings took place in the United Kingdom. BBC Charter

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make it a requirement under BBC Charter renewal that the BBC publish in its annual accounts (a) itemised costs, (b) overheads information and (c) average hourly (i) viewing figures and (ii) costs of production for each channel. [34511]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The Green Paper published in March this year makes clear that the new Trust will be expected to demand the highest standards of financial transparency from the BBC in its annual reporting to ensure that the BBC complies with best practice in other public and commercial bodies. Further detail on the new governance arrangements will be set out in the forthcoming White Paper.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions she has had on the BBC Charter Review. [38534]

Tessa Jowell: Throughout the Charter Review process, I have had various discussions with a wide range of stakeholders regarding all aspects of the BBC Charter Review.

Citygate Public Affairs Ltd.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what meetings the Department has held with Citygate Public Affairs Ltd. since July. [36755]

Mr. Lammy: The Department does not maintain a central list of such contacts. Ministers and civil servants, including special advisers meet many people as part of the process of policy development and business delivery. All such contacts are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code, Civil Service Code, Code of Conduct for Special Advisers and Guidance for civil servants on contacts with lobbyists and people outside Government

Compulsory Purchase Orders

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the use of compulsory purchase orders in cases involving historic buildings. [38976]

Mr. Lammy: The Planning (Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas) Act 1990 allows the Secretary of State to confirm a compulsory purchase order (CPO) served by a local authority where reasonable steps are not being taken by an owner to properly preserve a listed building. The Act also allows the Secretary of State to compulsorily acquire a listed building herself though such powers are only exercised in exceptional circumstances. The Act requires the Secretary of State to consult English Heritage before she exercises the powers to confirm or make a CPO.

Correspondence

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will reply to the letter of 4 October from the hon. Member for Manchester, Blackley, to her concerning the Licensing Act 2003. [30469]

James Purnell [holding answer 21 November 2005]: I replied to the letter of 4 October from my hon. Friend today.

Departmental Research

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what research projects commissioned by her Department are being undertaken; and what the publication arrangements are in each case. [32994]

Mr. Caborn: The DCMS currently has commissioned 13 research projects which are in the process of being completed, or have been completed and are scheduled for publication.

A brief summary of each piece of research, including publication plans, is given as follows.

1. "Taking Part Survey": The DCMS, working in partnership with our NDPB partners, commissioned the "Taking Part" survey with the aim of improving our current knowledge base of users and non-users of our sectors.

Findings from the survey are being published quarterly on the DCMS website, and the first quarter's findings were published on 15 December.

2. "Sport and Social Capital in the United Kingdom: Statistical Evidence from National and International Survey Data": This research looks at the links between different types of sporting participation and individual measures of social capital.

The research will be published on the website of the DCMS, and the Institute of Public Policy Research. Publication is planned for January 2006.

3. "Public Libraries: assessment of performance against Annual Library Plans 2004/05": Assessment of authorities' performance against the newly developed Public Library Impact Measures to create a baseline to be assessed against in future years.

Publication will be on the website of the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council, and is scheduled for February 2006.

4. "Enquiring into attitudes towards gambling—a scoping study": This is a study looking at how quantitative surveys can be used to capture accurate data on public attitudes towards gambling and gambling behaviour. The work will be completed early in 2006, and will be published on the DCMS website in due course.

5. "Enquiring in to expenditure on gambling—a scoping study": A study looking at quantitative surveys can be used to capture accurate data on expenditure on gambling. The project is due for completion at the end of February 2006. Publication will be on the DCMS website in due course.

6. "Research into risk and protective factors related to problem gambling": This work is due to report by the end of January 2006. The report will be published on the DCMS website in due course.

7. "Economic impact of cultural investment": This research is part of the development of a framework for understanding the impact of cultural investment by Government. It is due for completion in April 2006, and will be published on the DCMS website in due course.

8. "Arts and Criminal Justice: feasibility study": This research project looks at the practicalities of assessing the impact of arts interventions in prisons. It is due for completion in January 2006, with publication on the DCMS website soon after.

9. "Arts and Mental Health: study of effective practice": This research looks at the effectiveness of arts interventions with people with mental health problems. The research is due for completion in October 2006. A report on the research will be published on the DCMS website in due course.

10. "Review of literature on impact on young people of the computer/video games with a 'Violent' content": We commissioned the University of Stirling to investigate whether allegations of a link between playing violent computer games and violent behaviour in real life can be substantiated. The work is complete, and the report will be published on the DCMS website in January 2006.

11. "National Lottery, 'Good Causes' research": This projects looks at the views of the general public on how lottery money should be shared between the good causes of arts and film, heritage and sport, and what the policies should be governing how lottery money is spent for each of these good causes. It will support the public consultation currently under way on the DCMS website and is being commissioned now to be carried out by the end of February 2006.

Results will be published on the DCMS website, along with the main consultation results, in late spring 2006.

12. "BBC Charter Review": Research exploring public opinion of the Green Paper proposals for the future governance and accountability of the BBC and the collection and enforcement of the licence fee.

This research will be published on the BBC Charter Review website, alongside the White Paper, once it is published in the new year.

13. Access to finance by small and medium sized companies in the music business: This project looks at the barriers to accessing financial investment by small and medium sized music businesses in the UK. The work should be completed in January 2006, and will be published on the DCMS website in due course.

Elite Athletes (Funding)

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport by what process the transfer of responsibility for elite sport from Sport England to UK Sport will be effected; how much of the budget will be transferred; and how much of that money will pass straight to (a) the British Olympic Association and (b) Olympic Sport national governing bodies. [38360]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 19 December 2005]: UK Sport and Sport England are working together to ensure that responsibility for the English Institute of Sport, the Talented Athlete Scholarship Scheme (including 2012 scholarships) and performance pathway programmes for Olympic and Paralympic sports (for which Sport England is currently responsible), will transfer to UK Sport by 1 April 2006. Furthermore a service level agreement is being drawn up to govern UK Sport's performance advisory role to Sport England for the performance elements of their funded English sports. A project team has been set up to manage the process.

UK Sport and Sport England are working closely to identify the required budgetary transfer in respect of these areas which will—as now—be directed at Governing Body and Institute delivery of services to World Class athletes.

We expect that the National Governing Bodies will benefit from an enhanced relationship with UK Sport. Money will not be passed to the British Olympic Association, as it is not an investment vehicle for World Class funding.

English Heritage

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1619W, on English Heritage, which sites owned and run by English Heritage she has visited in her official capacity as Secretary of State in the last 12 months. [37816]

Mr. Lammy: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, has not been able to visit an English Heritage historic site in the last 12 months in her official capacity. However, since May I have visited in my official capacity Stonehenge, Eltham Palace and Kenilworth Castle and English Heritage's offices in Swindon. I have also visited a number of historic properties owned or managed by other organisations or individuals.

Licensing Act

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress has been made in reviewing the guidance on the Licensing Act 2003 to enable local ward councillors to speak at hearings for applications affecting their ward without the need to have first received representations from residents; and if she will make a statement. [35030]

James Purnell: It is the 2003 Act and the regulations that set out who may make representations, and other matters about hearings. It is, therefore, not possible for the Guidance to licensing authorities to amend such statutory provisions.

However, we are currently reviewing the Guidance and, as part of that process, will consider whether there is a need to provide further clarification around this issue. We will also consider it as part of our wider monitoring of the Act, including the detailed review with the 10 Scrutiny Committee.

Our review of the Guidance commenced on 1 December and will be in two stages. An initial review, focussing on issues where there is a high degree of consensus among stakeholders, will be completed and supplementary Guidance laid before Parliament in early spring 2006.

A comprehensive formal review of the Guidance, including a full public consultation will be completed by summer 2006 and a revised version will be laid before Parliament by the end of 2006. This comprehensive review will include consideration of matters that cannot be easily resolved during the initial review.

Licensing Committees

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will issue guidance to local authorities on the circumstances when councillors (a) may and (b) may not make representations to a licensing committee dealing with a licensing application in their ward. [37039]

James Purnell [holding answer 12 December 2005]: Local councillors who themselves live in the vicinity of premises applying for the grant or variation of a premises or club premises certificate are clearly entitled to make representations to the licensing authority in their own right as interested parties.

Paragraph 5.32 of the Guidance issued under Section 182 of the Licensing Act 2003 makes it clear that interested parties can specifically request a representative such as a local ward councillor to make a representation on their behalf. This could include making written representations, applying for a review or by speaking on their behalf at a hearing.

We are currently reviewing the Guidance and, as part of that process, will consider whether there is a need to provide further clarification on this issue.

Licensing/Gambling Laws

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport by what means the Government's new licensing regime ensures that village hall managers and other responsible persons are informed of the number of applications for temporary event notices for events to be held in their premises; and if she will make a statement. [37676]

James Purnell: Village hall managers and other responsible persons seeking to inform themselves about the number of temporary event notices (TENs) given for events to be held in their premises can consult their licensing authority's register.

A person with a property interest in a premises, such as a freeholder, leaseholder or occupier, can, on submission of the prescribed form and fee (£21), give the licensing authority notice of their interest. The licensing authority must then notify them forthwith of any changes to the entry for that premises on the register. Such a notice has effect for 12 months.

No-one would be able to use a village hall without the permission of the hall management. Managers of village halls can make their own arrangements to require potential users to inform them of their proposed use of TENs and might wish to include this as a requirement in their hire or booking agreement.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the implications of the interaction between changes to licensing and gambling laws. [38511]

Mr. Caborn: The reform of licensing and gambling laws share many of the same guiding principles. These include better protection for children, the prevention of crime and disorder and a generally tougher regime to deal with rogue operators. Changes also provide for increased local decision making, and will deliver more choice for the citizen. We therefore consider the reforms in each area to be mutually supportive.

Of course, as with all major reforms, we will closely monitor and evaluate the impact of the changes in the coming months and years.

London Development Agency

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 16 November 2005, Official Report, column 1250W, on the London Development Agency (Vendors), what criteria the London Development Agency (LDA) will use to decide whether to publish shortlists for contracts; and if she will ask the LDA to publish either a shortlist or the reasons for not publishing a shortlist in relation to each contract. [38938]

Mr. Caborn: The decision as to whether shortlists will be published will be considered on a case by case basis and ultimately depend on if it helps or hinders effective and fair competition between suppliers.

These decisions are, and will be, a matter for the London Development Agency and for the Olympic Delivery Authority once it is established.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what ministerial visits have been undertaken since May by (a) the Minister for Sport, (b) the Minister for Culture and (c) the Minister for Creative Industries and Tourism; what the purpose was of each; and if she will make a statement. [24119]

Tessa Jowell: I am arranging for a list of ministerial visits undertaken since May by (a) the Minister for Sport, (b) the Minister for Culture and (c) the Minister for Creative Industries to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Olympics (Procurement Strategy)

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will publish the initial draft of the procurement strategy drawn up by the Olympic Delivery Authority team; and whether it will include criteria for determining which contracts shortlists will be published. [39234]

Mr. Caborn: The interim Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) published procurement principles in September 2005 which underpin the development of the ODA's procurement strategy. The procurement strategy for the ODA is currently being drafted. The strategy will be published when it has been approved by the newly-appointed chair and chief executive of the ODA and its board. This is likely to be in spring 2006.

Parliamentary Questions

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will reply to the letter of 23 September (ref: 23821) from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire. [29793]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 21 November 2005]: I am sorry for not replying sooner to the written question from the hon. Member. I replied to the hon. Member's letter of 23 September yesterday 19 December.

Tourism

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much has been spent in promoting tourism in rural areas in England in each of the last five years. [38932]

James Purnell: My Department funds the overseas marketing and promotion of all parts of Britain through VisitBritain. VisitBritain also markets England's tourism industry to the British under the auspices of the England Marketing Advisory Board. The promotion of rural areas is a significant part of this work.

Much of VisitBritain's international work is generic marketing of the British offer, and it is not possible to put precise figures on the proportion of its marketing spend which directly relates to the promotion of rural areas.

In the domestic market, VisitBritain's Enjoy England and Outdoor England marketing campaigns have clear rural themes. A total of £1 million was spent on directly promoting rural areas through these campaigns in 2004–05. Further rural promotion was carried out through the Taste, Waterside England, and Just Relax campaigns, on which a total of £750,000 was spent in 2004–05.

In view of the generic nature of much of VisitBritain's marketing work, which is intended to attract visitors to Britain and England rather than to specific locations, it is not possible to provide figures for years prior to 2004–05.

In addition, as part of the Tourism Reform Programme, since 2003, the regional development agencies have undertaken significant tourism promotion of England's rural areas and of course many councils covering rural areas invest in promoting local tourism as well.

Village Halls

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps are being taken to encourage the greater use of village halls; and what funding streams are available for this purpose. [38902]

Mr. Caborn: To date the lottery has awarded over £258 million to village and community halls. The Big Lottery Fund is building on this success and has recently announced that it will make £50 million available over three years through a community buildings programme to benefit projects across England. The new programme, to be launched in 2006, will focus on civil renewal as well as enhance community involvement and cohesion.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Biodiversity (Planning Applications)

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will incorporate a question about biodiversity interests into the standard planning application form. [37570]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently working with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, English Nature and the Association of Local Government Ecologists (ALGE) to examine how the issue of biodiversity interests could be considered in the standard planning process.

Biofuels

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many hectares in Northamptonshire have been used to grow biofuels in each year since 1997. [38124]

Mr. Morley: Detailed information on the end-use of potential biofuel crops is only available where farmers claim the Energy Aid payment. This was introduced in 2004 and 2826 ha of oilseed rape were planted on non set-aside land for biodiesel production in Northamptonshire in that year.

In addition, 36 ha of miscanthus in 2003 and 45 ha in 2004 were planted under the Energy Crops Scheme for the production of heat or electricity. There were no plantings under the scheme in Northamptonshire from 1997–2002.

Central Heating Installations (Pensioners)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many pensioners in the Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency will be eligible for free installation of central heating announced in the pre-Budget report. [37739]

Mr. Morley: It was announced in the pre-Budget report that an additional £300 million would be made available to tackle fuel poverty across the UK.

In England, this means that an additional £250 million will be made available to boost the delivery of central heating measures to pensioner households, and particularly those on pension credit through the Warm Front Scheme.

In Middlesbrough, there are 8,400 pension credit claimants and in Redcar and Cleveland there are some 8,000 claimants[1]. Assistance from Warm Front is available for homeowners and tenants in the private sector, so a number of these claimants could be eligible for support from Warm Front.

Those not in receipt of a qualifying benefit at the time of application to Warm Front are offered a benefit entitlement check, which is designed to provide both the potential of increasing household income and to establish eligibility of households to benefit from measures under Warm Front.

[1] Information taken from latest available DWP statistics on number of pension credit claimants by local authority area.

Climate Change

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to announce the findings of the Climate Change Review; and if she will make a statement. [39051]

Mr. Morley: We are aiming to publish the revised Climate Change Programme well in advance of the Easter recess.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received regarding the climate change review; and whether she plans to make these findings public. [39052]

Mr. Morley: The review of the UK climate change programme was launched in September 2004. A consultation as part of the review was launched on 8 December 2004 at a stakeholder event. Around 300 written responses were received as a result.

IPA Energy Consulting was asked to complete an independent analysis of the responses. Their report can be found at the DEFRA website:

(http://defraweb/environment/climatechange/uk/ukccp/review.htm).

Coastal Erosion

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to ensure that the Environment Agency fulfills its contractual obligations to maintain the sea defences at Unit 20 of the Beachy Head to Selsey bill shoreline management plan. [37905]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency is not generally contractually bound to undertake sea defence works. There are instances where, historically, the Environment Agency's predecessors have entered into agreements with individuals or organisations regarding the maintenance of sea defences.

The first review of the Beachy Head to Selsey bill shoreline management plan (SMP) Unit 20 recommends a policy of managed re-alignment for the River Arun to Poole Place Groyne frontage, Littlehampton. It is proposed that this policy will enable the shape of the coastline to be realigned slightly to enable a more naturally functioning coastline to develop. The exact details of any realignment scheme, including the need for any secondary defences, will be developed in due course following agreement of the SMP.

There are historical agreements that cover the western 1.5km of this 3.5km frontage. These agreements relate to the maintenance of the shingle beach and groynes that were in place when the agreements were made. The Environment Agency has had dialogue with the landowner and is due to meet him in the new year to discuss the long-term plans for the frontage. The Environment Agency is also continuing with operations to maintain the shingle defence by recycling material along the frontage, and will undertake some work on the timber groynes early in 2006.

Damson Trees

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of damson trees in the UK in each of the last five years; and what steps she is taking to preserve them. [37444]

Jim Knight: Defra does not collect data on the number of damson trees in the UK, though the hectarage of plums is recorded annually within the Orchard Fruit Survey for England and Wales. As an important feature of certain rural landscapes, damson orchards have been targeted for restoration through funding under agri-environment schemes, including the new Environmental Stewardship Scheme.

Departmental Buildings

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of the Department's buildings are powered by renewable energy; and what plans she has to increase this proportion. [37958]

Jim Knight: Of the sites for which DEFRA and its Executive Agencies have a contractual responsibility for electricity supplies, 44 percent. are powered from renewable sources. This represented 52 percent. of the total electricity used in 2004–05, 83 percent. at DEFRA buildings and 48 percent. at buildings occupied by agencies.

At contract renewal, opportunities are sought to secure renewable supplies for further sites. We are also actively promoting self-generation of electricity at a number of our sites.

Departmental Consultants

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many civil servants in each grade have left her Department in each of the last three years to join consultancy firms; and which firm each joined. [37363]

Jim Knight: Staff leaving the Department are not required in all circumstances to state the organisation that they are expecting to join. However, civil servants are required to familiarise themselves with, and as appropriate abide by, the rules on the acceptance of outside appointments by Crown servants set out in the Civil Service Management Code. Therefore, civil servants may have to obtain approval before taking up certain types of employment within two years of leaving the service. Records of such requests for approval are not held electronically and therefore the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Estate

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) land and (b) property her Department (i) owns and (ii) rents in each constituency; and if she will make a statement. [33260]

Jim Knight: Lists containing the names and addresses of land and property owned (freehold) and rented (leasehold) by the Department in each constituency are given in the tables which have been placed in the Library.

Departmental Staff

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many and what proportion of each Civil Service grade in her Department is located in each (a) region and (b) nation of the UK; what the average salary is for each grade; and if she will make a statement. [35918]

Jim Knight: My hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Secretary at the Cabinet Office (Mr. Murphy) will write to the hon. Member with details for the civil service of the percentage of staff in post by region and grade responsibility and the median salary of staff in post by region and grade responsibility as at 1 April 2004. Copies of his letter will be placed in the Library.

Entry Level Scheme

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the production of maps to be used for applications under the entry level scheme. [37904]

Jim Knight: Entry level stewardship (ELS) maps are produced by the Rural Development Service when the applicant requests a pre-application pack; the maps are based upon data contained within the Rural Land Register.

The information contained within the map forms a fundamental component of the legal agreement and in particular supports the on site compliance inspections that we are required to undertake.

There have been some problems with incomplete registrations of land on the Rural Land Register, as a backlog of cases developed at the Rural Payments Agency. This occurred when registration requests relating to single payment scheme and environmental stewardship increased to an unprecedented level. However, earlier in the year, outstanding cases that were identified as being linked to an environmental stewardship application were prioritised. Registration for this group of applicants has now been largely completed by the Rural Payments Agency, as part of the on-going efforts to deal with the backlog generated earlier in the year.

Nationally there are now more than 11,000 entry level scheme agreements in place.

EU Environment Council

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) matters were discussed and (b) decisions were taken at the EU Environment Council on 2 December; on which decisions a vote took place; and how matters affecting the environment in Wales were represented. [35775]

Mr. Morley: A written ministerial statement on the outcome of the council was made on 13 December 2005, Official Report, columns 135–37WS, in line with the procedures introduced in May 2005.

The Welsh Assembly Government interests were fully involved in agreeing UK positions, where these had a bearing on devolved matters, in the usual way.

EU Sugar Regime

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the likely impact on jobs in London of the proposed EU draft changes to the European Union sugar regime; and if she will make a statement. [31449]

Jim Knight: As my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, has separately reported to the House, agreement on reform of the EU sugar regime was successfully concluded under the UK Presidency at the Agriculture and Fisheries Council on 24 November.

The Regulatory Impact Assessment prepared by DEFRA following the publication of the Commission's proposals for reform in June this year included consideration of the likely impact on employment in both the sugar production and processing sectors in the UK as well as in companies using sugar as a raw ingredient.

A significant employer in London in the sugar sector is Tate and Lyle. Assessing the impact on its business of the decisions now reached is a commercial matter for the company itself. In a press release issued following the Council agreement the company made the following statement,

> "Whilst the long-term impact on Tate & Lyle remains significant, the final decision to make the cut in the sugar reference price of 36% (instead of the 39% previously proposed) and to delay the implementation of the price reduction is very welcome."

Expert Advisory Committees

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what account she takes of advice from (a) toxicologists working in industry, (b) academics funded by agrochemical companies and (c) employees of contract research organisations whose income is dependent on agrochemical companies who sit on expert advisory committees. [36743]

Mr. Morley: The Secretary of State takes advice from the independent Advisory Committee on Pesticides (ACP) on matters relating to the control of pests, including advice on the approvals of pesticides. Members of the ACP declare any interests in the agrochemical industry in accordance with their published code of practice. These interests are published in the ACP's annual report.

Farm Payments

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the farm mapping in respect of the deadline for single payments for farmers of 14 February 2006 is expected to be completed. [37737]

Jim Knight: The Rural Payments Agency is planning to have completed digitising and uploading data into its computer system by the end of January.

Farm Subsidies

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much interest she expects will have accumulated on Single Payment Scheme funds between December 2005 and February 2006; and what proportion of that interest she expects will be distributed to farmers. [R] [38740]

Jim Knight: Common Agricultural Policy funding is reimbursed by the Commission two months in arrears after payment to claimants. No interest will therefore accumulate on Single Payment Scheme funds between December 2005 and February 2006.

Flooding

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect on flooding in the Severn Basin of the strategy to reduce water levels in the Clywedog Dam, and if she will make a statement. [37111]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency is the principal authority with responsibility for flood risk management in England. The extent to which both the Clywedog and Vyrnwy Reservoirs can help mitigate the effects of flooding in the Severn Basin is limited as any beneficial effect to alleviate flooding rapidly diminishes downstream. Other parts of the catchment also contribute floodwater and the proportion that the reservoir "holds back" becomes smaller as the total catchment area gets bigger.

The catchment area above Clywedog Dam is 2 per cent. of the entire catchment draining to Shrewsbury and 1 per cent. of the catchment draining to Bridgnorth. Previous studies have indicated that the influence of floodwater storage at Llyn Clywedog has extended only as far as Buttington.

A study in 1999 for the Environment Agency confirmed that existing reservoir flood drawdown controls, in place for many years, adequately maximise the opportunity for local flood alleviation. The findings of this study have been reviewed as part of the Fluvial Severn Flood Risk Management Strategy, which was issued for public consultation (including to local MPs) in the summer of 2005.

The Environment Agency's strategy to lower water levels in these reservoirs means more storage being available to hold water during periods of heavy rainfall. This assists flood risk management in the Severn Basin insofar as the reservoirs influence this. However, it should be remembered that the primary function of the reservoirs is to maintain flow in the River Severn during dry periods.

GM Crops

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of her Department's funding in 2005–06 of research on GM crops and food was allocated to products aimed at benefiting developing countries. [38009]

Mr. Morley: My department does not fund any such research on GM crops and food. Any such work would be the responsibility of the Department for International Development.

DEFRA does fund research into the environmental safety of GMOs to underpin our regulatory responsibilities for the regulation of GMOs within a European context.

Details of our current research programme are available through the DEFRA website:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/gm/research/index.htm

Lyons Review

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many departmental officials will be moved from London offices to York; and whether this represents a reduction in overall numbers employed by the Department under the Lyons Review recommendation. [38371]

Jim Knight: To date 22 posts have relocated from London and the South East to York. Around 115 additional posts are planned for relocation to York by March 2008. These relocations all form part of wider transformation programmes, some of which include staff reductions, in line with the Department's Spending Review 04 efficiency targets .

Markets

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the likely impact on environmental regulation of the EU directive on services in the internal market. [35746]

Mr. Morley: The economic benefits of the proposed services directive are likely to be substantial. The Department is discussing the impact of the draft directive on a number of our areas of responsibility, including environmental regulation, with the Department for Trade and Industry as the negotiations progress.

National Parks Authority

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many prosecutions were brought by National Parks Authority in each year since 1995; [37006]

(2) how many prosecutions have been brought by National Parks against landowners for impeding access to footpaths in the last 10 years. [37225]

Jim Knight: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what powers national parks have to (a) investigate and (b) prosecute landowners for impeding access to footpaths; and what the legislative basis is for these powers. [37231]

Jim Knight: National Park Authorities may exercise 1980 Highways Act powers under delegation from the highways authority. The extent of that delegation is variable, depending on what agreement each National Park Authority has reached with its highways authority about rights of way work.

Nuclear Power Stations

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) assessment she has made of and (b) research she has (i) commissioned and (ii) evaluated on the impact on surrounding agricultural land of (A) building, (B) operating and (C) decommissioning nuclear power stations. [35174]

Mr. Morley: No assessments or research of this kind have been commissioned by DEFRA. Environmental impact assessments are required for both the construction and decommissioning of nuclear power stations. Measurements of radioactivity in the environment, including around nuclear power stations, are given in the annual Radioactivity in Food and the Environment report published by the Environment Agency, Scottish Environment Protection Agency, Environment & Heritage Service of Northern Ireland and the Food Standards Agency.

Pesticides

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will require the members of (a) the Advisory Committee on Pesticides (ACP) and (b) the ACP's Medical and Toxicology Panel to update their declarations of interests within a fortnight of any change; and if she will publish the declarations on the internet. [35801]

Mr. Morley: The current arrangements provide a substantial amount of information about the interests of the ACP and its Medical and Toxicology Panel. Members of the ACP are required to make their declarations of interest on appointment and annually thereafter, as set out in the ACP code of practice. This annual register of interests is published in the annual report both in hard copy and on the website.

Interests are also required to be declared at ACP meetings. Members are asked to identify any personal specific interests in advance of papers being distributed for meetings (those with personal interests do not receive the papers and leave the meeting for discussion of that specific item) and to declare any of these interests ahead of discussion at ACP meetings. Where a member declares an interest in an item for discussion at the ACP this is recorded in the minutes which are published on the website.

Membership of the ACP's panels, including the Medical and Toxicology Panel, is published in the ACP annual report. Members of the panels are not appointed as independent experts but include representative organisations and officials as well as members of the ACP. The interests of the ACP members are declared and the affiliations of the other members are published in the ACP annual report.

Private Members Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list those Private Members' Bills introduced under (a) Standing Order No.14(6), (b) Standing Order No.23 and (c) Standing Order No.57 which were (i) supported and (ii) opposed by her Department in each session since 1997–98. [35979]

Jim Knight: The information requested by the hon. Member could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Rural Crime

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Home Secretary on measures to tackle rural crime, with particular reference to the theft of agricultural equipment. [38209]

Jim Knight: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, (Margaret Beckett) met with the Home Secretary (Charles Clarke) on 15 November 2005 to discuss Home Office measures to tackle rural crime.

On 30 November 2005, I also met with the Home Secretary (Charles Clarke) and my right hon. Friend the Minister of State (Hazel Blears) to discuss recent Home Office policies to tackle rural crime.

In addition, DEFRA officials have met with Home Office officials on a number of occasions to discuss measures to tackle rural crime, including the theft of agriculture equipment.

Rural Payments Agency

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of whether the Rural Payments Agency will begin processing applications under the Fresh Fruit and Vegetable scheme in time for Producer Organisations to meet the registration deadline of 15 December 2005. [37282]

Jim Knight [holding answer 13 December 2005]: Applications for recognition as new Producer Organisations are being processed by the Rural Payments Agency and will be completed by the 15 December 2005.

A similar deadline operates for decisions on operational programmes and funds from these new Producer Organisations and for amendments to existing operational programmes. Commission Regulation (EC) No 2190/2004 allows member states to take these decisions not later than 20 January 2005 following the date of application. The UK has decided to implement this option and extend the approval deadline for new operational programmes and amendments to existing operational programmes to 20 January 2006. Existing and potential Producer Organisations were informed of this revised date on 7 December 2005.

Single Farm Payment Scheme

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what tests have been applied to applications under the 2005 Single Farm Payment Scheme in England to ensure that applicants are in legal occupation of the holdings used for the claim. [36629]

Jim Knight: There is no requirement in the European Regulations governing the Single Payment Scheme that the farmer claiming aid has to be in legal occupation of the land supporting the claim. However, to receive payment the farmer must carry out an agricultural activity or maintain the land in good agricultural or environmental condition and the land has to be at the farmer's disposal for 10 months of the year between prescribed dates. Compliance monitoring inspections, including checks on the 10 month provision, are undertaken on a proportion of claims. Where two or more claims are made on the same land parcel claims will be investigated and resolved.

Spiders

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many venomous spiders that do not naturally live in the United Kingdom have been found in the United Kingdom in each of the last five years, broken down by type. [37951]

Jim Knight: All spiders have the ability to produce venom with which they immobilise their prey, but not all spiders are considered to be venomous in the sense that they may pose a threat to human health.

No one agency collates all the recorded finds of non-native spiders found in the UK. Specimens are sent to a variety of organisations including local environmental health officers, pest control companies, local and national museums and universities for examination and identification. It is therefore impossible to put an absolute figure on the number of non-native spiders recorded in the UK on an annual basis.

The Central Science Laboratory, an executive agency of DEFRA, provides an invertebrate identification service primarily for plant health quarantine purposes and does receive a limited number of spider specimens each year. During the last five-year period this service saw an average of 26 spiders per annum, almost all collected off plant material with some import connection. Approximately 90 per cent. of these were non-native species. Of these, only one species, the Melbourne trap-door spider (Stanwellia grisea), is considered to be venomous to man. One confirmed, and two unconfirmed, specimens of this species were intercepted on tree ferns imported from Australia in 2004. This spider has very large fangs and can inflict a painful, but not dangerous bite. Since this find, tree ferns have been subject to greater control prior to export from Australia and New Zealand and so live invertebrates such as this are less likely to be encountered on this commodity.

Another traditional means of spiders entering the country in an uncontrolled way has been via bananas, although this is now very rare since not only are banana crops increasingly sprayed with pesticides during growth, but refrigeration kills any travellers who escape that. Similarly, arrival on uncut timber is much reduced, since the amount of 'raw' timber imported has fallen, replaced by processed timber.

Taxi Travel

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been spent by her Department on taxi travel in the 2005–06 financial year; and what proportion of such travel was undertaken in each nation and region of the United Kingdom, including London. [37470]

Jim Knight: The Department does not hold centrally information on the cost of travel by taxi, this could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Unlawful Activities

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what activities have been made unlawful by legislation introduced by her Department since 1 May 2001; and if she will make a statement. [35980]

Jim Knight: The following Acts created criminal offences in the 2002–03 session of Parliament

Animal Health Act 2002 (c.42)

Created several criminal offences including the offence of deliberately infecting an animal with any one of 15 diseases specified in the Act, including foot-and-mouth disease. The schedule created an offence of failing to comply with a restriction notice preventing the use for breeding of sheep that are of a genotype that is susceptible to transmissible spongiform encephalopathies (TSE) and also offences of obstructing an inspector carrying out duties under the Act.

The Waste and Emissions Trading Act 2003 (c.33)

Provided powers to make offences by regulation for failures to comply with the scheme to be created.

The Water Act 2003 (c.37)

Made it an offence under Part 1 to fail to comply with a notice served by the Environment Agency requiring work to be carried out on facilities for impounding water or a licence application to be made for unlicensed impounding works.

Where abstraction or impounding takes place without a licence or does not comply with the terms of a licence, the Act made it an offence to fail to comply with an enforcement notice issued by the Environment Agency.

Part 2 created the offence of introducing water to or supplying water from a water undertaker's supply system without being a water undertaker or a licensed supply person. Under Part 3 it is an offence for an owner of manager of a large raised reservoir to fail to prepare a flood plan when required to do so. Part 3 also extended the offence of supplying water unfit for human consumption to apply to persons including employees of the water undertaker and self-employed people involved with the supply of water.

During the 2003–04 session the following Acts created criminal offences:

The Gangmasters (Licensing) Act 2004 (c.11)

Makes it an offence for any person to act as an unlicensed gangmaster and for any other person to enter into arrangements with an unlicensed gangmaster.

The Act also created other offences in relation to forgery of documents.

The Highways (Obstruction by Body Corporate) Act 2004 (c.29)

Extended the offence of obstructing a highway under the Highways Act 1980 so that the directors, managers and other company officers of a guilty company may also be found guilty of the obstruction if it was committed with their consent, connivance or attributable to their neglect.

The Hunting Act 2004 (c.37)

Made it an offence under Part 1 to hunt a wild mammal with a dog, except in some circumstances such as where the dog is being used for stalking and flushing-out only, or to participate in, attend or knowingly facilitate a hare-coursing event.

Part 1 also makes it an offence for the owner of a dog to permit it to be used for hunting or hare-coursing or for the owner of land to allow the land to be entered or used for hunting or hare-coursing.

During the 2004–2005 session the following Act created criminal offences:

The Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005 (c. 16)

Created offences in relation to "nuisance parking" which is the selling or repairing of vehicles on a road by persons in business. Part 6 of the Act created offences in relation to breach of "dog control orders", which in relation to specified land may exclude dogs from the land, or prohibit the fouling of the land, or require dogs to be kept on leads when on the land or may limit the number of dogs a person may take onto the specified land. In relation to certain premises in an "Alarm Notification Area" Part 7 of the Act created offences of failing to nominate a key-holder where an audible intruder alarm is present.

The Act also made many existing offences punishable by a fixed penalty notice.

Upland Farmers

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will ensure that Entry Level Stewardship takes into account the special character of the English uplands in relation to payment options. [38156]

Jim Knight [holding answer 19 December 2005]: The creation of Environmental Stewardship (of which Entry Level Stewardship is a part), involved extensive consultations with stakeholders and other interested groups. Entry Level Stewardship, as the 'whole farm' scheme open to all farmers and land managers, has been designed to cover the vast majority of landscapes and farming systems in England, including those found in upland areas.

The uplands have a specific range of options, such as those relating to moorland and rough grazing which take into account farming systems in those areas. Entry Level Stewardship has a national payment rate of £30 per hectare, per year, however land parcels of 15 hectares or more in the Less Favoured Area, are eligible for payments of £8 per hectare, per year. This lower payment rate reflects the reduced management input required for these options.

Water Consumption

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her estimate is of the number of litres of (a) sparkling and (b) still water consumed in the United Kingdom in (i) 2001 and (ii) 2002. [37638]

Jim Knight: It is estimated that 747 million litres of mineral water were consumed by household members in the UK in the period from April 2001 to March 2002 and 793 million litres in the period from April 2002 to March 2003. These estimates are based upon records of consumer purchases from the Expenditure and Food Survey which doesn't distinguish between still and sparkling mineral water. Figures published by Mintel in its bottled water report of June 2005 indicate that 20 per cent. of bottled water in 2001 was sparkling.

Zoonotic Disease

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her Department has evaluated on the zoonotic disease risks arising from the intensification of (a) meat and (b) dairy production in other countries. [38166]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra has not specifically evaluated or commissioned work on the zoonotic disease risks arising from the intensification of meat or dairy production in other countries. However, Defra's veterinary surveillance strategy has the detection of new and emerging animal disease threats as one of its aims.

Defra collaborates closely with the Department of Health on zoonotic risks through the National Expert Panel on New and Emerging Infections. This body has within its remit the identification of emerging and potential infectious threats to public health both nationally and internationally.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Administrative Savings

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what administrative savings have been made by his Department in each of the last eight years. [34936]

Mr. Thomas: The administration costs outturn figures for DFID for the past eight years are set out in the following table:

	Running costs outturn	Administration costs outturn
1997–98	52,000,000	—
1998–99	59,000,000	—
1999–2000	75,000,000	—
2000–01	73,000,000	—
2001–02	82,000,000	—
2002–03	94,000,000	—
2003–04	—	197,000,000
2004–05 (DFID resource account 2004–05)	—	212,000,000

Sources:
[Figures for 1997–98 to 2003–04 from DR 2000, 2004, 2005. Figure for 2004–05 from DFID resource accounts 2004–05]

Comparisons between administration budgets in 2003–04 and earlier years are not possible, due to the adoption of a new administration definition which included administration related items previously recorded within programme expenditure. The new definition improves transparency and management of administration costs.

Since 1997 the overseas budget has increased significantly, DFID's resource Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) increased by 50.8 per cent. between 1998–99 and 2004–05. Over the same period, the administration budget has grown modestly to support the expanding programme.

Under the SR04 Efficiency Programme, DFID will be saving £20 million in administration costs by 2007–08 (in 2007–08 prices) over a baseline of the 2005–06 budget. Headcount reductions and relocations contribute towards this, as does a reduction of the support services budget by £4.2 million, taking into account inflation, by 2007–08, over the same baseline. Further details can be found in DFID's Efficiency Technical Note, available on the DFID website address at www.dfid.gov.uk

Afghanistan

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps the Government are taking in Afghanistan to provide alternative poppy cultivation; and what progress is being made. [38893]

Hilary Benn: DFID leads the Government's efforts to develop alternative livelihoods in Afghanistan. In financial year 2005–06, DFID is spending over £45 million on alternative livelihoods. This is almost a tenfold increase on the amount spent in 2003–04.

DFID's assistance is closely aligned with the Government of Afghanistan's leadership on alternative livelihoods. DFID has invested a £27 million in quick impact alternative livelihoods this year. This is going through the Afghan Government's National Priority Programmes. This support will provide over 3 million labour days; access to microfinance for over 20,000 new clients including opium debt refinancing; and support for local infrastructure development to 150 villages.

DFID funding also helps improve long-term agricultural opportunities for Afghan farmers. DFID is contributing a joint US$30 million nationwide programme with the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), to increase access for over 500,000 farmers to seeds and fertiliser as an alternative to poppy. Innovative ways for farmers to make a living are also being pursued, including apricot drying, honey bee keeping, tailoring and weaving and the introduction of fruit tree nurseries and greenhouses for vegetable production.

At the same time as developing agricultural opportunities, it is important to develop non-farm alternative livelihoods if we are to ensure longer term sustainability. DFID activities in Badakshan and Eastern Hazarajat provinces are developing sustainable economic alternatives and social incentives to enable farmers to stop growing poppy.

Food Emergencies

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 27 October 2005, Official Report, column 513W, on food emergencies, what recent assessments his Department has made of food emergencies in (a) Angola, (b) Burkina Faso, (c) Burundi, (d) Chad, (e) the Central African Republic, (f) the Democratic Republic of Congo, (g) Cote d'Ivoire, (h) Eritrea, (i) Ethiopia, (j) Guinea, (k) Kenya, (l) Lesotho, (m) Liberia, (n) Malawi, (o) Mali, (p) Mauritania, (q) Niger, (r) Sierra Leone, (s) Somalia, (t) Sudan, (u) Swaziland, (v) Tanzania, (w) Uganda and (x) Zimbabwe. [37433]

Hilary Benn: DFID routinely monitors the humanitarian situation across Africa, and follows up on reports of significantly changes with more detailed assessments. In most of these countries the situation remains largely unchanged since our October analysis, with the exception of Southern Africa and Somalia, where the situation has recently deteriorated.

In Southern Africa, DFID's assessment is that 11.4 million people are facing food shortages and are in need of assistance. As a result, our humanitarian commitment to the affected countries in the region has recently increased to £64 million. This includes £18.2 million to Malawi, £41 million to Zimbabwe, £350,000 to Lesotho, and £300,000 to Swaziland.

In Somalia, the drought continues to intensify, affecting up to 400,000 people and resulting in very high rates of malnutrition in some areas. To respond, DFID has recently allocated £1 million to the World Food Programme's emergency operation in Somalia.

Angola, which was not covered in the response provided on 27 October 2005, is not facing a food emergency, having benefited from a record harvest in 2005. However, pockets of vulnerable and food-insecure people remain, particularly recently repatriated refugees, and aspects of DFID's £6 million humanitarian assistance to Angola over the last two years have been geared to meeting their needs.

GM Crops

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what assessment he has made of the effects on developing countries of golden rice; [38757]

(2) what assessment he has made of the economic impact of growing genetically modified crops in developing countries; [38758]

(3) what assessment he has made of the impact of biotechnology companies' contracts on seed sharing and saving in developing countries. [38759]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 19 December 2205]: The Nuffield Council on Bioethics report (2004) provided a review of the actual and potential benefits of genetically modified (GM) crops for developing countries. The Government shares the report's conclusions that achieving food security and reducing poverty in developing countries are complex issues, that GM crops are unlikely to feed the world, but that in some circumstances they could make a useful contribution to improving the livelihoods of poor people in developing countries.

In 2000, DFID funded a study on the development of methodologies for assessing the impacts of modern agricultural biotechnology on poor people. DFID has not made specific assessments on the benefits or potential problems of golden rice or the impact of biotechnology companies on seed sharing and saving in developing countries.

DFID takes genetic modification in crops and foods and its potential impacts on developing countries very seriously. Our approach is based on the principle that the health of people and their environment is of primary concern. We recognise that GM technology in itself will not solve the problem of world hunger. It can, however, be used safely and effectively to promote development and reduce poverty, if managed responsibly and applied to those crops on which the poor rely.

Recognising that there are both potential benefits and risks associated with GM crops, developing countries should be able to make their own informed choices about whether to adopt GM technologies. To this end, DFID worked with The Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) and other Government Departments to establish the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety, under the Convention on Biological Diversity.

The Protocol aims to ensure that countries are provided with the information necessary to make informed decisions before agreeing to the import of genetically modified organisms. It also facilitates the exchange of information on living modified organisms and assists countries in the implementation of the Protocol. The Protocol has a strong precautionary approach. This means that importing countries are able to make a decision to avoid or minimise potential adverse effects of GM organisms, even if there is a lack of scientific certainty on the extent of such potential adverse effects.

Ministerial Travel

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development on how many occasions since 7 July he has used the London Underground in connection with his official duties. [35021]

Hilary Benn: This information is not recorded.

World Water Forum

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development who from his Department will attend the World Water Forum in Mexico City in March 2006; and what his Department's role will be at the forum. [37496]

Hilary Benn: The Fourth World Water Forum that is due to be held in Mexico City from 16 to 22 March 2006 will be attended by senior officials from the Department for International Development. DFID will use the forum to re-confirm the main outcomes of the 14th session of the Commission for Sustainable Development and to push for more effective implementation of the work of the UN agencies involved with water and sanitation. The Minister of State for the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA), will represent the UK at the high level segment of the forum.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Consultants

Martin Horwood: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will list departmental projects conducted by consultants in each year since 2000; what the cost was in each case; and what the total cost of employing consultants was in each year. [29084]

The Solicitor-General: Detailed information on the use and total cost of consultants for the Law Officers' Departments in the years in question could be ascertained only at disproportionate cost. The following data identifies projects where the Law Officers' Departments have brought in special skills and expertise to provide an independent assessment on significant business areas.

Departmental Building

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General what (a) building and (b) refurbishment projects are planned by his Department in (i) the current and (ii) the next financial year; and what the estimated costs are of each project. [34538]

The Solicitor-General: None of the Law Officers' Departments has any building projects planned in either 2005–06 or 2006–07.

The Crown Prosecution Service and HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate have no refurbishment projects planned in either 2005–06 or 2006–07.

The Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office was established on 18 April 2005 and has a project underway to refurbish its office accommodation in accordance with the Gower Hammond, Butterfield and HMCPSI reports. The work is due for completion by March 2006 at an estimated cost of £850,000. They have no refurbishment plans for 2006–07.

The Serious Fraud Office will upgrade its office accommodation at Elm House at an estimated cost of £500,000 in 2005–06 and £1,500,000 in 2006–07.

The Treasury Solicitor's Office relocated its office in 2005–06 to accommodation rented from the Civil Aviation Authority, refurbishment of which was undertaken by the CAA. TSol has no other plans for refurbishment in either 2005–06 or 2006–07.

The Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers expects to re-locate its offices in 2006–07 or 2007–08 and refurbishment of the new location may be necessary but no decision has yet been made nor any project costs estimated.

Departmental Expenditure

Martin Horwood: To ask the Solicitor-General how much the Law Officers Department and its agencies have spent on (a) the design and production of new logos and (b) employing external (i) public relations and (ii) graphic design agencies in each year since 2000, broken down by project. [33199]

The Solicitor-General: The Attorney-General's Office does not sponsor any agencies but the Law Officers superintend the Crown Prosecution Service, HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate, the Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office, Serious Fraud Office and the Treasury Solicitor's Office.

None of the Departments have employed external public relations agencies.

The CPS has not incurred expenditure on the design and production of new logos. Expenditure has been incurred nationally on graphic design agencies to assist in the production of internal and external communication material about the role and work of the CPS is shown in the following table. Records are not kept centrally on expenditure on external graphic design by CPS areas but it would be minimal.

HMCPSI has not incurred expenditure on the design and production of new logos. On graphic design services it has spent:

RCPO came into being on 18 April 2005 and employed the Central Office of Information to develop its first logo and design corporate material to establish its identity. Final invoices have not yet been received but the budget for all the design and logo work is under £40,000.

In 2004, SFO spent £3,290 on the design of new logos. Its graphic design expenditure is integral to a small publications programme and the cost cannot be separately identified.

In 2004–05, the Treasury Solicitor's Office employed a design consultancy to create and develop a new corporate identity and supply final artwork and implementation guidelines for a cost of £18,900.

Departmental Research

Bob Spink: To ask the Solicitor-General what research projects commissioned by his Department are being undertaken; and what the publication arrangements are in each case. [33002]

The Solicitor-General: Currently none of the Law Officers' Departments[1] is undertaking any research project.

[1] The Law Officers' Departments are the Crown Prosecution Service, HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate, Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office, Serious Fraud Office and Treasury Solicitors' Office (including the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers).

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Solicitor-General what the Law Officer's Departments' policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33325]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers' Departments expect to let their contracts in accordance with moral principles and consider the suitability of any contractor to perform services on their behalf, including any instance where evidence to the contrary was presented, before awarding the contract.

Letting of the Departments' contracts complies with the Government's procurement principles and Community law. Where relevant, the approach taken by contractors to minimising impact on the environment when performing services on behalf of the Departments forms part of the evaluation criteria used to award contracts.

Equitable Life

Dr. Cable: To ask the Solicitor-General pursuant to his answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 502W, on Equitable Life, what account he takes of the completion of relevant civil actions on 2 December; and when the Serious Fraud Office will report on its examination of Equitable Life, commissioned by his Department in January 2004. [38745]

The Solicitor-General: On 19 December 2005 the Serious Fraud Office reported that it will not open an investigation into the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

After careful consideration of the available evidence, including the penrose report and material held by the Society and following the result of the Society's civil action against its previous auditors and some of its former directors. The Serious Fraud Office confirmed that nothing has emerged which would justify a full criminal investigation into the affairs of the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act

Pete Wishart: To ask the Solicitor-General (1) what discussions the Attorney General has had with the Scottish Executive on the commencement of sections 25 to 29 of the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1990; [38633]

(2) what assessment the Attorney General has made of the implications for the legal services sector in Scotland of the non-commencement of sections 25 to 29 of the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1990. [38634]

The Solicitor-General: The Attorney General has not any discussions or carried out any assessment of the implications for the legal services sector in Scotland of the non-commencement of sections 25 to 29 of the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1990.

Media Monitoring

Philip Davies: To ask the Solicitor-General how much the Law Officers' Department has spent on media monitoring activities in each of the last eight financial years. [35626]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers Departments have spent the following amounts on media monitoring services, for those years where departmental records have not been destroyed or identification would not incur disproportionate cost.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was paid in cold weather payments in winter 2004–05 to households in (a) Midlothian and (b) Scotland. [35308]

Mr. Timms: I have been asked to reply.

The available information is in the table.

Area	Amount of cold weather payments made last winter (£)
Midlothian	0
Scotland	[1]47,000

[1] Approximately

Notes:
1. If the average temperature has been recorded as, or is forecast to be, 0 C or below over seven consecutive days at a weather station, then a cold weather payment is "triggered" for all eligible customers whose postcode is linked to that weather station.
2. The weather station associated with postcodes in Midlothian did not trigger last winter.
3. The amount for Scotland is based on the number of people who were estimated to qualify because the weather station linked to their postcode triggered last winter. The number of estimated qualifiers was obtained from the benefit systems at the end of October before last winter. It excludes people on income support and income-based jobseeker's allowance who qualified because they had a disabled child aged five or over and who received support for that child via child tax credit.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps are taken by his Department to support staff with mental ill-health. [36272]

David Cairns: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 19 December 2005 Official Report, column 2370W.

Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what discussions the Advocate-General has had with the Scottish Executive on the commencement of sections 25 to 29 of the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1990; [38631]

(2) what assessment the Advocate-General has made of the implications for the legal services sector in Scotland of the non-commencement of sections 25 to 29 of the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1990. [38632]

David Cairns: The commencement of these sections is a matter for Scottish Executive Ministers. It is for Scottish Executive Ministers to assess the implications of non-commencement.

HEALTH

Alzheimer's Disease

2. Michael Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice she has issued to general practitioners on drugs which are suitable for the treatment of the early onset of Alzheimer's disease. [38391]

Jane Kennedy: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence issued guidance in 2001 on the clinical and cost effectiveness of drugs for the treatment of Alzheimer's disease. That guidance is currently under review.

22. Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her Department's policy is on treatment for Alzheimer's disease. [38413]

Mr. Byrne: The Department's policy on the treatment of Alzheimer's disease is clearly stipulated in the mental health standard of the Older People's National Service Framework (NSF).

This policy statement has been recently reinforced with the publication of our service development guide, "Everybody's Business", which outlines the key components of a comprehensive older people's mental health service including dementia care.

Waiting Lists

14. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice she has given in respect of the management of hospital waiting lists. [38405]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has published a wide range of advice to help the NHS improve the service it provides to patients, including reducing waiting times.

Guidance on the management of waiting times is available on the Department's website.

NHS Complaints Procedure

15. Mr. Simon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to improve the NHS complaints procedure. [38406]

Jane Kennedy: We are working closely with stakeholders to develop a more patient-focused system. This will build on the transfer of responsibility for independent review of complaints which is now undertaken by the Healthcare Commission.

Private Health Providers

16. Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by acute trusts on directly and indirectly commissioning and subcontracting private health providers in 2004–05. [38407]

Ms Hewitt: This information is not collected.

However, in 2004–05 NHS spending on non-NHS healthcare was over £3.6 billion. This includes expenditure on services provided by all non-NHS bodies, including local authorities, other statutory bodies, and the independent sector.

NHS spending on the nationally procured independent sector services was £78.8 million in 2004–05 and is included in the above figure.

Mental Health

17. Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to be in a position to publish the Mental Health Bill. [38408]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Mental Health Bill was in the Queen's Speech for this Session. We plan to introduce it when the legislative timetable permits.

20. David Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the prospects for mental health care. [38411]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national service framework (NSF) for mental health (1999) has produced demonstrable improvements in specialist care, hospital accommodation, suicide prevention, research, clinical guidance, primary care, access, finance and workforce development.

23. James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effect of the delay in the introduction of the Mental Health Bill. [38414]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Our intention remains, as previously stated, to introduce the Bill in this session when the legislative timetable permits.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were treated for mental ill-health in Hackney North and Stoke Newington in each of the last three years for which figures are available, broken down by ethnic origin. [37624]

Jane Kennedy: Information is not held in the format requested.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was allocated for mental health services in Hackney North and Stoke Newington in each of the last three financial years for which figures are available. [37625]

Jane Kennedy: The funding allocations are made to primary care trusts (PCTs) and the City and Hackney PCT funding allocations for the last three financial years are shown in the table.

	Funding (£ million)
2003–04	266.2
2004–05	295.1
2005–06	326.1

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding was allocated in Coventry South for mental health services in each of the last three years. [38768]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary care trusts do not receive a separate funding stream for mental health services.

Disability Nurse Specialists

18. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the appointment of disability nurse specialists at general hospitals. [38409]

Mr. Byrne: There are no national targets for disability nurse specialists working in general hospitals. It is for the NHS locally to determine skill mix within the nursing work force. The Government have supported the development of a range of specialist roles within nursing, and hospitals must deploy them as they see fit.

General Ophthalmic Services Contract

19. Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the General Ophthalmic Services contract in England. [38410]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Current arrangements provide ready access to a choice of providers for patients who are eligible for NHS-funded sight tests. The Review of General Ophthalmic Services provides an opportunity to review ways in which we and the NHS can build on these successful arrangements.

Primary Care Trusts (North Yorkshire)

21. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the restructuring of primary care trusts in North Yorkshire. [38412]

Mr. Byrne: In North Yorkshire, the SHA is consulting on two options for PCT reconfiguration. Consultations began on 14 December, and will run for 14 weeks until 22 March.

No decisions on reconfiguration will be made until the consultation is complete.

Abortion

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1798W, to the hon. Member for Romford, (Andrew Rosindell), on abortions, if she will make a statement on the increase in expenditure on terminations. [34393]

Caroline Flint: The increase in expenditure by the national health service on abortions is likely to be due to a number of factors. The NHS is now funding more abortions than in 1997 (from 123,886 to 152,385 in 2004, a 23 per cent. increase) and the cost of performing an abortion has increased since 1997, as has been the case for most other treatments.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when her Department last undertook an evidence review into the use of (a) RU486 (mifepristone) and (b) the morning-after pill that drew on (i) UK and (ii) international research; and if she will make a statement. [34601]

Jane Kennedy: In the United Kingdom mifepristone (RU486) and the emergency contraceptive pill (as Levonelle-2) have been available as prescription-only medicines since 1991, following advice from the then Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM) that was based on a review of all the available evidence for safety, efficacy and quality.

The safety of mifepristone and the emergency contraceptive pill are also monitored by the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) on a continual basis using both UK and international data. Thus, yellow card reports of suspected adverse drug reactions, periodic safety update reports submitted by marketing authorisation holders and new research published in the medical literature are reviewed regularly. In the event that these processes identify information that changes the balance of risks and benefits of a medicine, advice is sought from the Commission on Human Medicines, formerly the Committee on Safety of Medicines, and its expert advisory groups.

When a medicine is on the market, the Department will (re-)review its use in response to a specific stimulus, such as a safety concern, a proposed change in policy or a proposal to change the dose, indication or legal classification. Such reviews take into consideration all relevant data, regardless of whether it was generated in the UK or elsewhere.

The MHRA, in consultation with the wider Department, reviewed the use of the emergency contraceptive pill in 2001, when Levonelle-2 was made available for sale in pharmacies as Levonelle; in 2003, when the dosing regimen was changed from taking two tablets 12 hours apart to taking them at the same time; and in relation to this, when the strength of the pill was doubled in 2004. Advice from the CSM was sought on all occasions.

The use of mifepristone was most recently reviewed by the MHRA in September 2005. This followed the receipt of new information about the reporting of serious suspected adverse reactions in the United States of America. No new safety concerns were identified and no action considered necessary. We are also aware that the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists reviewed the use of mifepristone when producing the 2004 edition of its evidence-based guideline 'The Care of Women Requesting Induced Abortion'.

As with all licensed medicines, the safety of the emergency contraceptive pill and mifepristone will continue to be monitored by the MHRA.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which (a) Government Departments and (b) stakeholders outside Government were consulted by her Department when producing the Partial Regulatory Impact Assessment on the Prohibition of Abortion (England and Wales) Bill; how many of the outside bodies consulted (i) support and (ii) oppose legalised abortion; and if she will make a statement; [36376]

(2) what evidential basis her Department used for the estimate of the number of illegal abortions in Table 1 of the Partial Regulatory Impact Assessment on the Prohibition of Abortion (England and Wales) Bill; and if she will make a statement. [36377]

Caroline Flint: When developing the partial regulatory impact assessment (PRIA) on the proposed Prohibition of Abortion (England and Wales) Bill we contacted a range of Government Departments and stakeholders to get the best possible understanding of the Bill. Whilst we are aware that some of these stakeholders have strong views on abortion we did not seek information on where organisations stand on the broader issue. A list of those consulted is as follows:

Government Departments

Department for Education and Skills
United Kingdom Passport Office
Home Office
Scottish Executive
Welsh Assembly

Professional bodies and other stakeholders

British Medical Association
General Medical Council
Nursing and Midwifery Council
Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists
British Association for Adoption and Fostering British Pregnancy Advisory Service
Brook
Doctors For a Woman's Choice on Abortion
Family Planning Association
Fraterdrive Limited
Irish Embassy
LIFE
Marie Stopes International Society for the Protection of the Unborn Child

The number of possible illegal abortions contained in table 1 in the PRIA was estimated from information provided by those responding to the consultation and from examining what happened in other countries where access to abortion is restricted or illegal. The PRIA highlights that any outcomes would evolve over time, requiring around five years to become established.

Administrative Savings

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what administrative savings have been made by her Department in each of the last eight years. [34949]

Jane Kennedy: The Department has completed a programme of change which has transformed the Department into a smaller more strategically focused organisation. This was reflected in the Department's Spending Review 2004 settlement, and is reflected in planned spending as transitional costs are completed. The following table shows that, in real terms, over the period 1998–99 to 2004–05 the Department's administration costs reduced by 9 per cent., the planned spend in 2007–08 is 29 per cent., below the 1998–99 level.

Avian Influenza

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her oral answer of 17 October 2005, Official Report, column, 632W, on avian influenza, what definition of healthcare worker she plans to use for the purposes of treatment for pandemic influenza; and which categories of worker will be eligible for priority supplies of antivirals. [37533]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 15 December 2005]: We have purchased 14.6 million courses of oseltamivir (Tamiflu) to treat the 25 percent. of the population that may fall ill. We are aware of the possibility that a pandemic may strike before the antiviral stockpile is complete. The guidance we have published on antiviral storage and distribution takes this into account. Access to antivirals will need to be prioritised, initially to healthcare workers, and to those who fall into one of the 'clinical at risk' groups, as defined for seasonal flu. We have already received 3.3 million treatment courses, so the issue of prioritisation of healthcare workers should not arise.

Final decisions regarding prioritisation for vaccine and antivirals will be made on the basis of information emerging from the early stages of the pandemic about the virus and those groups most at risk. The UK National Influenza Pandemic Committee, chaired by the chief medical officer, will provide additional advice as required during the pandemic.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ensure that extra funding for Herceptin will be made available if it is required. [37925]

Jane Kennedy: The cost of Herceptin will need to be met from the existing settlement agreed for the national health service.

We understand that some trusts are already under financial pressures and may have to make difficult decisions in allocating resources. However, we have greatly increased the amount of money going into the NHS and those trusts with deficits have financial recovery plans in place.

Funding of the NHS has increased from £34.7 billion in 1997–98 to £69.7 billion in 2004–05. By 2007–08 spending on the NHS will have increased to £92 billion.

Care Standards

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment her Department has made of the effect of the decision in R v. Leonard Cheshire Foundation [2002] H.R.L.R.30 on the enforceability of provisions of the Human Rights Act 1998 by those using services provided by organisations registered under the Care Standards Act 2000; [20258]

(2) what assessment she has made of the implications of the decision in R v. Leonard Cheshire Foundation [2002] H.R.L.R.30 for NHS services provided by independent sector providers. [20259]

Mr. Byrne: Consideration has been given to the application of the Human Rights Act to independent sector bodies carrying out national health service services, and to organisations registered under the Care Standards Act 2000. My noble Friend, Baroness Ashton recently said in parliamentary debate:

> "On the issue of public authority ... we share the disappointment about the way 'pubic authority' in the Human Rights Act has been interpreted by the courts. The narrow construction of the definition has not fulfilled our hopes and expectations. The Government are following the advice of the Joint Committee and adopting two strategies to approach the problem. First, ... we are actively seeking a suitable case in which to intervene to argue for a wider definition of public authority. That would include the point ... on local authority-funded residents in private care homes, such as the Leonard Cheshire case.
> Furthermore, we are issuing guidance on how the contracts between public authorities and private organisations for the provision of services may seek to protect convention rights. This is a very important area; noble Lords have referred to the need to think about it very carefully. It will benefit from careful consideration and will therefore be a matter for the discrimination law review to consider."

Childhood Epilepsy

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children had epilepsy in the UK in each year since 1997. [38765]

Mr. Byrne: Information on the number of children suffering from epilepsy each year is not collected.

Cholesterol

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what incentives she plans to offer to pharmacists to offer (a) body mass index tests, (b) cholesterol tests, (c) blood pressure tests and (d) other health checks. [36615]

Jane Kennedy: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Dartford (Dr. Stoate) today.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost to the national health service of treating the effects of high cholesterol levels was in each of the last five years. [36925]

Caroline Flint: The Department has introduced dietary measures such as the 5-A-Day fruit and vegetable scheme that will impact on the general population with high cholesterol levels, but it is not possible to estimate their proportional effect and costs. The most effective way to treat the effects of high cholesterol is with the prescribing of lipid regulating drugs including statins. This is shown in the table.

Lipid regulating drugs dispensed in England

	Cost (£)
2000	326,110,476
2001	438,845,026
2002	570,973,440
2003	715,002,862
2004	769,236,688

Note:
Prescription information is taken from the prescription cost analysis (PCA) system, supplied by the Prescription Pricing Authority (PPA), and is based on a full analysis of all prescriptions dispensed in the community, that is, by community pharmacists and appliance contractors, dispensing doctors, and prescriptions submitted by prescribing doctors for items personally administered in England. Also included are prescriptions written in Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland and the Isle of Man but dispensed in England. The data do not cover drugs dispensed in hospitals, including mental health trusts, or private prescriptions.

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will estimate the number of pharmacists who are planning to offer health checks including Body Mass

Index tests, cholesterol tests and blood pressure tests in response to the Choosing Health through Pharmacy contract; [36761]

(2) whether the Government plan (a) to measure and (b) to estimate the number of health checks carried out under the Choosing Health through Pharmacy contract; [36762]

(3) what estimate the Government has made of how many health checks have taken place so far under the Choosing Health through Pharmacy contract; [36763]

(4) what measures the Government are taking to improve access testing under the Choosing Health through Pharmacy contract in areas of deprivation and poverty. [36764]

Jane Kennedy: New community pharmacy contractual arrangements provide the framework for pharmacy to make a positive contribution to tackling key health priorities such as obesity and coronary heart disease and to improving the health of the public, including where health inequalities persist.

Some pharmacies offer blood pressure testing, cholesterol testing or a range of other screening tests. Such testing should be in accordance with relevant national screening guidelines, where they exist, and in line with local primary care trust (PCT) programmes for prevention and management of risk factors and with robust quality assurance processes.

We published "Choosing Health through Pharmacy—A programme for pharmaceutical public health" in April 2005, which aims to maximise the contribution of pharmacists, their staff and the premises in which they work to improve health and reduce health inequalities. This strategy will enable pharmacists and their staff to make better use of their skills and it will open up opportunities for pharmacy to make a bigger difference to improving the health of people in England. PCTs can commission local enhanced services to meet identified health needs.

Although we do not hold details centrally on the number of pharmacists planning to offer health checks or the numbers of such checks, we have developed an assurance framework for PCTs to use in monitoring pharmacy's implementation of new contractual requirements, and also strategic tests for strategic health authorities to monitor how PCTs are using the new framework to deliver key health priorities and objectives locally.

Community Hospitals (Wiltshire)

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she has taken to monitor proposals to close inpatient beds in community hospitals in Wiltshire. [38260]

Caroline Flint: The Department does not monitor proposals to close inpatient beds. Changes to services are the responsibility of the local national health service as they are best placed to make decisions about how to provide health services to people in the local community.

Coventry Teaching Primary Care Trust

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions her Department has had with Coventry Teaching primary care trust regarding their predicted cash shortfall. [38163]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not discussed the matter with Coventry primary care trust. It is the responsibility of strategic health authorities (SHAs) to deliver both overall financial balance for their local health communities and to ensure each and every body achieves financial balance. This is now a matter for West Midlands South SHA.

Dentistry

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost per patient episode is at (a) a dental access centre and (b) a dental surgery operating under the general dental services contract. [31910]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department only holds information on its central contribution to dental access centres and does not hold full cost information, which includes any primary care trust (PCT) contribution and patient charge revenue. The Department does not have complete data from PCTs on patient throughput in dental access centres. However, based on the Department's total central contribution to the cost of dental access centres and the available data on patient throughput, the estimated average cost per patient episode in 2004–05 was a maximum of £141.

For the quarter ending September 2005, the average cost per patient episode, at a dental surgery operating under the general dental services contract was £41.77.

Dental Practice Board

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) dental nurses, (b) dental hygienists and (c) dental therapists there are in Tamworth. [32037]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As at 30 September 2004 there were no qualified dental therapists employed by Burntwood, Lichfield and Tamworth Primary care trust (PCT). There are two dental therapists employed by PCTs within the Shropshire and Staffordshire strategic health authority area. The number of dental therapists employed privately by dentists is not held by the Department.

Information about the number of dental nurses and dental hygienists is not held centrally.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are on the waiting list for an NHS dentist in Coventry South. [38767]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not held centrally.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) salary bill was and (b) administrative costs were for her Department in (i) each region and (ii) London in 2004–05. [35874]

Jane Kennedy: The Department operates in England only. The Public Expenditure Outturn White Paper (Cm 6639) gives the provisional 2004–05 departmental administration costs outturn for England, and the Departmental Report 2005 (Cm 6524), figure 8.1, contains estimated 2004–05 pay bill outturn.

Information for each region of the United Kingdom, or London, is not available.

Departmental Estate

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which buildings and sites used by her Department and related agencies (a) have ceased to be used in the last year and (b) will be closed under current plans for relocation. [31767]

Jane Kennedy: Three London buildings, Eileen House and Hannibal House in Central London and Canons Park in Stanmore, have been closed during 2005. No other properties are due to be closed under plans for relocation.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) land and (b) property her Department (i) owns and (ii) rents in each constituency; and if she will make a statement. [33262]

Jane Kennedy: The properties owned or leased by the Department and its executive agencies together with the constituency in which they lie is shown in the table.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what use is being made of each former community health council building in England on which her Department is paying rent; and how much rent her Department is paying on each property. [35576]

Jane Kennedy: There were approximately 175 properties occupied by community health councils. The Department's interest in the majority has been disposed of. The Department is currently paying rent on the following former community health council properties in England. Unless otherwise stated they are vacant. Having established that there was no national health service interest they have been actively marketed.

22–24 High Road, Willesden—annual rent £29,375. A notice to break the lease from June 2006 has been served.

42 Fulham Palace Road, Fulham—annual rent £28,000. The lease expires in December 2005.

45–47 Praed Street, Paddington—annual rent £130,000. The property is part sub-let at £72,000 per annum.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was paid by her Department in rent for properties in (a) total, (b) each region and (c) London in 2004–05. [35938]

Jane Kennedy: The Department and its executive agencies during 2004–05 paid £18,042,254 in total rent. This comprises regional totals of:

North West	245,580
North East	37,200
West Midlands	70,000
East Midlands	861
Eastern	86,000
South West	294,700
South East	328,986
Yorkshire and Humberside	5,438,666

All properties are located in England. Rent of £11,540,261 was paid for our London properties.

Departmental Expenditure

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the Department and its agencies have spent on (a) the design and production of new logos and (b) employing external (i) public relations and (ii) graphic design agencies in each year since 2000, broken down by project. [33219]

Jane Kennedy: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total value is of (a) catering and (b) entertainment contracts let by her Department; and what value of such contracts has been let in each nation and region of the UK, including London. [37485]

Jane Kennedy: The Department has a catering contract with Quadrant for restaurant, hospitality and vending services. The overall value of contract for the year 2004–05 was £1.2 million. The catering contract covers the Department of Health's London Estate that covers three main sites for restaurant facilities and hospitality services. Hospitality services are extended to some of our minor sites. The contract is run at nil subsidy and is therefore at no direct cost to the Department.

The Department spent £592,000 during 2004–05 on entertainment.

Departmental Guidance (Evidence/Documentary Access)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her policy is with regard to (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department giving evidence to the (i) Scottish Parliament, (ii) National Assembly for Wales and (iii) Northern Ireland Assembly committees; and to what categories of document she gives (A) full access, (B) restricted access and (C) no access to the (1) Scottish Parliament, (2) National Assembly for Wales, (3) Northern Ireland Assembly and (4) House of Commons select committees. [37385]

Jane Kennedy: Requests for the attendance of Ministers or officials to give evidence to the devolved legislatures, and for the provision of information to the assemblies, will be considered on a case by case basis. This consideration will reflect: the principles set out in the Cabinet Office guidance "Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees "(July 2005); the policy outlined in the Department for Constitutional Affairs' Devolution Guidance Note number 12 "Attendance of UK Ministers and Officials at Committees of the devolved legislatures", and the requirements of the Freedom of Information Act. The principles underlying the provision of information to House of Commons Select Committees are set out in "Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees", particularly sections 4B and 4C.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many publications were issued by her Department in each of the last five years; and what the production cost of each was. [34763]

Jane Kennedy: Between 1 October 2004 and 31 September 2005, the Department produced 697 publications. The cost of producing these, including design, typesetting and print services, totalled £6,781,780.

For all other printed publications produced prior to 1 October 2004, the Department has no central record of this information and could not obtain this without incurring disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff are employed by her Department in each region; and if she will make a statement. [35902]

Jane Kennedy: The figures requested are published in Civil Service Statistics, Table D which covers permanent staff numbers (full-time equivalent basis) in each Department and agency. Civil Service Statistics are available in the Library and at the following address on the Cabinet Office Statistics website:

www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_of_the_civil_service/statistics/civil_service_statistics/index.asp

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are taken by the Department to support staff with mental ill-health. [36273]

Jane Kennedy: The Department has a number of procedures already in place to support staff with mental ill health. These include a specific staff policy, 24-hour confidential counselling service and occupational health. In addition, we are currently looking at reviewing human resource policies and considering further interventions particularly around awareness sessions, and employee health and well-being initiatives.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of staff in her Department are (a) directly employed by the Department and (b) agency and non-permanent staff. [37215]

Jane Kennedy: The most recent figures, as at 30 June 2005, were published on 6 October 2005. The data for this period is shown in the following table.

	Number	Percentage
Directly employed by the Department	2,317	97
Agency and non-permanent staff	72	3
Total	2,389	—

Note:
Figures shown are full time equivalent.

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what initiatives are being taken in her Department to help civil servants with chronic back pain. [34986]

Jane Kennedy: The Department has several processes in place to support staff who are ill such as workplace assessments and occupational health. The Department is also about to introduce a new maximising attendance policy which takes a much more proactive approach to absence management. Muscular-skeletal disorders such as chronic back pain have been flagged up within this policy as something that requires early referral to occupational health.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many departmental staff have been seconded to industry in each of the last seven years. [35157]

Jane Kennedy: Since 2002 there has been a total of five Department of Health staff seconded to industry. We are unable to provide details before this date.

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33333]

Jane Kennedy: The Department has a strong commitment to the principles of sustainable development, and this is reflected in the new United Kingdom strategy for sustainable development.

Through this policy, the Department and its agencies are committed to considering the environmental, social and economic impacts of its procurement activities. Where directly relevant to the subject matter of the tender, environmental and social issues are included. Environmental factors in contracts let by the Department are considered on a case by case basis relative to the subject matter of the contract, and the requirements of community law.

The NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency (NHS PSA) works with the Department and other Government Departments to increase awareness of sustainable development within the national health service supply chain, and to ensure that wherever possible NHS PSA support the achievement of sustainable development objectives, and support the improvement of the nation's health and well being.

Departmental Websites

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ensure the Department's websites attain the W3C AAA standard of accessibility for people with visual and other disabilities; and if she will set a target date for this standard to be achieved by. [30961]

Jane Kennedy: The Department's policy is to follow the 'Guidelines for UK Government websites' and 'Web Content Accessibility Guidelines: Version 1' published by the e-Government Unit within the Cabinet Office. These guidelines currently require UK Government websites to meet W3C 'A' standard. In addition, certain guidelines from W3C 'AA' and 'AAA' standards are recommended as best practice. However, to date, neither these Guidelines, e-Accessibility communications from the European Union nor advice from the Royal National Institute of the Blind have suggested that United Kingdom Government websites should attain and maintain level 'AAA'.

The Department is acutely aware that to be accessible a website must be as easy to use and understand for as many visitors as possible. Committed to the principle of accessibility, the Department completely redeveloped its website in 2004 to ensure it complies with the World Wide Web Consortium's (W3Cs) level A guidelines for accessibility and works with screen readers. This year, it has achieved 75 per cent. compliance with the 'AA' guidelines. The website also complies with the following guidelines from 'AAA' standard:

ensuring that there is sufficient contrast between foreground and background colours (P3 checkpoint 2.2)

the provision of a site map (P3 checkpoint 13.3)

the provision of search facilities (P3 checkpoint 13.7)

the speech-enablement of your website (P3 checkpoint 14.2)

use of consistent presentation across all pages (P3 checkpoint 14.3).

The Department is committed to ongoing improvements in the accessibility of its website, and will continue to work with its internet service providers to achieve compliance with emerging accessibility standards.

Diabetes

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of people with diabetes have been offered retinal screening to test for signs of diabetic retinopathy as part of a systematic retinal screening programme in the past 12 months. [36068]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 8 December 2005]: Latest performance data from local delivery plan monitoring shows that at September 2005 57.3 per cent. of people with diabetes had received screening for diabetic retinopathy over the past 12 months. National figures are not yet available on the numbers of patients offered screening. However, it is expected that at least 70 per cent. of people offered screening will receive it.

2004–05 data from general practices participating in the quality outcomes framework of the new general medical services contract records 85 per cent. of people with diabetes as screened. These two sources produce different information because the two data collections have different purposes and definitions.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects the National Screening Committee to issue its guidance on a national programme for the early identification of diabetes. [36069]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 8 December 2005]: The United Kingdom National Screening Committee considered screening for type II diabetes at its meeting on 29 November 2005 and I expect to receive its advice on the next steps shortly.

Dr. Ann David

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the result of the inquiry commissioned by the Basildon and Thurrock Hospital Trust under the HC90–9 procedure, into the conduct of Dr. Ann David; and if she will make a statement. [32005]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 28 November 2005]: I have no plans to publish the results of the disciplinary investigation commissioned by the Basildon and Thurrock Hospital National Health Service Trust under HC(90)9 procedure, into the conduct of Dr. Ann David. The investigation and report is an internal matter for the trust as the employer of an individual. It is a matter for the trust whether it wishes to publish a summary of the findings of its investigations.

Elderly Care Costs

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will commission research to establish the cost of providing all care for the elderly free of charge. [29580]

Mr. Byrne: In England, the Government have accepted each of the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Long Term Care except the recommendation to provide free personal care in all settings.

Making personal care free for everyone carries a very substantial and increasing cost, but would not raise the standard or range of services available. The cost for 2005–06, estimated by the Department, is £1.7 billion.

Providing free bed and board costs in care homes, estimated by the Department, is around £2.3 billion for England. This does not assume any reduction in state pensions or other social security benefits.

An estimated overall total for free care in care homes and free personal care at home, is around £4 billion at current prices for the current year.

Foundation Trusts

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what health standards foundation trusts are required to meet by the Healthcare Commission. [35792]

Jane Kennedy: The Health and Social Care (Community Care and Standards) Act 2003 provides a power for the Secretary of State to publish statements of standards in relation to the provision of health care by and for English national health service bodies, which includes NHS foundation trusts. The Secretary of State published the standards as 'Standards for Better Health' in July 2004. All English NHS bodies are required to take these standards into account in discharging the duty of quality placed on them in the 2003 Act.

In addition, NHS foundation trusts are bound to comply with the standards under their terms of authorisation.

The Healthcare Commission takes these standards into account when undertaking the annual assessment and rating of English NHS bodies, including NHS foundation trusts. The Commission publishes details of its assessment process on its website at: www.healthcarecommission.org.uk.

Freedom of Information Act

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many requests for information have been received by her Department since the Freedom of Information Act 2000 came into force; how many requests have had their deadline extended beyond 20 working days to allow consideration of where the public interest lies; and how many requests have been refused on public interest grounds. [37645]

Jane Kennedy: The Department received 900 freedom of information (FOI) applications between the period 1 January and 30 September 2005. Of these, 31 had their deadline extended beyond 20 working days to allow consideration of the balance of public interest. There were 147 requests where the balance of public interest favoured withholding the information.

The Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) is committed to publishing quarterly updates in relation to departmental performance under FOI, including information on both the volume and outcomes of requests. The bulletin for the third quarter was published on 15 December 2005 and can be found on the DCA's website at: www.foi.gov.uk/statsjul-sep05.htm and is available in the Library.

General Opthalmic Services

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects the recently announced review of the General Ophthalmic Services to be completed. [35061]

Ms Rosie Winterton: When we announced the review in August 2005, we indicated that we expected the review to report in early 2006. However, to take into account arguments put forward by the main representative bodies, we are extending the time scale to ensure full consideration of the issues. It is now likely that the review will report later in 2006. It will also ensure that the review is able to reflect the forthcoming White Paper on services outside hospital.

GM Food

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent international experience she has assessed in relation to the withdrawal of GM products for health reasons. [36425]

Caroline Flint: In the United Kingdom, genetically modified (GM) food and feed products may only be marketed if they have undergone a rigorous safety assessment and been granted an EU-wide authorisation. If new information comes to light concerning the safety of a GM product, there are a range of measures that can be taken to protect consumers at national and EU level. We are not aware of any withdrawal of GM products in other countries for health reasons that has implications for GM food or feed products that are authorised in the EU.

Health Act 1999

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people aged (a) 18 to 24, (b) 25 to 30, (c) 31 to 40 and (d) over 40 years have been prosecuted under the Health Act 1999 for wrongful claims for free prescriptions in (i) Southend, (ii) Essex, (iii) Hertfordshire and (iv) England in each year since 2000. [36177]

Jane Kennedy: Since August 2001, a penalty charge system has been in place in respect of those falsely claiming exemption to national health service pharmaceutical charges. Since its introduction, more than 160,000 penalty notices have been issued. The total amount recovered to date is over £2,950,000. These figures are national and are not broken down into the age categories and regions as requested. Penalties are sanctioned through the civil courts as criminal prosecution of offenders would not be a cost-effective way of dealing with such high volume but low-value frauds.

The introduction of the penalty charge system has enabled the money recovered to be re-invested in providing better patient care within the NHS.

Health Bill

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions (a) Ministers and (b) officials have had with the World Health Organisation about part I of the Health Bill; and if she will make a statement. [36179]

Caroline Flint: Since publication of the Health Bill on 27 October 2005 there have been no formal discussions with the World Health Organisation (WHO) of part I of the Bill at either ministerial level or official level.

However, the content of the Bill is informed by the WHO International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC) classification of second-hand smoke as a human carcinogen in 2002. The United Kingdom has also, along with some 114 other countries, ratified the WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control (FCTC). The WHO FCTC states:

> "Recognising that scientific evidence has unequivocally established that tobacco consumption and exposure to tobacco smoke cause death, disease and disability".

Healthcare Commission

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on which subjects the Healthcare Commission has commissioned clinical audits; and when she expects each audit will be published. [35369]

Jane Kennedy: The Healthcare Commission's latest programme of clinical audits, is shown in the following table. Some of the Healthcare Commission's latest programmes have yet to start. For current clinical audits information is provided on the latest, and where appropriate, next expected publication.

Herceptin

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will meet the North Stoke Primary Care Trust to discuss extra funding for the NHS prescription of Herceptin in this financial year. [20754]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national health service is already benefiting from the increased investment in the NHS which between 2003 and 2008 will increase on average by 7.5 per cent. each year. It is for primary care trusts (PCTs) to decide on how best to use these resources based on the needs of their local populations. Therefore it would not be appropriate for the Secretary of State or a member of the ministerial team to meet this particular PCT.

We have taken steps to ensure that breast cancer patients who could benefit from Herceptin can be identified and treated. On 5 October we announced that all breast cancer patients would be tested for suitability for treatment with Herceptin. The national cancer director is working with cancer networks to ensure that testing arrangements are in place so that once Herceptin is licensed for early breast cancer those patients who would benefit are quickly identified.

On 3 November, we launched a new rapid process for assessing drugs and other treatments to sit alongside the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's (NICE) global standard process. This new single technology appraisal (STA) will be used to produce faster guidance on life-saving drugs which have been licensed.

Roche, the manufacturer of Herceptin, has announced that its application for a licence will be made to the European medicines agency for the evaluation of medical products in February 2006, with a decision anticipated by July 2006 at the earliest. The new STA will allow NICE to react as soon as possible after the drug is licensed.

These steps mean that any breast cancer patient who might benefit from Herceptin should get the drug by next summer, after they have received their other treatments.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to make extra resources available for primary care trusts to fund the provision of Herceptin for women with early stage breast cancer. [34569]

Jane Kennedy: The cost of Herceptin will need to be met from the existing settlement agreed for the national health service.

We understand that some trusts are already under financial pressures and may have to make difficult decisions in achieving this. However, we have greatly increased the amount of money going into the NHS and those trusts with deficits have financial recovery plans in place.

Funding of the NHS has increased from £34.7 billion in 1997–98 to £69.7 billion in 2004–05. By 2007–08 spending on the NHS will have increased to £92 billion.

Home Deaths

Angela Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance is given to primary care services in respect of people who die at home. [37972]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 15 December 2005]: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence guidance on supportive and palliative care, published in 2004, gives recommendations to improve the care provided to people with cancer, including responding to patients' wishes about where they are cared for, and die. The guidance endorses three tools: the gold standards framework, the Liverpool care pathway, and the preferred place of care; which are being rolled out nationally through the end of life care programme and are applicable to the care of people at the end of life, regardless of their condition.

The end of life care programme has been given funding of £12 million over three years (2004–07), and provides training for staff in acute, community and care home settings so that all patients near the end of life have access to high quality palliative care and are able to choose where they receive care.

Hospital Discharge (Terminally Ill Patients)

Angela Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance is given to primary care trusts on the discharge from hospital of people who are terminally ill. [37970]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 15 December 2005]: The discharge of terminally ill patients from hospital is based on the clinical decision of the health service staff responsible for that patient's care. Decisions on discharge are informed by the recommendations in the National Institute for Clinical Excellence guidance on supportive and palliative care, published in 2004. The guidance endorses the use of three key tools: the gold standard framework, the Liverpool care pathway and the preferred place of care, which support clinicians and patients to plan how and where services are provided that best meet the wishes of the patient. The national roll-out of these tools is a key part of the end of life care programme, which is a three-year Government programme to provide patients with the choice to die at home.

Incentive Packages

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the value is of (a) pay supplements, (b) bonuses and (c) other incentive packages that are payable in her Department on the basis of geographic location; how many people are in receipt of each payment; and what the total cost to her Department of each payment was in 2004–05. [35904]

Jane Kennedy: The Department does not pay any supplements, bonuses, or incentive packages on the basis of geographic location, as part of its existing reward strategy.

Influenza Vaccine

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the number of people in Tamworth constituency in at-risk groups who have been unable to obtain a seasonal influenza vaccination. [37827]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence she has collated on whether general practitioners have been vaccinating people for influenza as a priority who are outside the at-risk groups. [32461]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 28 November 2005]: As in previous years, data is being collected on the number of people in the at risk groups who have been vaccinated, and the full data will not be available until the new year. Sufficient vaccine was however ordered to vaccinate all those in the at risk groups.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the British Medical Association on whether its members have been prescribing influenza vaccinations to the 'worried well'. [32462]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The Secretary of State for Health, special advisers and officials have had several conversations with representatives of the British Medical Association about seasonal flu vaccination. We are working together to ensure that all those in the at risk groups who want to be vaccinated, will be.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doses of influenza vaccine her Department has (a) ordered, (b) taken delivery of and (c) supplied to general practitioners in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and on what dates. [32481]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 28 November 2005]: General practitioners (GPs) purchase their own supply of vaccine from any of a range of suppliers, based on the number of eligible patients on the practice register. GPs organise and carry out flu clinics between September and January.

The Department ordered 1.2 million doses of influenza vaccine for its contingency stockpile in the last 12 months, 400,000 doses of which had been received by 25 November. Between 25 November 2004 and mid-December 2004, 1,598 doses had been delivered to GPs, between 8 November 2005 and 25 November 2005, 93,898 doses had been delivered to GPs.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information (a) is routinely collected as part of the seasonal influenza vaccination programme and (b) was collected as part of this year's special audit; and if she will place in the Library a copy of the data her Department has collected in each of the last three years. [32486]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 28 November 2005]: Since 2000, the Department has collected data from each primary care trust (PCT) on the number of over 65s, and since 2004 other younger, at risk groups, who receive the seasonal influenza vaccine. Details of this year's survey of vaccine uptake can be found in the guide for PCTs available at http://194.200.241.125/pctguides/.

The data on 2003–04 vaccine uptake is available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assestRoot/04/09/95/77/04/099577.pdf.

Data on 2004–05 vaccine uptake is also available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assestRoot/04/ll/96/50/04119650.pdf. They are also available in the Library.

This year's special audit asked general practitioners:

whether they had sufficient flu vaccine to complete their influenza vaccination programme;

if they needed more flu vaccine, how many doses they would require to complete their influenza vaccination programme; and if they had already completed their influenza vaccination programme, did they have surplus flu vaccine available that could be re-distributed to other practices within their area or PCT. And, if so, how many.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her oral statement of 22 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1371–82, on seasonal influenza vaccine supplies, whether the number of doses of vaccine intended to be supplied was increased from 13.4 million when carers were added to the recommended groups for vaccination; and what action her Department took when informed in October by a manufacturer that it had run out of supplies of vaccine. [32518]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 28 November 2005]: Details of the current recommendations regarding carers receiving flu immunisation was given to all general practitioners (GPs) in the chief medical officer's communication dated 9 August 2004 with reference to the Green Book, and 25 July 2005.

Discussions with manufacturers at the start of the year to secure flu vaccine were on the basis of an additional 2.3 million doses than was used in the previous year for further expansion of coverage and incorporation of new risk groups and carers.

Some manufacturers delayed delivery of their flu vaccine due to problems with the manufacturing process. We wrote to all GPs on 3 November with details of how to order vaccine purchased as part of our contingency measures and by the 23 December, we will have distributed 400,000 doses of vaccine from this stock.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her oral statement of 22 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1371–82, on seasonal influenza vaccine supplies, when her Department ascertained the new figures on uptake of vaccine amongst risk groups; and what estimate she has made of the number of people who qualify for immunisation who will not be immunised by the end of this immunisation season. [32519]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The figures on influenza vaccine uptake were received by the Department on 14 November. It is impossible to estimate how many people who qualify for immunisation but will not be immunised this season, because not all of those who fall within the risk groups seek vaccination. Based on previous uptake data there is enough vaccine in the national health service as a whole to vaccinate everyone in the at risk groups that is expected to want flu vaccination.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of people in (a) each London borough and (b) England who have requested an influenza vaccination this winter but have not yet received one. [37956]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Media Monitoring

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much her Department has spent on media monitoring activities in each of the last eight financial years. [35638]

Jane Kennedy: The current arrangements for regular national and regional media monitoring started in October 2004.

Costs since then have been:

2004–05	50,040
2005–06	57,334

Before October 2004, media evaluation was undertaken in a more ad-hoc way, often combined with other research. These costs can not be extracted from the previous finance system without a great deal of work and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has (a) undertaken and (b) commissioned research into the presence and reporting in the (i) broadcast and (ii) print media of the hon. Member for Northavon since 5 May. [36983]

Jane Kennedy: The Department has not undertaken nor commissioned research specifically into the presence and reporting in either broadcast or print media, of the hon. Member for Northavon.

Medical Instruments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was spent by each primary care trust (PCT) on medical instruments in each year since 1998; and what the projected spend in each PCT is in (a) 2006, (b) 2007 and (c) 2008. [34214]

Jane Kennedy: Expenditure by primary care trusts (PCTs) has been placed in the Library.

Information relating to projected expenditure is not available.

Medicines

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the provision of safe and effective medicines for the NHS at reasonable prices. [30991]

Jane Kennedy: The prices of branded prescription medicines and the profits that companies are allowed to make on their sales to the national health service (NHS) are controlled by the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme (PPRS). It aims to achieve a balance between reasonable prices for the NHS and a fair return for the industry to enable it to develop and market new and improved medicines. The 2005 PPRS included a price reduction of 7 percent., which will deliver expenditure savings of some £2 billion over the next five years for the NHS in England.

New arrangements to set the reimbursement of generic medicines were introduced from 1 April 2004. These reflect the underlying market price of these medicines and will reduce the cost of the medicines by £300 million per annum. This money is being used to fund the new pharmacy contractual framework. The new framework gives primary care trusts the opportunity to work with local pharmacists to develop a range of high quality community pharmacy services. This will make them an integral part of local primary care provision.

Mental Capacity Advocate Service

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the result of the consultation was on the proposed independent mental capacity advocate service; and what pilot projects are planned ahead of its introduction. [30583]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are in the process of analysing the responses to the consultation on the independent mental capacity advocate (IMCA) service which ended on 30 September. We received 174 written responses to the consultation. In addition, some 450 people attended regional road shows to put forward their views on the consultation in a more informal way.

We want to look at the detail of the arguments made in the consultation process to gauge public opinion before deciding how to proceed, in particular about how the regulation making powers on the IMCA should be used and on the operation and implementation of the service. The aim will be to keep statutory regulation to the minimum. The Government will publish the results of the consultation.

As part of the development work for the IMCA service we are setting up some IMCA pilots to help identify the practical issues involved in implementing it.

The objective of the Independent Mental Capacity Act (IMCA) pilots is to test how this new service will work, in advance of it becoming a national requirement in April 2007. The pilots will test different ways of setting up this service—for example with full-time IMCA advocates and with sessional advocates. They will test systems for recording, referral and for monitoring. The outcome will be good practice guidance which will be useful both for the commissioners of this service when it becomes a national requirement and also for the future IMCA advocacy providers, many of whom may be small and will benefit from access to information about good practice in other advocacy services.

The budget for the pilots is £500,000. The pilots will take place in Cambridgeshire, Cheshire, Croydon, Dorset, Hertfordshire, Merseyside, Newcastle, and Southwark. The pilots will be evaluated by an external researcher who will work with the advocacy organisations to develop protocols such as monitoring systems and reflective diaries.

Morecambe Bay Primary Care Trust

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients are on the waiting list of the Morecambe Bay Primary Care Trust (PCT) for allocation to an NHS dentist; and how many patients of Morecambe Bay PCT are being treated in other PCT areas. [29319]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information relating to the number of patients on the waiting list of Morecambe Bay primary care trust for allocation to a national health service dentist is not held centrally.

The number of patients living in the Morecambe Bay PCT area registered with a dentist outside the PCT area is 4,521.

Note:
These areas have been defined using the Office of National Statistics all field postcodes Directory May 2005.

MRSA

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in each strategic health authority contracted MRSA in each year since 1995. [34135]

Jane Kennedy: Information on methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) blood stream infections by strategic health authority is not available in the format requested.

NHS Complaints

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether NHS complaints procedures apply to NHS patients treated in private (a) diagnostic and treatment centres and (b) cataract operation units; [34269]

(2) whether an NHS patient seeking compensation following mistreatment in a private (a) diagnostic and treatment centre and (b) cataract operation unit can sue the NHS. [34270]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 5 December 2005]: National health service patients who are referred for treatment in independent sector treatment centres have the same right to complain as patients who are treated by NHS providers. The responsibility for handling complaints from NHS patients rests with the appropriate NHS primary care trust or acute trust that referred the patient. Such complaints are handled through the NHS complaints process. In addition, independent sector treatment centre providers that have NHS patients referred to them for treatment are also required to have their own patient complaints procedures in place.

Healthcare professionals treating referred NHS patients are covered by NHS Indemnity for any negligent act or omission.

NHS Computers

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether she plans to replace the current stock of NHS computer (a) keyboards, (b) mice and (c) keyboard readers with washable versions; [33748]

(2) what assessment she has made of (a) the role of (i) computer mice, (ii) keyboards and (iii) keyboard readers in the spread of MRSA in hospitals and (b) the contribution which could be made by washable versions of each to its prevention; [33749]

(3) what guidance is given to NHS staff on the sterilisation of computer (a) keyboards, (b) mice and (c) keyboard readers. [33750]

Jane Kennedy: The supply of computer equipment is a local responsibility.

Computer keyboards and other equipment can become contaminated with methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus and other bacteria capable of causing infections and regular cleaning is recommended by infection control experts. Regular cleaning will reduce the risk of infection from these sources, but as they may become contaminated between cleaning episodes it is essential that staff clean their hands before touching patients. This is why we have the national "cleanyourhands" campaign.

NHS Finance

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS hospital trusts and primary care trusts serving South West Bedfordshire constituency are forecasting a significant financial deficit at the 2005–06 year end; and if she will set out the forecast deficit in each case. [35648]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 8 December 2005]: The primary care trusts (PCTs) and national health service trusts covered by South West Bedfordshire constituency that are forecasting a deficit at Month 6 2005–06 are set out in the table:

Organisation name	2005–06 Month 6 forecast under(over) spend £000
Bedfordshire Heartlands PCT	20,000
Bedford Hospitals NHS Trust	12,056

NHS Staff (Assaults)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information her Department collects concerning assaults on NHS workers; and what recent changes her Department has made to data collected regarding violence towards staff. [35418]

Jane Kennedy: In November 2003, the national health service introduced a comprehensive range of measures to tackle violence against NHS staff. This included two legally based definitions for the reporting of physical and non-physical assaults to ensure that appropriate action is taken following such incidents.

The NHS security management service currently collects information relating to incidents of physical assaults against NHS staff, through its national reporting system, which became fully operational from April 2004.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information the NHS Security Management Service collects concerning the sentences handed down as a result of prosecutions involving physical assaults on staff. [35419]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is not currently collated centrally.

NHS Treatment (Eligibility)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the rules are on eligibility for NHS treatment for (a) students from EU countries and (b) other foreign students, broken down by (i) pre-16 years, (ii) 16 to 19 years and (iii) adult; and whether in each case charges are applicable. [35791]

Jane Kennedy: The rules on eligibility for free national health service hospital treatment were published in 'Implementing the Overseas Visitors Hospital Charging Regulations: Guidance for NHS Trust Hospitals in England' in April 2004. This document provides guidance on how to interpret the NHS (charges to overseas visitors) regulations 1989, as amended. It is available in the Library and on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/10/60/24/04106024.pdf.

It is these regulations which govern who is entitled to free NHS hospital treatment in England.

Nurses

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ensure that nurses are issued with more than three uniforms. [38242]

Jane Kennedy: The Department does not stipulate the number of uniforms that should be issued to nursing staff. It is for national health service trust chief executives to ensure that nurses have enough suitable clothing and equipment to carry out their work effectively.

The Department is currently undertaking a review of current uniform policy is under way which will clarify the expectations of NHS organisations and staff in terms of wearing, changing and laundering uniforms.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ensure that nursing staff uniforms can be laundered at a temperature high enough to destroy (a) MRSA and (b) other viruses. [38243]

Jane Kennedy: Health Service Guidance 95(18) sets out the arrangements for the handling and laundering of linen and states the importance of securing the disinfection of used and infected linen, including uniforms. The guidance recommends that a wash at 65 degrees Celsius (^{0}C) for not less than 10 minutes, or at 71^0 C for not less than three minutes, is more than adequate for uniforms. Most uniforms can be safely processed at this temperature; indeed white garments manufactured to a correct specification can safely be processed at 85^0 C provided a cool down facility is incorporated within the washing process.

In relation to washing uniforms at home, the advice from microbiologists is that a wash at a domestic clothes washer's temperature of 60^{0}C, followed by a rinse cycle, is more than adequate. The main point is the enormous dilution factor of the wash rather than the actual killing of the bacteria. The use of detergent will dislodge soil containing bacteria.

Health Service Guidance 95(18) is currently under review which will clarify the expectations of NHS organisations in terms of laundering uniforms. This work is being supported by scientific research, and will include recommendations on temperatures for washing uniforms and other linen.

Obesity

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list the organisations which she has invited to comment upon the draft Obesity Care Pathway; by when comments have been invited from those selected organisations; whether it is her intention that this document should reflect a consensus on the most effective treatment options; and when she intends openly to consult with the (a) wider scientific community, (b) commercial weight loss sector and (c) patient and practitioner organisations about the details of the draft pathway; [21080]

(2) what assessment she has made of the compatibility of the consultation process being followed in relation to the development of the Obesity Care Pathway with the principles set out in (a) the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Consultation and (b) the Code of Good Practice in Consultations and Policy Appraisal, supporting the Compact on Government's Relations with the Voluntary and Community Sector; and if she will make a statement. [21891]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 26 October 2005]: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence has been commissioned to prepare definitive guidance on the prevention, identification, management and treatment of obesity. This is expected to be published in February 2007, after full consultation. The Department's interim Obesity Care Pathway is intended for use by frontline health professionals in primary care to help manage patients who are overweight and/or obese. As part of the process of developing the draft Obesity Care Pathway, early drafts were shared with some interested stakeholders between September and November, to ascertain their views on how the care pathway might be implemented.

A consultation on the content is currently under way on a more advanced draft of the Obesity Care Pathway and related documents, and a draft weight loss guide. Consultees have been asked to respond by 3 January 2006.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance her Department issues to patient and public involvement forums on working with local authority overview and scrutiny committees. [37119]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 14 December 2005]: In June 2005, the Centre for Public Scrutiny published "Health overview and scrutiny committees and patient and public involvement forums: working together—a practical guide" in response to a request from the Department.

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 12 December 2005]: 307 patients' forum members participated in the Market and Opinion Research International poll on patient and public involvement in health. This was 35 per cent. of the total response.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have to change the role and structure of primary care trusts. [28600]

Mr. Byrne: As set out in "Commissioning a Patient Led NHS", primary care trusts (PCTs) will be required to strengthen their commissioning function. They will need to ensure access and choice to a range of high quality health services and to ensure that the Government's commitments to health, reducing health inequalities and health services are delivered for local people. They will also be required to manage contracts on behalf of their practices and public, engage with local people and other local service providers to ensure patients' views are properly heard, and to be responsible for emergency planning.

The policy, in relation to service-provision, is that this will be a matter for PCTs to determine locally. Any move away from direct provision of services will be a decision for the local national health service within the framework set out in the forthcoming White Paper and after local consultation, including staff.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of setting up primary care trusts in (a) England and (b) Durham under the Health Act 1999. [29438]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not hold information on the costs of setting up primary care trusts under the Health Act 1999.

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list each primary care trust with a budget deficit, in order of the size of deficit, indicating in each case the (a) unweighted budget allocation per person to the trust and (b) primary parliamentary constituency served by the trust. [32358]

Mr. Byrne: The table lists primary care trusts (PCTs) with deficits in 2004–05 in descending order of deficit size, showing their 2004–05 deficit, their 2004–05 allocation per unweighted head of population and the parliamentary constituency where the majority of their population is resident. PCT allocations increased by £4.6 billion in 2005–06 to 9.3 percent. extra for the two years, 2006–07 and 2007–08, PCTs have been allocated a further £11.5 billion, a further 19.5 percent. increase.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which Essex primary care trusts will have their final funding for the current financial year reduced against initial allocation; and where reallocated funding will be spent. [35810]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The following Essex primary care trusts will have their 2005–06 initial allocations reduced by the amounts indicated:

	£ million
Witham, Braintree and Halstead Care Trust	3.148
Maldon and South Chelmsford Primary Care Trust (PCT)	1.492
Thurrock PCT	0.227
Chelmsford PCT	7.137

The reductions are necessary to recover overspends which occurred in these organisations in the 2004–05 financial year. This funding will be returned to those national health service organisations delivering under spends in 2004–05.

Pro-choice

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether the letter she sent to the pro-choice meeting chaired by Baroness Gould on 26 October represents Government policy; if she will place a copy of the letter in the Library; and if she will make a statement; [32747]

(2) what discussions she had with (a) ministerial colleagues and (b) officials in her Department before sending her letter to the pro-choice meeting chaired by Baroness Gould on 26 October; and if she will make a statement; [32748]

(3) for what reasons she sent a letter to the pro-choice meeting chaired by Baroness Gould on 26 October; and if she will make a statement. [34291]

Caroline Flint: The letter was sent in response to an invitation to attend the abortion rights public meeting "Defend the limit—Defend a woman's right to choose", held at the House of Lords on 26 October 2005. The letter, which was sent by a departmental official on 14 October 2005, stated

> "Unfortunately, due to pressure on her diary the Secretary of State is unable to attend. She has asked me to pass on her apologies."

Psychiatry (Waiting Times)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time was to see a psychiatrist in Coventry South in the last 12 months. [38766]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The table shows the estimated average waiting time from general practitioner written referral to first outpatient appointment with a consultant psychiatrist within Coventry primary care trust (PCT) between September 2004 to September 2005 (provider based).

	Median wait (weeks)
September 2004	5.9
December 2004	4.5
March 2005	6.0
June 2005	5.4
September 2005	6.3

Notes:
1. Due to small numbers, the calculation of the median wait is prone to fluctuation at PCT and strategic health authority level. Care should be taken when interpreting these figures.
2. Waiting times apply to consultant-led appointments only. Services in many areas are now run by multi-disciplinary teams.

Public Appointments Annual Report

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish an up to date edition of the Public Appointments annual report. [36571]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Secretary of State has delegated the majority of her appointments functions to the National Health Service Appointments Commission. The commission intends to make information about the public appointments it makes available on its website www.appointments.org.uk in the early spring next year.

Retinopathy Programmes

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to ensure the delivery of independent and external quality assurance of local retinopathy programmes. [36070]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 8 December 2005]: Quality assurance is an integral part of all screening programmes. Quality assurance standards have been developed and piloted by the UK National Screening Committee's national screening programme for sight threatening retinopathy. A full list of the quality assurance standards can be found on the National Screening Programme's website at: www.nscretinopathy.org.uk. Screening programme managers are responsible for ensuring that programmes meet overall quality requirements. Strategic health authorities are responsible for ensuring action is taken on quality assurance recommendations.

RU-486

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment her Department has made of the safety of the RU-486 abortion drug; and if she will make a statement. [34213]

Jane Kennedy: As with all marketed medicines, the safety of mifepristone, an antiprogestogenic steroid that is used for the medical termination of intra-uterine pregnancy, is continuously monitored by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA).

Mifepristone was first authorised in the United Kingdom as a prescription only medicine for use under specialist care in July 1991. This followed advice from the then Committee on Safety of Medicines. Since 1991, the safety of mifepristone has been monitored through review of reports of suspected adverse drug reactions and through periodic safety reports submitted by the manufacturer. Following new advice from the US FDA, where this product is used in combination with another medicine that is not licensed for this purpose in the UK, serious adverse reactions, including cases of serious bacterial infection, associated with mifepristone have been reviewed. The regulatory authorities within Europe, including the UK, did not identify any new safety issues as a consequence of this review.

As with all marketed medicines, the MHRA will continue to monitor the safety of Mifegyne and will take any action to ensure patient safety is maintained.

Rural Pharmacies

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to assist and secure the future of rural pharmacies. [37266]

Jane Kennedy: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 24 October 2005, Official Report, column 188–89W.

Secondments

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are on secondment from other organisations to her Department; and which organisations they have been seconded from in each case. [34223]

Jane Kennedy: There are currently 49 staff on secondment or loan into the Department.

The Department's human resource system does not show where a person has been seconded to or from.

Sick Leave

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of her Department's employees who are within one year of the official retirement age are on extended sick leave. [32598]

Jane Kennedy: There are currently two departmental employees, who are within one year of the official retirement age, on extended sick leave.

Situation Reports

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many situation reports have been delivered to her Department from local NHS bodies in each of the last five years; what the frequency of such reports was; and what issues were covered. [24521]

Mr. Byrne: Daily Situation Reports (SitReps) are collected from acute trusts on weekdays during the winter months on an exception basis. They are required if any of the following operational problems occur:

- Accident and Emergency (A&E) closures
- A&E diversions
- Trolley waits of over 12 hours
- Urgent operations cancelled for the second or subsequent time
- Non-medical critical care transfers out of an approved critical care transfer group
- Unplanned reductions in elective workload because of pressures and
- Difficulties with ambulance queuing.

Weekly SitReps currently cover the following topics:

- A&E attendances
- Time spent in A&E
- Wait from decision to admit to admission
- Emergency admissions
- Cancelled operations
- Delayed transfers of care
- Beds available and occupied
- Non-medical critical care transfers and
- Ambulance calls responded to.

The number of SitReps collected in each of the last five years is shown in the table.

	Daily SitReps	Weekly SitReps
2000–01	116	31
2001–02	67	53
2002–03	71	52
2003–04	90	52
2004–05	96	53

Smoking

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the proportion of smokers are aged (a) 16 and under, (b) 17 to 24, (c) 25 to 30, (d) 31 to 40 and (e) over 40 years, broken down by sex; and what the equivalent figures were in (i) 1976, (ii) 1979, (iii) 1983, (iv) 1987, (v) 1992, (vi) 1997 and (vii) 2000. [36178]

Caroline Flint: The information is not available in the form requested.

Estimates of the prevalence of smoking among adults aged 16 and over are obtained from the general household survey. Although the GHS covers Great Britain, the data presented here are for England only.

Data on smoking among young people are available from a series of surveys of secondary school children in years seven-11, mainly aged 11–15.

The available information is presented in three tables, using the results of the general household survey 1980 to 2003 and Smoking, drinking and drug use among young people in England in 2004.

Note:
In 2000, weighting to compensate for non-response was introduced to the GHS. This is described in detail in the 2000 report. The effect of weighting on the smoking data is slight, increasing the estimated overall prevalence by one percentage point.

The unweighted base for 2003 is of similar size to the unweighted base for earlier years. In 2000, weighting to compensate for non-response was introduced to the GHS. This is described in detail in the 2000 report. The effect of weighting on the smoking data is slight, increasing the estimated overall prevalence by one percentage point.

3. A regular smoker is defined as usually smoking at least one cigarette a week

Smoking, drinking and drug use among young people in England in 2004 (Health and Social Care Information Centre)

We are not able to give the 'proportion of smokers' but are able to supply the 'prevalence of smoking' for particular years and age ranges.

Table 1. We have been able to provide prevalence data for ages 17–24, 25–30, 21–40, over 40 and all adults aged 17 and over, for years 1992, 2000 and 2003 using the general household survey. We have been unable to provide data for the above age groups for years 1976, 1979, 1983 and 1987.

Table 2. As we have been unable to provide all years requested in the PQ, we have included smoking prevalence (based on GHS tables) for a range of other years (1980, 1982, 1984, 1986, 1988, 1990, 1992, 1994, 1996, 1998, 2000, 2001, 2002 and 2003). However, this is not readily available in the age groups requested. Instead the data is grouped by those aged 16–19, 20–24, 25–34, 35–49, 50–59, 60 and over and all ages 16 and over.

We have not included adult data prior to 1980 as this is only available at Great Britain level and not for England.

Table 3. The PQ asks for data on those aged under 16. The closest smoking prevalence data for children we are able to provide is for pupils in school years seven-11, where the majority of students will be aged 11–15. However, the only exact year that we can provide data, for is 1992 and 2000. Nonetheless, we have provided prevalence figures in close proximity to the years requested (1982, 1984, 1986, 1988, 1990, 1992, 1993, 1994, 1996, 1998, 2000, 2001, 2002, 2003 and 2004).

The first survey of secondary school children was conducted in 1982, hence the absence of earlier prevalence data.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions (a) Ministers and (b) officials had with (i) Action on Smoking and Health and (ii) FOREST about part I of the Health Bill; and if she will make a statement. [36182]

Caroline Flint: Since publication of the Health Bill on 27 October 2005 there have been no formal discussions with Action on Smoking and Health or FOREST at either ministerial level or official level.

However, both organisations responded to the public consultation on the smokefree elements of the Bill, which was held between 20 June and 5 September 2005.

An analysis has been published and is available in the Library.

Staff Uniforms

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to reduce the laundry turn-around time at hospitals and the risks of cross infection in homes and hospitals caused by hospital staff laundering uniforms at home. [35262]

Jane Kennedy: National health service trusts management are required to adopt procedures that ensure that patients and staff are not put at risk of infection from used and infected linen. It is also their responsibility to establish with their laundry provider appropriate performance measures.

The decision as to whether nurses' uniforms are laundered through the hospital laundry services, or whether nurses wash their uniforms themselves, is made locally.

Advice and guidance on hospital laundry arrangements was issued to NHS trusts in "Health Service Guidance HSG (95)18". This sets out the arrangements for the handling and laundering of linen and states the importance of securing the disinfection of used and infected linen, including uniforms. This guidance is being reviewed to ensure it reflects current research evidence.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many statutory instruments introduced by her Department had to be (a) withdrawn, (b) amended by a further statutory instrument and (c) reprinted because of defective drafting in each session since 1997; and what steps she (i) is taking and (ii) plans to take to prevent further such instances. [34530]

Jane Kennedy: Information is not available in the format requested. The information in the table gives the number of statutory instruments (SI) issued free of charge because of an error or defect in an earlier instrument.

	Number of SIs
1997–98	4
1998–99	4
1999–2000	6
2000–01	1
2001–02	4
2002–03	4
2003–04	7
2004–05	3

We have identified one occasion when an instrument was withdrawn. This was in the 2004–05 parliamentary Session. The Department lays in the order of 150 SIs a year and any errors are regretted. We have a range of measures in place to provide expert advice and training to lawyers and officials involved in the process and aim to ensure that lessons are learned.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what training is given to (a) policy officials and (b) lawyers in her Department responsible for drafting statutory instruments; and if she will make a statement. [34531]

Jane Kennedy: Statutory Instruments (SIs) are drafted by departmental lawyers based on instructions from policy divisions. Where SIs amend primary legislation, parliamentary counsel are consulted.

As members of the Government Legal Service (GLS), departmental lawyers receive extensive training on the preparation and drafting of statutory instruments. This consists of a combination of lectures and practical exercises run by experienced practitioners in the GLS, coupled with training given by legal advisers who advise the parliamentary scrutiny committees. In addition, senior managers in the GLS take a close interest in the quality of SIs and provide frequent feedback and on the job training to those with lead responsibility for drafting. This is an ongoing process and part of the continuing education of Government legal advisers.

Strategic Health Authorities

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what capital allocations she expects to be made available to the Shropshire and Staffordshire strategic health authority over the next three years; and for what purpose each allocation will be made. [32009]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No decisions have yet been made on national health service capital allocations for 2006–07 onwards.

The last round of capital allocations was announced in January 2003, covering 2003–04, 2004–05 and 2005–06.

Temporary Staff

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many temporary staff were employed by her Department in each year since 1997. [35199]

Jane Kennedy: The figures requested are published in civil service statistics. Table A in civil service statistics covers permanent and temporary staff numbers on a full-time equivalent basis in the Department. Civil service statistics are available in the Library and on the Cabinet Office statistics website at:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_of_the_civil_service/statistics/civil_service_statics/index.asp

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will break down the number of (a) agency staff, (b) contractors and (c) consultants currently employed within the Department by (i) pay band and (ii) length of contract. [36919]

Jane Kennedy: The information is not collected centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Velcade

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what progress has been made in the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence review of the drug Velcade; [37786]

(2) what guidance she has issued to primary care trusts concerning the use of the drug Velcade for the treatment of myeloma. [37787]

Jane Kennedy: Preparatory work on the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) appraisal of Velcade has commenced. Velcade is one of the five drugs in the first tranche of appraisals in NICE'S single topic appraisal process. The first guidance from this new process is expected to be published in mid 2006.

In 1999, the Department issued Health Service Circular 1999/176, which asks national health service bodies to continue with local arrangements for the managed introduction of new technologies where guidance from NICE has not yet been issued. These arrangements should include an assessment of the available evidence.

Waiting Times

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average length of time was to make an appointment with a general practitioner in North Yorkshire in the last period for which figures are available. [35453]

Mr. Byrne: The requested data are not collected or held centrally. Since 2001, data have been collected each month from primary care trusts and general practitioners (GPs) on the availability of access to a GP. These data show whether access is or is not available in line with 'The NHS Plan' target that patients should be able to be seen within 48 hours but do not provide information on actual waiting times. In November in North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolnshire strategic health authority, primary care trusts reported that 100 per cent. of patients were able to be offered a GP consultation within two working days.

Walsgrave Hospital

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions her Department has had with the chief executive of Walsgrave hospital regarding its predicted monetary shortfall in 2005–06. [38164]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not discussed the matter with the chief executive of University hospitals Coventry and Warwickshire National Health Service Trust. It is the responsibility of strategic health authorities (SHAs) to deliver both overall financial balance for their local health communities and to ensure each and every body achieves financial balance. This is now a matter for West Midlands South SHA.

X-ray Equipment

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of NHS X-ray equipment was (a) condemned and (b) repaired in 2004–05. [33604]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is not held centrally.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Education Services

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which of the local authorities referred to in the answer of 11 November 2003, Official Report, columns 217–1W, subsequently employed private contractors or partners to deliver education services. [38998]

Jacqui Smith: The following authorities have all been directed to outsource some or most of their education functions to a private contractor as a result of independent inspection evidence of failure of those services. Other authorities may have chosen to employ private contractors or partners to deliver some of their education services, but have not been required to do so. We expect local authorities to take responsibility for improving their own services, and would not intervene and direct a particular solution unless the authority demonstrates it is unable to do so.

Bradford (directed in 2001)

Hackney (directed in 1999 and 2002)

Haringey (directed in 2001)

Isles of Scilly (directed in 2004)

Islington (directed in 2000)

Leeds (directed in 2001)

North East Lincolnshire (directed in 2005)

Southwark (directed in 2001 and 2003)

Swindon (directed in 2002)

Walsall (directed in 1999 and 2002)

Waltham Forest (directed in 2001)

Employer Training Pilots

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 601W, what criteria she uses to decide whether information in relation to the employer training pilots should be treated as commercial-in-confidence. [36392]

Phil Hope: Decisions about the learning required by individual employers taking part in the employer training pilots are reached after discussions with skills brokers and help with identifying and assessing the training needs of low-skilled employees. As such decisions are business-related, we feel it is not appropriate to give information about the training and funding received by individual employers participating in ETP without first obtaining permission to do so from each employer. As of the end of November 2005, 26,434 employers had participated in employer training pilots.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many meetings of the EU (a) Coordination Group to promote uniformity of application of the general system for the recognition of higher education diplomas (first general system) and (b) Advisory Committee on medical training have taken place during the UK presidency of the EU; who presided over each meeting; what other UK representatives were present; what provision was made for representation of the devolved governments; and if she will make a statement. [38782]

Jacqui Smith: No meetings of the Coordination Group (first general system) or the Advisory Committee on medical training were held during the UK presidency.

Examination Results

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) A-level and (b) GCSE results for each school in Doncaster North constituency were in each year since 1995; and what the average results were for all schools in (i) Doncaster North, (ii) Yorkshire and (iii) England. [35680]

Jacqui Smith: The data requested up to 2004 can be found in the following tables, 2005 data has not been provided as school and constituency level data is not yet available.

4. 1995 figures for Yorkshire are not available because some schools in Yorkshire were under the control of the then Humberside local education authority which was reorganised in 1996.

Foundation Schools

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research her Department has conducted on the impact on other local schools of the admissions procedures of foundation schools. [36894]

Jacqui Smith: We are analysing existing data to examine the relationship, if any, between admission authority status of school and levels of social segregation. This work is not yet complete. The results will be made available when it is complete.

Gifted/Talented Pupils

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the benefits to pupils in Worcestershire of membership of the academy for gifted and talented pupils. [39126]

Jacqui Smith: The National Academy for Gifted and Talented Youth (NAGTY) currently has 925 members in Worcestershire. Members can participate in NAGTY activities including e-learning, summer schools and outreach events. Full details of NAGTY's services to student members may be found on their website at www.nagty.ac.uk/student_ academy/index.aspx.

Feedback to NAGTY from its members suggests that those who participate fully receive the greatest benefits. Members report improved motivation and ability to meet challenges leading to increased aspiration and improved self esteem. This has been endorsed by independent evaluations of NAGTY summer schools by Ofsted and by Cedar, the research body based at the university of Warwick. My Department will be commissioning a full, external evaluation of NAGTY services during 2006.

Herefordshire Council

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding has been awarded to Herefordshire council to provide for new buildings in each school in Herefordshire in each of the last three years; how much was awarded in each case; if she will make a statement. [38925]

Jacqui Smith: Funding awarded to Herefordshire council to provide for new buildings and other capital works in each school in Herefordshire in each of the last three years is set out in the following table, to the nearest £0.1 million:

	£ million
2003–04	27.6
2004–05	8.4
2005–06	8.7

The figure of £27.6 million in 2003–04 includes an allocation of £19.5 million for a PFI building scheme.

No records are held centrally on how much is being spent on new buildings in each school. This is because expenditure on each school, and between new building and other capital works, is determined by the local authority in accordance with priorities set out in the local asset management plan.

Learning and Skills Council

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 124W, on Learning and Skills Council, whether "further savings" means savings within the projected administration budgets for 2006–07 and 2007–08; and in what circumstances these savings (i) would and (ii) would not be released to the sector. [35736]

Bill Rammell: The LSC is currently consulting on the detail of its restructuring exercise which will result in savings in administration costs. I expect that these savings will start to become available from 2007–08. Once the consultation is completed my department and the LSC will agree where these savings should be directed to meet our priorities and a full profile for the release of savings.

Literacy Teaching

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whom she has asked to carry out the review of the framework for teaching literacy; which experts have been invited to submit evidence to this review; how many responses she has received to the Department's consultation on the review; and whether the recommendations of the Rose review will be adopted by the framework for teaching literacy. [38606]

Jacqui Smith: The Primary National Strategy has been asked to renew and update its framework for the teaching of literacy.

A period of informal consultation is currently under way. Discussions are being held with consultancy groups drawn from national samples of head teachers, teachers, local authority representatives, subject and professional organisations and higher education institutions. A consultation forum has been set up on the DfES website. To date, well over 100 contributors have taken part in consultancy group discussions and the website consultation forum has had 14 contributions posted on it, some of which are from local authorities feeding back comments from their meetings with local teachers.

The Strategy will continue to hold discussions with experts across the English community to elicit their views on proposed content and structure of the revised framework and will post documentation on the website for wider comment. After Easter 2006, a draft revised framework will be published for more formal consultation. The Secretary of State made clear when she announced the Rose review and the renewal of the literacy framework in June 2005 that the findings of the Rose review would inform the development of the revised framework.

National Employer Training Programme

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 601W, on the National Employer Training Programme, how many employees participated in the employer training pilots in each local learning and skills council area involved in (a) 2002–03, (b) 2003–04 and (c) 2004–05. [38121]

Phil Hope: Employer Training Pilots (ETP) were introduced in September 2002 to encourage employers to invest in skills and qualifications, particularly for low skilled employees.

Pilots have been running since September 2002 in the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) areas of Birmingham and Solihull, Derbyshire, Essex, Greater Manchester, Tyne and Wear and Wiltshire and Swindon. From September 2003, six additional pilots have been running in Berkshire, East London, Kent, Leicester, Shropshire and South Yorkshire. From September 2004, additional pilots have been running in Black Country, Cambridgeshire, Devon and Cornwall, Lancashire, West Yorkshire, and Northumberland, County Durham and Tees Valley joined the Tyne and Wear pilot to create a whole region pilot.

The numbers of learners starts in each local Learning and Skills Council area involved were:

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many convictions there have been for child abuse at nurseries in each of the last 10 years. [37050]

Paul Goggins: I have been asked to reply.

It is not possible from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform, to identify those offenders convicted for child abuse at nurseries, as the circumstances of an offence are not centrally collected.

Out-of-classroom Educational Experiences

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to increase financial support for high quality out-of-classroom educational experiences; and if she will make a statement. [39233]

Jacqui Smith: The consultation on the Education outside the Classroom Manifesto, which endorses all pupils having the opportunity for high quality out-of-classroom educational experiences, will finish at the end of January 2006. The 10 working groups will make proposals for action early next year. No decisions have yet been made on funding.

Parent Support Advisers

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the piloting of new parent support advisers referred to in paragraph 1.23 of the pre-Budget report; and what their intended role is. [38712]

Jacqui Smith: The pre-Budget report announced £20 million to support the piloting of a new school-based outreach role—parent school advisers—in over 600 primary and secondary schools in the most deprived areas. These advisers will offer early preventative support for children and families where there are signs that they could benefit from additional help. Parent school advisers will work with families to identify the most effective support for them. This might include a parenting programme, mentoring for the parent of child, or one-to-one tuition for the child.

We also want to use the pilots to consider the most effective means of enabling parent school advisers to have sufficient leverage over, and ensure delivery of, the additional services children and their families might need.

School Meals

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) primary and (b) secondary schools had more than 20 per cent. of pupils entitled to free school meals in the last year for which figures are available; and what this represents as a percentage of the total number of schools in each sector. [38941]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is shown in the table.

School Standards and Framework Act

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the operation of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998. [37778]

Jacqui Smith: The School Standards and Framework Act 1998 has had a very significant impact. In 1997, a third of children left primary schools without having mastered the basics in English and maths. Now three-quarters achieve in maths and even more in English. Many 5 to 7-year-olds were in classes of more than 30. That experience is a thing of the past.

There have been sustained and substantial improvements in attainment at 14,16 and 18. There are many fewer failing schools. In 1998, 616 secondary schools secured 5 A*-Cs at GCSE for fewer than 25 per cent. of their pupils. Now that figure is 131. These achievements are important but we must now go further. Our White Paper "Higher Standards, Better Schools For All" sets out our plans to do so.

Schools (Fire Risks)

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she plans to publish the findings of the public consultation on building bulletin 100, "Designing and Managing Against the Risk of Fires in Schools". [39344]

Jacqui Smith: Public consultation on the draft guidance Building Bulletin 100 (BB 100), "Designing and Managing Against the Risk of Fire in Schools", concluded on 18 November 2005. An analysis of the responses to the consultation is under way and we expect to publish the findings on the Department's website by 31 March 2006. We anticipate publishing the final, agreed version of BB 100 in the summer of 2006.

Schools White Paper

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the Schools White Paper, if she will ensure that local authorities will in future be able to provide services to (a) community schools, (b) trust schools, (c) foundation schools, (d) academies, (e) voluntary-controlled schools and (f) voluntary-aided schools. [38389]

Jacqui Smith: Local authorities will retain their ability to offer services to all categories of maintained schools and academies under the White Paper proposals.

Skills for Life

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of (a) the Skills for Life programme and (b) the report of the Adult Learning Inspectorate on the programme. [36731]

Phil Hope: The Adult Learning Inspectorate Chief Inspector's report published on 7 December highlighted the need to improve the quality of adult basic skills provision. The Department is already tackling the issues raised through a coherent Quality Initiative which includes teaching training, workforce development and initiatives which will increase the quality of teaching and learning. This will form part of the Quality Improvement Strategy lead by the Quality Improvement Agency. Recent ALI and Ofsted reports have highlighted improvements in quality, eg improved diagnostic assessment and better use of teaching and learning materials. The number of unsatisfactory or weak inspections in further education colleges has halved in the last year. Two colleges have now been awarded beacon status for Skills for Life.

Since the launch of the strategy in 2001, 3.7 million learners have taken up 7.8 million learning opportunities, and 1,130,000 of these learners went on to achieve at least one first literacy, language or numeracy qualification. We are on track to meet our PSA target to help 2.25 million learners achieve qualifications by 2010.

A report by the National Audit Office, published December 2004, reported that > "The Department has led the development of lasting improvements in literacy, language and numeracy learning. There are more ways for people to improve their skills and the Department has raised awareness by advertising and working with other Government Departments to reach their clients".

Spin-off Companies

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of the effects on the UK economy of spin-off companies from English universities. [36203]

Barry Gardiner: I have been asked to reply.

For the years 1999 to 2003 the total number of spin-outs from English universities is 726. There was an initial huge increase though this has now levelled off, and in the 2002–03 year, the number of spin-outs reported was 158.

Spin-out companies from English universities have reported £252 million in turnover and over 10,000 FTE staff, in 2002–03.

In the past two years, 20 spin-outs from UK universities have floated on stock exchanges in the UK and USA, with a combined IPO value of over £1 billion.

This information is gathered by University Companies Organisation on a UK- wide basis, and the England only figures, are not easily obtainable.

Teachers' TV Channel

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average hourly cost of providing programming on the Teachers' TV channel has been since its launch. [38691]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 19 December 2005]: Teachers' TV was successfully launched on 8 February 2005. It aims to help raise standards in classrooms by helping to share good practice, support continuing professional development, offer classroom resources, and provide education news and information.

The channel has a high 'repeat rate' where the same hours programming is broadcast a number of times within the schedule. The average cost for each commissioned programming hour is £2,819.

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much has been spent on the Teachers' TV channel since its launch. [38692]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 19 December 2005]: Teachers' TV was successfully launched on 8 February 2005. It aims to help raise standards in classrooms by helping to share good practice, support continuing professional development, offer classroom resources, and provide education news and information.

Since its launch, the Department has spent £17.8million on Teachers TV.

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average hourly viewing figures for Teachers' TV have been in each month since its launch. [38693]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 19 December 2005]: We currently estimate that 240,000 households watch Teachers TV on a monthly basis. Of these, almost 90,000 are from the school work force. At least 637,000 people watched Teachers' TV (on digital TV) between launch and the end of July 2005. Channel viewers watch 40 to 50 minutes on average (which equates to roughly three programmes that can help support their continuing professional development) each week.

Trust Schools

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what arrangements she plans to put in place to dispose of the assets of a trust school if such a school should close; [38056]

(2) whether assets will be transferred from local authority control to the control of a trust when a trust school is set up. [38061]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 19 December 2005]: I can confirm that all land and buildings held by a local authority for the purposes of a school becoming a trust school would normally transfer to and vest in the trust. The trustees would need to notify the school's maintaining local authority if they wished to dispose of any non-playing field land and, in the case of playing field land, they would need to obtain the prior consent of the Secretary of State for Education and Skills before disposing, or changing the use, of such land.

The existing arrangements that deal with land issues when a foundation or voluntary school closes will also apply to trust schools. They will require the trustees of a closing trust school to apply to the Secretary of State for Education and Skills to exercise her powers and direct that the land either be returned to the local authority or to pay her or the authority the whole or part of the value of the land. Where the discontinuance of a trust school is connected with proposals for the establishment of a new school she may direct that the land transfer to and vest in the governing body or trustees of the new school.

Union Modernisation Fund

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what changes in funding to the Union Modernisation Fund have been proposed as a result of priorities for success. [35612]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I have been asked to reply.

None.

WorldSkills Competition

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how the Government plan to prepare for the UK WorldSkills bid. [39310]

Phil Hope: The preparation work for the bid is already well advanced, and is being shared between the UK Government and skills partners in the business, voluntary and public sectors. This will help to build an enduring social partnership which will promote a higher level of skills investment across the UK as an important legacy effect. A national coalition of skills partners, including the Learning and Skills Council (LSC), Sector Skills Development Agency (SSDA), Confederation of British Industry (CBI), Investors in People UK (IiP UK), the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) and the devolved Administrations, is working hard to secure the funding we need.

We have put in place a Project Board and a UK-wide steering group chaired by myself to manage the bid process. At its first meeting on 7 December, the steering group endorsed the partnership approach as the best way forward and approved the plans for the Pre-Qualification Visit in January.

In January a team from the WorldSkills Executive Board will visit us to validate our Expression of Interest against their essential criteria for hosting the event. If these criteria are met, we will be invited to submit a full bid. Our task will be to showcase the best that London can offer and convince the WorldSkills assessors that we mean business. We will then work with the LSC, the SSDA, IiP UK, UK Skills and the devolved Administrations to submit a full bid by 31 March 2006.

Our bid will eventually be presented to the WorldSkills Council in Melbourne in May, where we will find ourselves competing against France, Sweden and Australia. If successful, we will then build the national organisation and funding model we need to deliver the event.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations she has received on the UK's bid to host the 2011 WorldSkills Competition. [38713]

Phil Hope: The Expression of Interest that we submitted to WorldSkills in September included letters of "in principle" support from Allan Wilson (Deputy Minister for Enterprise and Lifelong Learning, Scottish Executive) and Angela Smith MP (Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Employment and Learning, Northern Ireland). We have also received written "in principle" support from Jane Davidson, the Minister for Education and Lifelong Learning, Welsh Assembly, as well as letters from Sir Digby Jones, Director General of the CBI, Brendan Barber, General Secretary of the TUC, Sir Roy Gardner, Chief Executive of Centrica plc, and Garry Hawkes, Chair of Edge. Discussions are also on-going with various bodies to provide sponsorship (both in cash and in kind) for the bid as well as the event itself, should we be successful. These include the Corporation of London, City & Guilds, the Honda Institute, and various media organisations.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what skills areas she has identified for targeting in the 2011 WorldSkills Competition, should the UK win the bid. [38714]

Phil Hope: The UK put forward 18 competitors at the 2005 WorldSkills competition in Helsinki. In 2011 we aim to field a full team comprising over 40 competitors in skills ranging from welding and autobody repair, to beauty therapy and restaurant service. We will use the Japan 2007 and Canada 2009 competitions to build our capacity to do this. By 2011 we hope to have a pool of young people trained to a world class standard from which to select the UK team.

If our bid for 2011 is successful we will also be able to showcase a number of "demonstration skills" reflecting our developing skills priorities as the host nation. Discussions about these priorities are still at an early stage, as we have yet to submit our bid, but current ideas include customer service, dance (traditional, modern and ethnic based), IT skills for use in the City, or updated versions of traditional skills (i.e. construction skills). Our final choice will not be made until 2007–09.

CABINET OFFICE

Ministerial Car Fleet

Chris Grayling: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many vehicles are in the ministerial car fleet, broken down by type of fuel used. [39253]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The responsibility for the provision of ministerial cars and drivers has been delegated under the terms of the framework document to the Government Car Despatch Agency. I have asked its chief executive Mr Roy Burke to write to the hon. Member. Copies of his letter will be placed in the Library.

Parliamentary Questions

Greg Clark: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in what circumstances Ministers may cease to answer parliamentary questions concerning the performance of a particular public service institution when its status has changed as a result of public sector reforms. [38168]

Mr. Jim Murphy: In accordance with Section 1 of the ministerial code, Ministers have a duty to Parliament to account, and be held to account, for the policies, decisions and actions of their departments and agencies.

WALES

2012 Olympics

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with (a) the Welsh Assembly Government, (b) the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport and (c) the Disability Rights Commission on the impact of the 2012 London Olympics and Paralympics on Wales; and if he will make a statement. [37611]

Mr. Hain: I regularly discuss matters affecting Wales both with Cabinet colleagues and with Ministers in the Welsh Assembly Government. This has included the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic games.

I have had no discussions on these matters with the Disability Rights Commission (DRC). However, the DRC has been involved in the preparations for the Games through their membership of London 2012's London Disability Organisations Forum.

The Government are committed to ensuring that the huge economic, sporting and social benefits of the 2012 games are spread across the whole of the UK, and I intend, along with Ministers in the Welsh Assembly Government, to ensure that we in Wales can maximise those benefits.

The games will provide an outstanding showcase for disabled sport—both in Britain and abroad. The UK was a pioneer in disabled sport, with London hosting the first ever Paralympic games in 1948.

Aerospace Industry

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what financial support his Department has provided to help the growth of the aerospace industry in Wales since 1997. [39130]

Nick Ainger: None.

Ancient Woodlands

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the Welsh Assembly Government on the protection of ancient woodlands in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [38343]

Mr. Hain: I meet the First Minister regularly to discuss a range of issues, including forestry matters in Wales.

"Woodlands for Wales", published in 2001, sets out the Assembly Government's strategy for the sustainable management of woodlands in Wales for the next 50 years. The strategy includes commitments on the conservation of trees and woodlands. Specific actions underpinning those commitments in respect of protection of ancient woodlands are set out in the Forestry Commission Wales Corporate Plan for the period 2006–06–2007–08, a copy of which is on the Assembly Government website.

In July this year, the Assembly Government announced a £2.3 million project to restore ancient woodlands in Wales.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was spent on external consultants and advisers by his Department in each year since May 1997. [39095]

Mr. Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Hemel Hempstead (Mike Penning) on 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2068W.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was spent on advertising by his Department in each year since May 1997. [39097]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office was established in July 1999 and there were no payments on advertising during July 1999 and June 2003.

In June 2003 the Wales Office became a separate entity within the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA).

We have adopted the DCA corporate policy for advertising and since this period, the Wales Office has made no payment on advertising.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many widescreen televisions have been purchased by his Department for use in London Headquarters in each of the last five years; and what the cost was in each year. [39147]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office has purchased no widescreen televisions.

Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether a Minister in his Department is planned to be nominated to take responsibility for liaison with the Office for Disability Issues; and if he will make a statement. [37083]

Mr. Hain: My hon. Friend, the Minister for Disabled People (Mrs McGuire), has overall responsibility for the Office for Disability Issues (ODI). She chairs a cross-government steering group which includes ministerial representatives from the Department of Health, Department for Education and Skills, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, Department for Transport, and Department of Trade and Industry. My Hon Friend, the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State (Nick Ainger) will take responsibility for Wales Office liaison with the ODI.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the initial activity undertaken by his Department in response to those recommendations in the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report, Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People, where lead responsibility was assigned to all Government Departments. [37084]

Mr. Hain: The Strategy Unit's report "Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People" focuses on four key aspects of disabled people's life chances and includes a number of recommendations for all Government Departments. Many of the recommendations relate to services which are the responsibility of the National Assembly in Wales. In exercising its functions, the Assembly is under a statutory duty to have due regard to the principle of equality of opportunity for all people.

While my Department is not directly responsible for the delivery of services, we have recently undertaken a number of measures to improve accessibility for disabled employees and visitors.

PR Companies

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the public relations companies that have had contracts with his Department since May 1997. [39096]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office was established in July 1999. The Wales Office has had no contracts with any public relations companies.

Rail Passenger Access

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on rail passenger access for disabled travellers (a) in Wales and (b) at Port Talbot Parkway. [37623]

Mr. Hain: Arriva Trains Wales manage 235 stations and I understand that the majority are accessible for customers with disabilities, including wheelchairs. All Arriva trains are fitted with a ramp, and train crew receive training in how to respond to the needs of customers with disabilities. The company also operates a helpline which provides support and assistance to customers with disabilities.

At Port Talbot Parkway station, I understand that the eastbound platform is fully accessible to disabled travellers. Wheelchair users arriving at or departing from the westbound platform require staff assistance in opening a level crossing gate. Arriva advise customers to contact the helpline at least one day before travelling so that they can ensure every assistance can be given. However, the train company will aim to assist customers even where no notice is given.

Arriva are aware that the arrangements at Port Talbot Parkway are not wholly convenient for some passengers. They are currently undertaking an audit of disability access to all stations and, following this, they intend to consult disability groups on priorities for action.

NORTHERN IRELAND

2012 Olympics

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many individuals in Northern Ireland are in receipt of funding for preparation for the next Olympic games. [37596]

Mr. Hanson: Under the Recreation and Youth Services Order (Northern Ireland) 1986 the Sports Council for Northern Ireland (SCNI) is statutorily responsible for the development of Sport in Northern Ireland including the distribution of public funding to sport. At present two individuals in Northern Ireland are in receipt of funding from the SCNI directly in respect of preparation for the next Olympic games.

Anti-poverty Strategy

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 1974W, on the anti-poverty strategy, on what date the Anti-Poverty Strategy for Northern Ireland will be published. [38132]

Angela E. Smith: In Priorities and Budget 2006–08, published in December 2005, Government identify the resources they are allocating with the aim of reducing poverty and tackling social need in Northern Ireland. This includes increased spending in health and education budgets along with a significant allocation to two new "ring-fenced funds" which focus respectively on giving children and young people the best possible start in life and investing in skills and reducing economic inactivity.

Government will publish further details of their priorities for tackling poverty and social exclusion in the new year, alongside further details of how these new ring-fenced funds will be allocated.

Civil Servants

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many civil servants are employed in the Office of the First and Deputy First Ministers. [38589]

Angela E. Smith: As at 1 December 2005, there were 344 staff in post in the Department.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average sickness absence rate was among civil servants for each Government Department in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years; and what percentage of the sick leave was for periods of five working days or less. [38590]

Angela E. Smith: Sick absence statistics for the Northern Ireland Departments are analysed by financial year as opposed to calendar year. The information sought is readily available for the 11 Departments of the NI Administration and their agencies for the period 1999–2000 to 2004–05. Published statistics for Northern Ireland Departments for the financial years 2000–01 to 2004–05 are accessible on the Department's website at www.dfpni.gov.uk/publications.

The following tables detail:

1. The average number of days lost during the period 2000–01 to 2004–05 for the 11 Departments of the NI Administration and their agencies.

2. The percentage of the sick leave attributable to periods of five working days or less.

Farmers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many farmers in Northern Ireland have left the industry in each of the last 10 years. [38581]

Angela E. Smith: Information on the number of farmers in Northern Ireland is collected as part of the June Agricultural and Horticultural Census. For the purposes of the census, farmers are considered to be those individuals who are legally and financially responsible for the farm or who are responsible for the day-to-day management of the farm business. Business partners of the above are also considered farmers.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many farmers in Northern Ireland have been convicted of offences under cattle identification legislation in each of the last five years, broken down by constituency. [38582]

Angela E. Smith: The information requested is not held by parliamentary constituency, but is available by Divisional Veterinary Office (DVO) as follows:

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many farmers in Northern Ireland have received cattle bonus payments introduced under the Less Favoured Area Compensatory Allowances scheme, broken down by constituency. [38583]

Angela E. Smith: The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development does not hold subsidy details on a constituency basis. The number of farmers in Northern Ireland who have received a cattle bonus payment under the Less Favoured Area Compensatory Allowances (LFACA) scheme is as follows:

	Number of farmers
2004	10,748
2005	10,495

Invest Northern Ireland (Grant Criteria)

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria are used by Invest Northern Ireland to assess whether a grant application by (a) a large company and (b) a small or medium-sized enterprise is eligible for funding. [38949]

Angela E. Smith: Invest NI does not distinguish between projects brought forward by large companies and those from small and medium-sized enterprises (SME's).

A grant application for funding from Invest NI must satisfy the following criteria:

(i) Economic Efficiency—the project must generate a satisfactory economic return for both Northern Ireland and the UK economy as a whole;

(ii) Viability—the project must be self-sustaining having received funding on a once and for all basis, and

(iii) Additionality—there must be a genuine need for public funds to enable the project to proceed in the nature, scale and timing proposed by the promoter(s).

Minimum Wage

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many employers in Northern Ireland have been found to be paying employees less than the minimum wage. [38591]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The Inland Revenue started recording the information requested from April 2001 and can provide the following statistical data.

	Employers not complying
2001–02	244
2002–03	213
2003–04	218

Golfing Strategy

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he plans to publish the Golfing

Strategy for Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [38887]

Angela E. Smith: Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) commissioned a Golf Strategy for autumn 2005. Consultation is currently under way. Workshops and seminars were held with key stakeholders in October and November. The Draft Strategy is available from www.nitb.com. The final strategy is due to be released in early 2006.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what nominations are expected to be made to non-departmental public bodies in Northern Ireland within the next six months. [37807]

Angela E. Smith: In the next six months the Northern Ireland Administration and the Northern Ireland Office intend to invite nominations to some board positions on the non-departmental public bodies listed in the following table.

Name of public body	Name of nominating bodies
Eastern Health and Social Services Council	Belfast City Council Lisburn City Council
Laganside Corporation	Belfast Harbour Commissioners

Northern Ireland Ombudsman

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many treatment-related complaints have been made to the Northern Ireland Ombudsman by people suffering from (a) mental health-related illnesses and (b) general medical health-related illnesses in each health board area in Northern Ireland in the last five years; and how many and what percentage of those complaints have been upheld by the Ombudsman, broken down by health board area. [37281]

Angela E. Smith: I understand that the Northern Ireland Ombudsman has written to the hon. Gentleman. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library.

Secondments

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list secondments from Fujitsu Services to the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister in the last five years; what the (a) commencement and (b) completion date was in each case; and what the nature of the work undertaken was in each case. [38145]

Angela E. Smith: During the last five years, two individuals were seconded from Fujitsu to the eGovernment Unit (formerly known as the Central Information Technology Unit of Northern Ireland) within the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister.

Secondment 1

The secondment arrangement commenced on 1 December 2000 and was completed on 31 March 2002. The nature of the work was to assist with the development of eGovernment strategy.

Secondment 2

The secondment arrangement commenced on 15 August 2005 and is ongoing, although responsibility for the eGovernment Unit transferred to the Department of Finance and Personnel on 1 December 2005. The nature of the work is to assist with a number of projects designed to improve NI citizens' access to electronic information.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, how many students at each university in Northern Ireland come from countries from outside the European Union. [38952]

Angela E. Smith: The information is as follows.

Non-EU domiciled enrolments at Northern Ireland higher education institutions by institution: 2003-04

Teachers

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the merits of providing a scheme which will ensure that newly trained teachers in the Province can have a guaranteed full year of teaching after completing their training. [38622]

Angela E. Smith: The Depart ent of Education and the Department for Employme. d Learning have been carrying out a joint review o teacher education in Northern Ireland. Arising from that review, the Departments will be considering a number of options to provide greater continuity in professional development for teachers. This will also address the need for newly qualified teachers to have greater stability in employment during their early years of teaching.

Tourism

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with the Northern Ireland Tourist Board regarding the promotion and development of the tourism potential on the North Coast. [38748]

Angela E. Smith: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland is updated regularly regarding the promotion and development of the tourism potential on the North Coast through the Department of Enterprise Trade and Investment and the relevant Minister.

The development and promotion of the tourism potential on the North Coast is determined by the Strategic Framework for Action and the Causeway Coast and Glens Tourism Masterplan. A key recommendation is the implementation of the Causeway Coastal Route which will promote the tourism product on the North Coast. The Causeway Coastal Route has been identified as a primary promotional message to attract visitors to Northern Ireland and has been included in all marketing initiatives for 2006 including:

international television advertising international press advertising public relations etc.

The Northern Ireland Tourist Board is committed to working with strategic partners and tourism providers to develop an internationally competitive and sustainable tourism product on the North Coast.

Victoria Square

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total tonnage of demolition and excavation waste removed from the Victoria Square development in Belfast is; and where the demolition and excavation waste was removed to. [38592]

Angela E. Smith: Businesses are not obliged to submit records to the Department of the Environment but under Duty of Care legislation must retain documents relating to the waste produced.

Contractors are also obliged under Duty of Care legislation to ensure that all waste is disposed of to an authorised facility.

As the Department does not hold this information, the collation of such could be obtained only at disproportionate costs.

Water Service

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much and what percentage of the regional rate has been made up of the costs of (a) water supply to (i) domestic customers and (ii) other water supply customers and (b) sewage treatment in each of the last five years. [38561]

Angela E. Smith: The regional rate is an un-hypothecated tax, and the amount raised in any year is not linked to, or determined by, the underlying cost of any particular service.

Work Force Statistics

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the composition of the monitored full-time work force (11+) was in (a) 1994 and (b) 2004, broken down by religious designation; and if he will publish this information. [37884]

Angela E. Smith: The Equality Commission for Northern Ireland has provided the following information in relation to the composition of the monitored Northern Ireland full-time work force:

Table 1: Composition of the monitored Northern Ireland full-time work force by sex—1994

0870 Numbers

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 96W, on 0870 numbers, (1) what contractual arrangements his Department has for the provision of 0870 lines; [37641]

(2) what contractual arrangements his Department has for the provision of the non-profit making 0870 lines. [38746]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence has no policy on, or central contractual arrangements for, the provision of 0870 numbers. The use of 0870 numbers in MOD is determined at local level in accordance with individual business requirements and ordered directly from the supplier.

Administrative Savings

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what administrative savings have been made by his Department in each of the last eight years. [34947]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence budget does not include a formal administrative costs control, although the Department's long-standing efficiency programme bears down on overhead costs. Performance against previous efficiency targets has been published in the Department's Performance Reports and, from 2002–03, the Annual Report and Accounts, which are available on Department's website. Further detail on MOD's Spending Review 2004 efficiency programme is described in its efficiency technical note, which is also published on the website.

Afghanistan (Narcotics)

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which NATO armed forces will be responsible for the counter-narcotic operations in Helmand Province in Afghanistan after May 2006. [38258]

Mr. Ingram: Counter-narcotics (CN) operations are the responsibility of the Government of Afghanistan. NATO forces belonging to the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) have a supporting role in CN operations, as set out in NATO's operational plan for the ISAF mission in Afghanistan.

Broadcasting (Illegal Jamming)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether (a) any defence communications systems were obstructed and (b) the operational effectiveness of such systems was (i) diminished and (ii) impaired as a consequence of the jamming from within Libya of the Telstar 12 and Hotbird communication satellites at any time over the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [34918]

Mr. Ingram: No.

Canberra PR9

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many RAF squadrons are equipped with the Canberra PR9 aircraft; how many serviceable aircraft of this type the RAF has in its inventory; when the RAF last deployed the PR9 to Afghanistan; for what purpose; and when the next deployment is scheduled to commence. [38226]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 December 2005]: The RAF has one squadron equipped with the Canberra PR9 aircraft: No 39 (1PRU) Squadron. There are three Canberra PR9 aircraft in RAF service. The Canberra PR9 reconnaissance aircraft will continue to provide a niche capability within our overall Intelligence, Surveillance, Target Acquisition and Reconnaissance capability until it retires from service. It is not normal practice to comment publicly on deployments of this asset.

Co-operative Engagement Capability

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the main gate approval for cooperative engagement capability was originally scheduled; what the current timetable is; and if he will make a statement. [38181]

Mr. Ingram: Main gate approval for the cooperative engagement capability programme was originally planned for 2005. We are currently reviewing the United Kingdom's capability requirement and acquisition strategy with the aim of re-focusing the programme in a joint, rather than solely maritime, context. Main gate will be re-scheduled but the revised timing and other details of the re-worked strategy have not yet been finalised.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the original planned capability of (a) combat systems risks provision, (b) whole life support and (c) incremental acquisitions programme for the Type-45 destroyers; what the current proposals are; and if he will make a statement. [38182]

Mr. Ingram: As is usual on large and complex projects, changes have been made to internal budgetary assumptions during the life of the Type 45 project to achieve the optimum balance between cost and capability. The planned reductions made in funding for the risk provision associated with the ship's combat system and funding for setting up initial support arrangements, which were listed in the 2005 major projects report, do not materially change the ship's capability. The reduction in funding of the incremental acquisition plan listed in the 2004 and 2005 major projects reports means that a number of capabilities over and above those originally planned for the first of class ship are not currently expected to be fitted to the class. These included enhanced electronic warfare capabilities. However, the Type-45 has been designed to enable its capability to be upgraded through life, and these capabilities may be added at a later stage.

Defence Export Service Organisation

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 12 December 2005, Official Report, column 1680W, on the Defence Export Service Organisation (DESO), whether the DESO has kept a record of the requests it has received for lists of agents. [38950]

Mr. Ingram: No central record of such requests is kept.

Defence Industrial Strategy

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Defence Industrial Strategy. [36837]

John Reid: I refer the hon. Member to the statement I made to the House on 15 December 2005, Official Report, columns 1462–78.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was paid by his Department in 2004–05 in rent for properties in (a) total, (b) each (i) region and (ii) nation of the UK and (c) London. [35890]

Mr. Touhig: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 2 December 2005, Official Report, column 819W, to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Lynne Featherstone).

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was paid by his Department in rates to each local authority in the UK in 2004–05; and how much was paid in (a) each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK and (b) London. [35997]

Mr. Touhig: The table detailing amounts paid for non-domestic rates to each billing authority listed alphabetically by local authority for England, Scotland and Wales has been placed in the Library of the House.

Those for Northern Ireland have been collated by district. (It would require disproportionate cost and effort to break down the list to the level of detail requested.)

Deployment Times

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the average time between tours was for (a) Infantry Regiment and (b) the Royal Marines in the last two years; [37252]

(2) what the average deployment time in the Gulf has been since 2003 for (a) Territorial Army and (b) regular personnel. [37264]

Mr. Ingram: The average periods between operational tours for certain elements of the Army, including the Royal Armoured Corps, Royal Artillery and Infantry, are calculated as tour intervals. The average tour interval for Infantry Battalions over the past two years has been 21 months. Other force elements, including the Royal Marines and combat support services of the Army do not calculate periods between operational tours in the same way.

As the hon. Member will be aware, since operations commenced in Iraq in 2003, the Army's deployments have been divided into discreet roulement periods shown in the following table. The average deployment period in Iraq for both the Regular and TA is 5.3 months.

		Months
Operation	Deployment period	Regular	TA
Telic 1	February to July 2003	3.5 to 5	4
Telic 2	July to November 2003	4.5	4
Telic 3	November 2003 to May 2004	6	6
Telic 4	May to November 2004	6	6
Telic 5	November 2004 to May 2005	6	6
Telic 6	May to November 2005	6	6

Firing Ranges (Bristol Channel)

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidance he has issued on the area of the exclusion zones for building rear firing ranges in the Bristol channel. [37246]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence operates three offshore firing areas in the Bristol channel east of Ilfracombe at Bridgwater Bay, Rogiet Moor and at St. Thomas' Head. At present, the Ministry of Defence does not maintain any statutory safeguarding zones at these firing ranges that would affect property not owned by the Department. As such the Ministry of Defence does not issue any guidance relating to building works on properties located near these firing ranges.

Fleet Tankers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what armament is to be provided on the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability fleet tankers. [38187]

Mr. Ingram: No decisions have yet been taken on the armament that will be provided on the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability fleet tankers.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the original operating capability was of the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability fleet tanker when first planned; and what the current capability envisaged is. [38202]

Mr. Ingram: The operating capability of the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability fleet tanker is being defined as part of the programme's current assessment phase.

Helicopters

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total spending on battlefield helicopters was in each of the last five years. [33406]

Mr. Ingram: The approximate total costs for the delivery and maintenance of Battlefield Helicopters in the financial years 2000–01 to 2004–05 are contained in the following table:

Total battlefield helicopter costs

£ million

	Support costs	Capital costs	Total
2000–01	490	860	1,350
2001–02	570	620	1,190
2002–03	680	400	1,080
2003–04	760	240	1,000
2004–05	820	120	940

The high capital costs in the first half of the period shown reflect the procurement of new Apache Attack and Merlin helicopters.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Sea King and (b) Wessex helicopters are operated by his Department; and what stock of spares is available for each. [36784]

Mr. Ingram: The departmental fleet size of Sea King helicopters which are either available for use, or under going maintenance or upgrade, is 98. The stock of spares held that are specific to Sea King is valued at £389 million. In addition there is a pool of available spares which are common to Sea King and a number of other aircraft types. Information on these is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The last Wessex helicopter was taken out of service in 2003 and the Department is nearing the end of disposal action on spares. The value of the remaining stock of spares is £28.5 million. This includes parts held pending a decision on the role of the helicopter within the Historic Flight.

MARS Project

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been allocated to the integrator assessment phase of the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability project. [36158]

Mr. Ingram: Costs allocated for the integrator assessment element of the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability (MARS) project Assessment Phase will not be determined until the full scope of the work involved has been finalised. These costs will, however, form part of the overall MARS Assessment Phase budget of £44 million.

Meteorological Office

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for how long services were off-line as a result of the fire at the Exeter headquarters of the Meteorological Office on 26 October 2005; and whether during this period Meteorological Office services at Exeter were supplemented by other UK regional offices. [28441]

Mr. Touhig: The loss of power to one computer hall at the Exeter Headquarters of the Met Office on 26 October 2005 lasted from 10.30 to 17.00, full recovery of affected computer systems was completed and all computer services returned to their normal configuration by 22:00 on 26 October 2005. During the period of the incident many services continued un-interrupted from the second computer hall. In the case of those services where there was, or might have been, an impact, the Met Office business continuity plans were invoked. Some services were delivered from the computer hall which continued to operate; other services were moved from Exeter to the Met Office civil centres and the UK Defence Network. Other work was moved between the civil centres to maintain an acceptable level of service.

Microwave Weaponry

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research he has commissioned on microwave weaponry. [35766]

Mr. Ingram: As part of a portfolio of research into innovative technologies, Ministry of Defence has commissioned studies into high power microwave radiation to meet defence needs and to understand the potential threat to United Kingdom forces. The aim of such work is to assess the effects on electronic systems. This research has been on-going over a number of years.

Munitions

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 10 November 2005, Official Report, column 1242W, on munitions, if he will make a statement on the mortar that was stolen in 1999. [37837]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Non-commissioned Officers (Special Forces)

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the number of non-commissioned officers who have left the special forces to join private security companies in each of the last 10 years. [29754]

Mr. Ingram: None. Only statistical records are kept on the employment found by those leaving the armed forces, and they do not allow individuals from a particular unit to be tracked to a specific job.

Overseas Recruits

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many overseas recruits there are in (a) each regiment of the Army, (b) the Royal Air Force, (c) the Royal Navy and (d) the Royal Marines, broken down by country of origin. [36785]

Mr. Touhig: For Naval Service and RAF data I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 17 November 2005, Official Report, column 1410W to the hon. Member for Carmarthen, East and Dinefwr (Adam Price).

Naval Service data are not centrally held and therefore a breakdown of Royal Navy and Royal Marines data is not available.

Strength of overseas personnel in the UK Regular Army at 1 October 2005 by country and armed corps is shown in a table which has been placed in the Library.

Porton Down

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what investigation there has been as to what manuals, documents, other materials and information Dr. Wouter Basson of South Africa was given during and subsequent to his visit to Porton Down in 1985; and if he will make a statement; [31245]

(2) who authorised the visit of Dr. Wouter Basson of South Africa to Porton Down in 1985; for what purposes; and if he will make a statement. [31256]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 23 November 2005]: The Ministry of Defence holds no record of any visit by Dr. Wouter Basson to Porton Down at any time in 1985.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what records his Department has retained relating to pre-1975 visits to South Africa by employees of Porton Down. [31255]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 23 November 2005]: Records from before 1975, relating to overseas visits by employees of the Ministry of Defence Porton Down, have been destroyed in accordance with routine file management.

Prisoners of War/Civilian Internees

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many residents of Kettering constituency have (a) claimed and (b) been awarded ex-gratia payments under the scheme for former Far East prisoners of war and civilian internees. [38113]

Mr. Touhig: An examination of the Veterans Agency database on 15 December 2005 showed 23 claimants in the Kettering constituency. 22 of these have been awarded ex-gratia payment under the scheme for former Far East prisoners of war and civilian internees.

Royal Tournament

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions since 2000 the Royal Tournament has been replaced by a military tattoo at Horse Guards Parade in London. [38485]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 19 December 2005]: Following the last Royal Tournament in 1999 it has been replaced once by a military tattoo at Horse Guards Parade. The Department continues, however, to participate in a wide variety of smaller events such as Open Days, ships visits, County Shows and showcase events such as the Edinburgh Military Tattoo and the Fairford Royal International Air Tattoo (RIAT).

Shipyards (Construction Tenders)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria are used to determine the eligibility of shipyards to be invited to tender for construction of (a) all and (b) part of naval ships; and if he will make a statement. [38203]

Mr. Ingram: Any competent supplier may be invited to bid for such work. An objective evaluation of suitability to be invited to tender is made on a number of factors including, but not limited to, financial capability, quality assurance standards, supplier capability, organisation and management, supply chain management. Assessment of suitability is often facilitated through completion of a pre-qualification questionnaire. There is no absolute requirement to build all warships and Royal Fleet Auxiliary vessels onshore, and the evaluation will also need to take into account the need to retain the ability to build, integrate and support complex ships in the UK, as set out in the recently published 'Defence Industrial Strategy'.

Standing Civilian Courts

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many persons have been brought before the standing civilian courts in each of the past five years, broken down by category of offence; and what the rate of conviction was in each such category. [38044]

Mr. Ingram: The number of persons brought before the standing civilian courts for the Army and RAP is shown in the following table. Information on the rate of conviction for each category is not held centrally, but the overall rate of conviction is provided.

The Royal Navy has no powers to convene standing civilian courts.

				Convictions
	Army	RAF	Category of Offence	Number	Percentage
2001	9	4	Violence: 3 Drunk: 3 Damage: 2 Theft: 3 Deception: 1 Driving: 1	10	77
2002	20	1	Violence: 11 Theft: 3 Driving: 5 Indecency: 1 Drugs: 1	12	57

Notes:

1. CSO—Community Service Order.
2. Percentage figures are rounded up to nearest whole percentage.
3. Figures for 2005 represent the number of people brought before the standing civilian courts to date.

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information is recorded on the (a) nature of charges brought, (b) rate of conviction and (c) sentencing outcomes of proceedings of the standing civilian courts. [38045]

Mr. Ingram: For the Army, with regard to standing civilian courts, information on the number of charges brought, the nature and details of the offence, whether there is a conviction or acquittal, and what the sentence is, is all recorded in a central database.

For the Royal Air Force, records of cases are kept by each Command alongside Service personnel disciplinary case records, but the information is not held centrally.

Information is not held relating to the rate of conviction.

The Royal Navy has no powers to convene standing civilian courts.

Stingray Programme

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many weapons were to have been produced under the Stingray programme when first planned; and what the current number envisaged is. [38185]

Mr. Ingram: The number of Stingray weapons originally procured, and the number of these to be upgraded, is classified as they could assist a potential enemy by giving an indication of our weapon reserves.

Territorial Army

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) establishment and (b) actual strength is of the Territorial Army, broken down by regiment. [38108]

Mr. Touhig: The total establishment of the Territorial Army (TA) is currently 41,610. Establishment figures are currently not available broken down by regiment. As at 1 November 2005, the overall strength of the TA was some 36,940 (this figure includes mobilized TA personnel, the officer training corps but excludes full-time reserve service and non-regular permanent staff). I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram) on 1 November 2005, Official Report, column 918W, which offers the most recent strengths by individual regiments and corps.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future role of the Territorial Army in Lancashire. [38265]

Mr. Touhig: Further to the answer I gave on 13 June 2005, Official Report, column 18W, to the hon. Member for Lancaster and Wyre (Mr. Wallace), I can confirm that no final decisions have been taken on the rebalancing of the Territorial Army. However, they are expected shortly and an announcement will follow in the new year.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Territorial Army recruits completed their basic training in each year from 2002–03. [29536]

Mr. Touhig: Territorial Army (TA) basic training is defined as Phase 1 training. The number of TA personnel who have completed Phase 1 training is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

US-registered Aircraft

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions since 1 January 2001 US-registered aircraft tail number (a) N44982, formerly N8068V and N379P, and (b) N313P were provided with military air traffic control services. [34633]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 12 December 2005]: These records are not held centrally and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Freedom of Information Act

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many requests for information have been received by her Department since the Freedom of Information Act 2000 came into force; how many requests have had their deadline extended beyond 20 working days to allow consideration of where the public interest lies; and how many requests have been refused on public interest grounds. [37644]

Ms Harman: The DCA publishes quarterly bulletins on the performance of central Government under the FOIA. The third of these reports, covering the period of 1 July to 30 September, was published on 15 December 2005, Official Report, 161WS, and has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses and on the DCA's website.

From 1 January to 30 September DCA has received 495 FOI requests. 61 of these requests have had the deadline extended beyond the statutory deadline of 20 working days to allow consideration of where the public interest lies. However, this figure includes 15 requests where the decision to extend on public interest grounds was taken after the 20 day statutory deadline had passed. This accounts for the inconsistency with the cumulative figure published in DCA's quarterly bulletins. A total of 83 requests have been refused on public interest grounds.

Juries

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps she has taken to address the issues raised by Lord Justice Auld in his 2001 review on the ethnic composition of juries; whether she intends to implement Lord Justice Auld's recommendation that where the court considers that race is likely to be relevant in a case, a jury could be selected which includes up to three people from any ethnic minority group; and if she will make a statement. [37749]

Ms Harman: The Government considered Sir Robin Auld's recommendation that the trial judge should have power to arrange for a multi-ethnic jury to hear cases where race is a significant issue. It concluded, after consultation, that it would be wrong to interfere with the composition of the jury in this way, as to do so would potentially: undermine the fundamental principle of random selection; place undue weight on the views of the specially selected jurors, lead them to feel that they were expected to represent the interests of the minority ethnic defendant or victim, and give rise to tensions and divisions in the jury room as a result.

Legal Aid

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the availability of civil legal aid to people living in Kettering constituency. [38112]

Bridget Prentice: The Legal Services Commission contracts with service providers throughout England and Wales to provide a range of legal and advice services across different categories of law.

There are currently five service providers with a contract to undertake civil legal aid work in the Kettering constituency. Service providers in Kettering may help people who live outside the area, and people who live in Kettering may visit a service provider in a different area.

Any person residing in England or Wales can access free quality legal advice and information through Community Legal Service Direct. This service is available direct to the public through a telephone line, website and information leaflets.

Susan Kramer: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) if she will list the contracted suppliers of legal aid funded services in the boroughs of (a) Richmond-upon-Thames and (b) Kingston-upon-Thames in relation to (i) housing, (ii) social welfare, (iii) mental health, (iv) employment, (v) family issues, (vi) criminal defence and (vii) immigration; [38135]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, columns 129–30W, on legal aid, how many of the suppliers in each category are solicitors' firms; and how many solicitors' firms in each borough undertake legal aid work in immigration. [38178]

Bridget Prentice: The Legal Services Commission (LSC) contracts with suppliers throughout England and Wales to provide a range of legal and advice services across different categories of law. The LSC contracts with solicitors' firms and not for profit organisations.

[2] The LSC assesses immigration need for London as a whole rather than by borough.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what cases qualify for legal aid; and if she will make a statement. [38165]

Bridget Prentice: Legal aid for civil cases is available to anyone who qualifies, provided it is not outside the scope of the scheme and cases out of scope are defamation, boundary disputes, conveyancing, making wills, trust law, damage to property, cases arising out of company or partnership law or the carrying on of business and personal injury (except clinical negligence and through the Lord Chancellor's direction, claims against public authorities alleging serious wrong doing). Each application is considered on an individual basis and is subject to the statutory tests of the applicant's means and the merits of the case.

To qualify for legal aid representation in criminal cases, the applicant needs to demonstrate that he or she meets the "Interests of Justice" test. A number of factors are considered in assessing the "Interests of Justice" in relation to any one individual. This includes whether the applicant, if convicted, is likely to suffer a loss of liberty or livelihood. Under the Criminal Defence Service Bill currently before Parliament, the Government are seeking to ensure that applicants for criminal legal aid representation will in future also be subject to a means test.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the contracted suppliers of legal aid funded services in the London borough of Haringey in relation to (a) housing, (b) social welfare, (c) mental health, (d) employment, (e) family issues, (f) criminal defence and (g) immigration; and if she will make a statement. Magistrates Court Staff

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on negotiations with the Public and Commercial Services Union on the pay and conditions of magistrates court staff. [39252]

Bridget Prentice: The Department has been engaged in discussions throughout 2005 with the unions representing staff subject to former magistrates courts service (MCS) terms and conditions of service. Formal negotiations began on 5 April 2005 once former MCS staff transferred into DCA.

The Department has made an offer to the unions which officials believe is fair given the current economic circumstances, public sector pay awards generally and what the Department can afford. It is therefore regrettable that PCS and Prospect have called on their members to take industrial action. Officials remain prepared to discuss any constructive proposals that the unions wish to put forward to resolve the dispute, recognising the constraints within which the Department has to operate.

Public Appointments

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by her Department, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [36681]

Ms Harman: No former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 have been appointed to public bodies in this Department.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Bain Report

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which Members of the Government Sir George Bain has met in the process of compiling his report on the Royal Mail; and if he will publish minutes of these meetings. [28570]

Barry Gardiner: Sir George Bain is acting as advisor to the Secretary of State on Royal Mail issues. There is no expectation that his work will be pulled together into any single report. In his role he has had various discussions with the Secretary of State and myself. Minutes from those meetings are not available on the grounds that advice to Ministers is protected. In addition, the meetings covered commercially confidential information.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the most recent timetable is for the completion of Sir George Bain's review into the issues facing the Royal Mail; what steps his Department will take following the review; and if he will make a statement. [28686]

Barry Gardiner: Sir George Bain is advising the Secretary of State on Royal Mail matters. He is providing ongoing advice and there is no expectation that his work will be pulled together in a single report. As I said to the House in July our ambition is to have a publicly owned Royal Mail fully restored to good health, providing customers with an excellent service and its staff with rewarding employment. Postcomm's price control settlement expected soon will be significant in this context. There is no set timetable for Sir George's work or for follow up by my Department.

British Nuclear Fuels

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether British Nuclear Fuels Ltd will be permitted to sell its Westinghouse subsidiary before the energy review has reported. [36407]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 19 December 2005]: The energy review will be examining a wide range of options for helping the UK meet our medium and long-term energy goals, including the potential role of a number of generating technologies such as civil nuclear power. The energy review will be bringing forward proposals next year—no decisions have been taken at this time and it is important the Government does not pre-empt the outcome of the review. Decisions on the sale of Westinghouse have no relevance to the energy review and are being taken independently according to its own timetable.

Buncefield Oil Depot

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the likely effect of the fire at Buncefield oil depot on the price of domestic heating oil. [38469]

Malcolm Wicks: Buncefield is a distribution terminal not a refinery; hence there is no change to UK fuel output as a result of the fire. The Government and oil industry have been working closely to ensure petroleum products are supplied to market via one of the other 50 major UK oil storage terminals, thereby reducing the potential impact on the price of heating oil and other petroleum products.

Business Links/Gloucestershire First

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what financial support his Department provides to (a) Business Links in Gloucestershire and (b) Gloucestershire First; and what proportion of the total funding of each organisation his Department's funding represents. [39243]

Alun Michael: In 2005–06, the DTI, through the South West RDA will provide a total budget of £1,827,865. Business Link Gloucestershire total estimated income for 2005–06 will be £5,748,156. Business Link Gloucestershire also expects to receive a further £1,105,415 through the RDA Single Pot mechanism to fund region-specific projects. Some of these may have a DTI origin, but will also include funding from other Government Departments.

Gloucestershire First receives no direct DTI funding, however it has been supported through the RDA Single Pot. In 2005–06 it is expected to receive £98,000 against total projected funding of £330,000.

Civil Servants

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which civil servants from his Department are working on the energy review; which (a) civil servants and (b) employees of non-governmental organisations have been seconded to work on the review; which private sector consultants have been engaged to participate in the review; and what the reason is for the involvement of each. [36406]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 19 December 2005]: I lead the energy review, which will be taken forward by a cross-departmental team.

(a) The review team is still being formed. It will be based in DTI, with secondees from DEFRA, Department for Transport, HM Treasury and the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit. In addition there will be input from ODPM and FCO.

The devolved administrations and territorial departments are already involved and will continue to be involved throughout the course of the review.

(b) The review team will draw on expert support and analysis both within and outside Government. This will include expert advice from academia, the private sector and non-governmental organisations.

Electricity

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much electricity in kilowatt hours was exported from sources in (a) Scotland, (b) Wales, (c) each of the English regions and (d) Northern Ireland in 2004–05; and what percentage was from (i) fossil fuel sources broken down by (A) oil, (B) coal, (C) gas and (D) other, (ii) hydroelectric sources, (iii) nuclear electricity sources, (iv) other types of renewable sources excluding hydro and (v) other electricity sources production. [39202]

Malcolm Wicks: The total amount of electricity exported by the UK in 2004 was 2,294,000,000 kWh (2,294 GWh). In the first half of 2005 electricity exports totalled 1,490 GWh.

Disaggregated data are not available in the form requested.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the electricity (a) production and (b) consumption expressed in annual electricity generated in kilowatt hours was for (i) Scotland, (ii) Wales, (iii) each of the English regions and (iv) Northern Ireland in 2004–05; and what percentage was (A) fossil fuel electricity production, broken down by (1) oil, (2) coal, (3) gas and (4) other, (B) hydro electricity production, (C) nuclear electricity production, (D) other types of renewable production excluding hydro and (E) other electricity sources production. [39223]

Malcolm Wicks: Electricity production by English region is not available, because data are collected on an aggregated basis by company, who may have power stations in more than one region. However, data on generation of electricity by fuel for all generators in Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and England are as follows.

2004

GWh

Fuel source	Scotland	Wales	England[1]	Total UK
Coal	13,054	7,234	111,723	132,011
Oil	2,262	50	2,603	4,915
Gas	11,003	17,100	128,000	156,103
Nuclear	18,013	7,388	54,598	79,999
Hydro	4,546	305	79	4,930
Other renewables	1,308	792	7,717	9,817
Other	786	2,366	4,701	7,853
Total	50,972	35,235	309,421	395,628

[1] Includes Northern Ireland as data cannot be given separately as they disclose commercially confidential information.

Electricity consumption statistics, for 2004, are as follows:

	GWh[1]
East of England	28,150
East Midlands	24,461
Greater London	40,367
North East	12,708
North West	34,230
South East	41,057
South West	26,707
West Midlands	27,393
Yorkshire and Humber	25,602
Scotland	30,117
Wales	21,738
Northern Ireland	7,558
Unallocated[2]	3,623
UK electricity sales	323,711

[1] To convert to kWh multiply by 1,000,000.

[2] This is consumption for which there is insufficient information for it to be ascribed to a region.

The nature of the electricity grid means that you cannot divide consumption of electricity in the English regions according to the fuel used to generate the electricity.

Employment Agencies

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of inspections of employment agencies under the Employment Agencies Act 1973; how many employment agencies have been inspected under the Act in each year since 1975; and if he will make a statement. [38239]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The total number of complaints and inspections undertaken by the Employment Agency Standards Inspectorate since 1996 are as follows:

Complaints/inspections

	Number
1997–98	1,325
1998–99	1,360
1999–2000	1,319
2000–01	1,124
2001–02	854
2002–03	950
2003–04	1,531
2004–05	1,504

Data for earlier years are not readily available without excessive cost. Data broken down by sector of the private recruitment industry are not available for the years before 2004.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average period has been between inspections of employment agencies under the Employment Agencies Act 1973 in each year since 1975. [38268]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is not possible to assess the average period between inspections. Inspections either follow notification of a complaint to the Employment Agency Standards (EAS) Inspectorate (when a follow up inspection may be carried relatively soon after the initial visit, if breaches of the legislation were identified), or as part of a targeted programme of inspections on the basis of risk.

Thus, as inspections are not carried out on a routine basis, no meaningful figure is available. The interval between inspections is in fact a factor of complaints received and perceived risk based on the sector(s) and area in which the agency is operating.

Employment Tribunals Service

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the national targets are for the Employment Tribunals Service; and what the performance of its offices in South Devon has been in relation to those targets. [36890]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Employment Tribunals Service has four key performance targets, related to the Employment Tribunals, which have been agreed with Ministers. The Exeter Employment Tribunal office handles claims for the South Devon area.

Percentage

	Target	Achievement 2004–05	Exeter
Percentage of single Employment Tribunal cases to a first hearing within 26 weeks of receipt	75	82	89
Minimum to be achieved by all offices in relation to above target	65	67	89
Percentage of Employment Tribunal decisions issued within four weeks of the final hearing	85	87	96
Percentage of Employment Tribunal users satisfied with the service offered by ETS	85	95	95.7

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many meetings of the EU (a) Advisory Committee on the development and reconversion of regions, (b) Advisory Committee on restrictive practices and dominant positions and (c) Advisory Committee on concentrations between undertakings have taken place during the UK Presidency of the EU; who presided over each meeting; what other UK representatives were present; what provision was made for representation of the devolved governments; and if he will make a statement. [38774]

Ian Pearson: The Committee on the Development and Conversion of Regions has met three times during the current UK presidency. The committee is chaired by a Commission representative and its membership is at official level. Each member state has two seats. The DTI, which has co-ordinating responsibility for the structural funds in the UK, always attends and reports on the meetings to all structural funds departments and to the devolved Administrations. An official from ODPM attended two of the meetings. Officials from the devolved Administrations are also invited.

There were eight meetings of the Advisory Committee on restrictive practices and dominant positions during the UK presidency where the UK was represented by the Office of Fair Trading, and the Commission chaired. No provisions were made for representation of the devolved governments as this is not a devolved issue.

No provisions were made for representation of the devolved governments as this is not a devolved issue.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many meetings of the EU (a) Committee on the specific programme for research, technological development and demonstration on promotion of innovation and participation of small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs), (b) Advisory Committee for co-operation in the field of tourism and (c) Committee on conformity assessment and surveillance of the telecommunications market have taken place during the UK presidency of the EU; who was presiding over each meeting; what other UK representatives were present; what provisions were made for representation of the devolved Governments; and if he will make a statement. [38789]

Alun Michael: The information requested is as follows:

(a) The Horizontal Configuration of the Programme Committee of the FP6 Specific Programme, "Integrating and Strengthening the European Research Area", which considers SME issues, has met three times during the UK's presidency of the EU. Officials from DG Research in the European Commission chaired each meeting. Officials from the Office of Science and Technology represented the United Kingdom. No representatives from devolved administrations attended.

(b) The Advisory Committee for co-operation in the field of tourism met once during the UK presidency. The Commission chaired and the meeting was attended by an official from the Department for Culture, Media and Sport. DCMS always consults the devolved administrations on the agenda and papers for meetings of the Tourism Advisory Committee well in advance of the meeting and makes representations on behalf of the devolved administrations when required.

(c) A meeting of the Telecommunications Conformity Assessment and Market Surveillance Committee took place in July 2005. The Committee was chaired by a representative of the European Commission. Two officials from the Department and one from the Office of Communications attended. No provisions were made for representation of the devolved Governments, as this is not a devolved issue.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many meetings of the EU (a) Committee on common rules for imports of textile products from certain third countries (autonomous regime), (b) Advisory Committee for implementation of the Community market-access strategy and (c) Committee on the implementation of projects promoting co-operation and commercial relations between the European Union and the industrialised countries of North America, the Far East and Australasia have taken place during the UK presidency of the EU; who was presiding over each meeting; what other UK representatives were present; what provisions were made for representation of the devolved governments; and if he will make a statement. [38790]

Ian Pearson: The Committee on common rules for imports of textile products from certain third countries (autonomous regime) is commonly known as the 'Textiles Management Committee'. It met four times during the UK presidency under the chairmanship of the European Commission, and an official from DTI represented the UK. No provisions were made for representation of the devolved governments, as this is not a devolved issue.

The Advisory Committee for implementation of the Community market-access strategy met once during the UK Presidency of the EU. The meeting was chaired by the European Commission, and one DTI official attended. No provisions were made for representation of the devolved governments, as this is not a devolved issue.

The Advisory Committee on the implementation of projects promoting cooperation and commercial relations between the European Union and the industrialised countries of North America, the Far East and Australasia did not meet during the UK presidency of the EU in 2005.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many meetings of the EU (a) Committee for the management of generalised preferences, (b) Committee for the harmonisation of credit insurance provisions for transactions with medium and long-term cover and (c) Co-ordinating Group for the Community regime for the control of exports of dual-use goods have taken place during the UK presidency of the EU; who was presiding over each meeting; what other UK representatives were present; what provisions were made for representation of the devolved governments; and if he will make a statement. [38791]

Ian Pearson: The Generalised System of Preferences (GSP) Committee met in Brussels once during the UK presidency on 28 November 2005. The Committee is chaired by the Commission and the UK was represented by the UK Permanent Representation to the EU. No provisions were made for representation of the devolved governments, as this is not a devolved issue.

The Committee for the harmonisation of credit insurance provisions for transactions with medium- and long-term cover did not meet during the UK presidency.

During the UK presidency, the European Council Working Group on Export Credits met five times in Brussels. Officials from Export Credits Guarantee Department and HM Treasury were present. No provisions were made for representation of the devolved governments, as this is not a devolved issue.

The Co-ordinating Group for the Community regime for the control of exports of dual-use goods is a Commission chaired Group. The UK is represented by DTI officials. During the UK presidency there were four meetings of the Co-ordination Group, these were held on the following dates: 13 July 2005; 7 September 2005; 3 October 2005; and 9 November 2005. Export control is not a devolved matter therefore devolved governments were not involved in the meetings.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many meetings of the (a) Advisory Committee on standardisation in the field of information technology (Sogits), (b) Advisory Committee on telecommunications procurement (ACTP) and (c) Committee on security of information systems (SO-GIS) have taken place during the UK presidency of the EU; who presided over each meeting; which other UK representatives were present; what provision was made for representation of the devolved governments; and if he will make a statement. [38999]

Ian Pearson: I can confirm that none of the committees listed has met during the UK presidency of the EU.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many meetings of the (a) Committee for the adaptation to technical progress of directives on the removal of technical barriers to trade in the sector of colouring matters which may be added to medicinal products, (b) Committee for the adaptation to technical progress of directives on the removal of technical barriers to trade in the sector of cosmetics and (c) Advisory Committee on protection against dumped imports have taken place during the UK presidency of the EU; who presided over each meeting; which other UK representatives were present; what provision was made for representation of the devolved governments; and if he will make a statement. [39008]

Ian Pearson: The Committee for the adaptation to technical progress of directives on the removal of technical barriers met twice during the UK presidency. This Committee is chaired by the Commission and an official of the Department of Trade and Industry represented the UK. No provision was made for representation of the devolved administrations.

The Advisory Committee on protection against dumped imports is not recognised under the title given. Matters relating to dumped imports are discussed in the Anti-dumping and Anti-subsidy Committee which met six times during the UK presidency. This Committee is chaired by the Commission and an official of the Department of Trade and Industry represented the UK. Representatives of the Scottish Executive attended the Committee when measures concerning imports of farmed salmon from Norway were discussed.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many meetings of the (a) Advisory Committee on protection against subsidised imports, (b) Advisory Committee on common rules for exports of products and (c) Quota Administration Committee have taken place during the UK presidency of the EU; who presided over each meeting; which other UK representatives were present; what provisions were made for representation of the devolved governments; and if he will make a statement. [39038]

Ian Pearson: The Advisory Committee on protection against subsidised imports is not recognised under the title given. Matters relating to subsidised imports are discussed in the "Anti-dumping and Anti-subsidy Committee" which met six times during the UK presidency. This Committee is chaired by the Commission and an official of the Department of Trade and Industry represented the UK. Representatives of the Scottish Executive attended the Committee when measures concerning imports of farmed salmon from Norway were discussed.

(b) The Advisory Committee on common rules for exports of products did not meet during the UK presidency.

(c) The Quota Administration Committee is not recognised under the title given.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many meetings of the (a) Advisory Committee on common rules for imports of products from third countries, (b) Advisory Committee on common rules for imports from certain third world countries and (c) Committee on defence against obstacles to trade which affect the market of the Community or a non-member country have taken place during the UK presidency of the EU; who presided over each meeting; which other UK representatives were present; what provisions were made for representation of the devolved Governments; and if he will make a statement. [39039]

Ian Pearson: The Advisory Committees on common rules for imports of products from third countries, and on certain third world countries are not recognised under the titles given.

The Committee on defence against obstacles to trade which affect the market of the Community or non-member country met once during the UK presidency. This Committee is chaired by the Commission and an official of the Department of Trade and Industry represented the UK. No provision was made for representation of the devolved administrations.

EU Domain

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to ensure British businesses have equal access to the new.eu domain name. [38003]

Alun Michael: All organisations with an address in the EU can register a domain name under the new.eu top-level domain. Registrations are made on a first come, first served basis, usual practice for domain name registries. There is a dispute resolution procedure in place.

Under the current "sunrise period", which opened on 7 December, organisations can apply for domain names where they can claim some rights (for example, a registered trade mark).

The registry responsible for operating the .eu top-level domain (EURID) and the European Commission have ensured reasonable awareness of the introduction of .eu internet addresses. Registrars—the organisations selling domain names have also advertised availability.

The domain name market is highly competitive, and it would be inappropriate for the UK Government to promote a particular top-level domain.

It is for organisations and individuals themselves to decide whether to apply for a .eu domain name.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions the Export Credits Guarantee Department has held with law enforcement agencies on (a) the impact of its anti-corruption procedures on law enforcement efforts to detect, investigate and prosecute overseas corruption offences and (b) the potential impact of its audit clause on future law enforcement investigations into overseas corruption. [38220]

Ian Pearson: ECGD has informed other Government Departments, including the Home Office, and certain law enforcement agencies of its anti-bribery and corruption procedures. ECGD has provided them with the opportunity to comment on proposed revisions to its procedures resulting from the current public consultation and will continue to do so.

Fur Import Ban

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has made within the EU on banning the import of cat and dog fur from China into the EU. [34605]

Ian Pearson: Within the EU this issue was discussed most recently at the 30 May 2005 Agriculture Council and at a meeting of chief veterinary officers on 6 July. At these meetings, the UK supported the position that the European Commission should explore concerns about the possible import of domestic cat and dog fur to the European Union as well as possible policy responses, including the possibility of a ban.

Glass Industry

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to control the price of gas for the glass industry; and if he will make a statement. [38493]

Malcolm Wicks: Government policy is not to intervene in the energy market except in extreme circumstances, such as a threat to safety. We take the issue of security of energy supplies, and rising energy prices, very seriously, and are leaving no stone unturned in finding ways to mitigate the impact on customers.

The Department has been working with the Energy Intensive Users Group, of which British Glass is a member, and Ofgem through the Gas Prices Working Group (GPWG) to develop ideas for improving the operation of the wholesale gas market and ways to mitigate the effects of high wholesale prices. The GPWG has agreed an Action List of short to medium term measures, including maximising UK gas supplies, encouraging demand side response and pursuing energy market liberalisation in the EU.

In particular, the Department has worked hard to smooth the regulatory path for the construction of major new pipelines from Norway and the Netherlands, as well as two further gas import terminals in Pembrokeshire, all of which will ease the supply situation. Ofgem's Demand Side Working Group is working closely with industry to ensure that any necessary demand-side response is delivered in an efficient, flexible and responsive way. Also, the Government has put a lot of effort into pressing for full liberalisation within the EU, including at the successful Energy Council on 1 December, which I chaired, and this remains one of our key energy objectives. More recently, I have held meetings with the operators of North Sea gas fields, companies using the Bacton-Zeebrugge interconnector and the Isle of Grain gas import terminal to impress on them personally the importance I attach to the facilities operating effectively this winter.

Information and Communication Technology

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will publish the 2005 International Benchmarking Study on the business use of information and communication technology. [32534]

Alun Michael: The Department has been reviewing the International Benchmarking Study (IBS) which was sponsored by the DTI until 2004 as a means of monitoring previous targets and has been considering the metrics needed to report against our new National Standard of 'Maintaining the UK's standing as one of the best places in the world for online business'.

This review has included an analysis of the cost of International Benchmarking Study research and a look at alternative reports/surveys of data such as Eurostat, ONS, Economist Intelligence Unit report and the Network Readiness Index as well as other public/private sources which were not available at the time the International Benchmarking Study was first commissioned. It has been concluded that there are now better ways of monitoring performance and that an International Benchmarking Study (IBS) covering the period 2005 would not offer value for money, and we will give a decision on the data to be produced shortly.

Internet Service Providers

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of internet service providers based in (a) Scotland, (b) Wales, (c) each of the English regions and (d) Northern Ireland. [39203]

Alun Michael: Such information is not collected.

Israel

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what mechanisms exist (a) to monitor whether British firms violate (i) UK and (ii) international law on accepting contracts with Israel which include work in the Occupied Territories and (b) to enforce subsequent penalties. [35624]

Ian Pearson: British firms accepting contracts with Israel, which include work in the occupied territories, are not in violation of UK or international law provided they comply with UK export controls.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of mobile telephones in use in (a) Scotland, (b) Wales, (c) each of the English regions and (d) Northern Ireland. [39200]

Alun Michael: Ofcom, the independent regulator for the UK communication industries, estimates in its recent report "The Communications Market 2005" that there are around 61 million mobile telephones in use in the UK today. The same report details a breakdown of household penetration of mobile telephony across the UK but does not include specific details across the nations for SME's or large corporates. According to the report levels of household usage across each of the nations are: England 77 per cent., Northern Ireland 71 per cent., Scotland 68 per cent., and Wales 72 per cent.

Car/Motorcycle Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many people were employed in the motorcycle manufacturing industry in each year since 1997; [38650]

(2) how many people were employed in the car manufacturing industry in each year since 1997; [38651]

(3) what the total value was of sales of (a) new and (b) second hand cars sold in the UK in each financial year since 1997. [38817]

Alun Michael: The following table sets out answers to these questions to the extent that data is available.

For the UK auto industry, employment data is not separately available for car manufacturing, as the total for vehicles also includes commercial vehicles and engines. For completeness, the table also includes employment at component suppliers, although this understates the true size of the UK auto industry as many suppliers to the industry are classified in the statistics according to what they make (e.g. steel, glass). The ONS Annual Business Inquiry does not have employment data for 1997.

From this data, it can be deduced that UK auto industry productivity is improving, both in terms of cars made per worker per annum, and GVA per employee. These are important measures that indicate continuing improvements in UK's auto manufacturing competitiveness on the global stage.

As regards registrations data, new registrations are in the public domain and are quoted here. Used vehicle transaction data is normally a chargeable service from DVLA, but SMMT provides used car sales data on request, and this is quoted here.

Data on the value of vehicle sales, new or used, is commercially sensitive within the industry and not published. However, data is available from ONS on the value added generated by the motor trade and this is quoted here. Again, the value added generated per employee is on a rising trend, indicating continually improving efficiency and competitiveness.

Nuclear Power

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what pricing arrangements pertain to electricity produced from nuclear power stations, with particular reference to arrangements made under the non-fossil fuel obligation. [38169]

Malcolm Wicks: There are currently no special pricing arrangements pertaining to electricity produced from nuclear power stations—they sell their output to the wholesale electricity market in the same way as other generators. The nuclear industry in England and Wales ceased to benefit from guaranteed subsidies provided under the non-fossil fuel obligation in 1998 following the privatisation of British Energy.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the export of material for corrosion resistant cladding of uranium oxide fuel in nuclear reactors is subject to export controls; and if he will make a statement. [38447]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 19 December 2005]: The raw material normally used for this purpose is zirconium alloy containing an especially low amount of hafnium. Low-hafnium zirconium, alloys containing more than 50 per cent. zirconium and zirconium compounds are subject to control for exports to destinations that are not member states of the EU under entry 1C234 of Annex I to Council Regulation (EC) 1334/2000 ("the EC Regulation"), as amended. Tubes manufactured from low-hafnium zirconium or zirconium alloy, specially designed for cladding uranium oxide fuel, are controlled to all destinations under entry 0A001f of Annexes I and IV to the EC Regulation, as amended.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total amount of carbon dioxide released from the production of nuclear fuel was in each year for which figures are available. [37115]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on UK emissions of carbon dioxide is contained in the UK Greenhouse Gas Inventory, which is compiled and maintained by the National Environmental Technology Centre. From the inventory it is not possible to separately identify carbon dioxide emissions from the production of nuclear fuel. No carbon dioxide is emitted from the generation of electricity from nuclear fuel.

Operating and Financial Reviews

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on Operating and Financial Reviews. [39227]

Alun Michael: I refer the hon. Member to the statement I made on 15 December 2005, Official Report, column 177WS.

Petroleum Supplies

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the implications for the security of supply of the proposed India, Pakistan and Iran petroleum pipeline. [38872]

Malcolm Wicks: The Iran-Pakistan-India pipeline was one of three gas pipeline importation projects approved by the Indian Cabinet in February.

The pipeline, construction of which is due to commence by mid-2007 with the first gas delivered by the end of 2010, will have to overcome significant security and operational challenges if it is to be successful. These include its proposed length and route, which will take it through the troubled Pakistani province of Balochistan. Discussions, including on how best to secure the pipeline, are under way between the interested parties and I understand that senior Indian and Pakistani petroleum officials announced in New Delhi on 17 December that experts from their countries and Iran will hold their first tripartite meeting in Tehran in early February 2006.

Pipelines

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the length in kilometers is of pipelines for (a) crude oil, (b) petroleum products, (c) natural gas, (d) liquefied petroleum gas products, (e) refined products and petrochemicals and (f) other oils, gases or chemical products in (i) Scotland, (ii) Wales, (iii) each of the English regions, (iv) Northern Ireland and (v) the offshore UK sectors subject to (A) Scots law, (B) Northern Irish law and (C) the law of England and Wales. [39201]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested is not held centrally and to compile it would exceed the disproportionate cost threshold. However, the Department does provide information on major UK offshore oil and gas pipelines with details of length, diameter and the material conveyed which can be found on http://www.og.dti.gov.uk/information/bb_updates/appendices/Appendix14.htm The total length of the offshore pipelines listed is 12,396.09 km.

The most detailed source of information on the main UK onshore gas pipelines should be available from national grid—operator of the National Gas Transmission System.

Regional Development Agencies

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much each regional development agency in England has budgeted for in 2005–06 (a) in total, (b) for administration and (c) for staffing. [31826]

Alun Michael: The 2005–06 figures for budget, administration and staffing for the nine regional development agencies are set out in the table:

£ million

	Total budget	Non-pay admin expenditure	Staffing expenditure	Total admin expenditure

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the (a) in principle and (b) committed funding decisions of the regional development agencies are published. [34138]

Alun Michael: The spending plans of England's Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) are set out in their corporate plans for the period 2005 to 2008. The RDAs consulted widely with all interested parties about the development of their corporate plans and have published the plans on their websites. There is no requirement on RDAs to publish decisions in relation to individual projects.

Regulation, Evaluation and Authorisation of Chemicals Directive

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what estimate the European Commission's impact study made of the cost of compliance with the Regulation, Evaluation and Authorisation of Chemicals Directive for an average paper mill; [38301]

(2) what the estimated cost impact on paper mills is of complying with the Regulation, Evaluation and Authorisation of Chemicals Directive; [38302]

(3) whether recycled paper made from waste materials would be subject to the Regulation, Evaluation and Authorisation of Chemicals requirements as set out in the UK compromise text; [38303]

(4) whether, under the proposals in the latest UK presidency compromise text on the Regulation, Evaluation and Authorisation of Chemicals Directive, waste paper recyclers would be required to test every batch of waste paper collected; [38304]

(5) what assessment he has made of the impact of the UK compromise text on the Regulation, Evaluation and Authorisation of Chemicals Directive on the recycled paper market in the UK; [38310]

(6) what assessment he has made of the likely impact on the UK's compliance with the landfill directive if the UK compromise text on the Regulation, Evaluation and Authorisation of Chemicals Directive is adopted. [38313]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

The European Commission's impact assessment estimated the cost of compliance for an average paper mill to be €7 million per year. This however was based on the Commission's original proposal and the scenario of a notification of a substance in magazine paper as an "article".

The compromise text agreed under the UK presidency at Competitiveness Council on 13 December 2005 amended the notification requirements to only those that contain substances of high concern in quantities of over 1 tonne per year and where they are present over a concentration of 0.1 per cent. weight by weight. This will greatly reduce the burden on the paper industry and avoid having to test every batch of waste paper collected.

The agreed compromise text also makes it clear that waste—as defined in Council Directive 75/4222/EEC—is exempt from the REACH regulations. This will minimise any impact on recycling and compliance with the landfill directive.

Research and Development

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many and what value of (a) research and development grants and (b) SMART awards were made in the City of Newcastle upon Tyne in each year since 1998–99. [38323]

Alun Michael [holding answer 19 December 2005]: The number and value of SMART and grant for research and development offers in Newcastle upon Tyne since 1998–99 is shown in the following table. The legacy SMART scheme closed to new applications in 2003.

Shopping Fraud

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what awareness campaigns his Department is running about internet shopping fraud during the Christmas shopping period; and if he will make a statement. [36211]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There is already information available from Consumer Direct Online about how to shop online safely and how to avoid being a victim of fraud. Their website address is www.consumerdirect.gov.uk/general/internet.

The Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 protect consumers against payment card fraud including credit cards. The regulations apply to contracts made at a distance including online ones. The card issuer is required to reimburse consumers the full amount in the event of fraudulent use of the consumer's card.

The Government have been involved in the development of Get Safe Online at www.getsafeonline.org. This project is an alliance of public and private sector, which brings together a number of UK Government Departments and law enforcement organisations with a number of high-profile private sector companies to provide a free, public service. This campaign, launched on 27 October, is targeted at micro business and consumers and is primarily aimed at educating internet users in safer and more secure use of computers and the internet.

The Home Office also created, and maintains the 'e-tailing mini site', which forms part of the crime reduction website. The mini site www.homeoffice.gov.uk/crime/fraud/preventationadvice provides information to help both businesses and consumers protect themselves specifically when using the internet.

Unscrupulous Lending

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action is being taken to protect vulnerable groups in (a) West Yorkshire, (b) Wakefield district and (c) Normanton from unscrupulous and unfair lenders. [37850]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Consumer Credit Bill will improve the regulation and monitoring of consumer credit businesses and extend protections, rights and means of redress for consumers against unscrupulous lenders across the UK.

The DTI has also commissioned research into the scope and extent of illegal money lending in the UK and is considering how to build on the lessons learnt from the pilot scheme on enforcement against illegal money lenders.

A £36 million development fund is also being set aside for third sector lenders as an alternative source of credit for those most at risk. This will help credit unions grow so that they can offer a more widely available alternative to unscrupulous lenders.

Finally, the Financial Inclusion Fund includes £45 million to increase face-face debt advice capacity, with particular regard to the needs of financially excluded consumers.

WTO Ministerial Meeting

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the European Commission's negotiations on (a) the World Trade Organisation's agreement on trade in services and (b) non-agricultural market access prior to the forthcoming WTO Ministerial meeting in Hong Kong. [37499]

Ian Pearson: I refer the hon. Member to the statement to the House made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry today.

Zirconium Silicate (Iran)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 12 December 2005, Official Report, column 1677W, on zirconium silicate (Iran), what the process is by which potential exports of zirconium silicate are identified for the case-by-case consideration referred to; and who is responsible for identifying whether the material in question is to be used in connection with a weapons of mass destruction programme. [38446]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 19 December 2005]: The Export Control Organisation (ECO) in DTI determines whether the goods are on the Control Lists and if not, whether an export licence may still be required under the WMD end-use control (depending on the end-user). ECO is ultimately responsible for this judgment, but will usually seek advice from relevant other Government Departments. If the goods are assessed as licensable, a judgment will then be made about whether a licence should be granted.

TREASURY

Asset Register

Anne Main: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance his Department has given to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on the production of a publicly available asset register. [38129]

John Healey: Section 23.3 of "Government Accounting 2000" www.government-accounting.gov.uk provides Departments, including the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, with guidance for maintaining asset registers. Government Accounting 2000 does not mention whether Departments should make asset registers publicly available, and it is for each Department to decide.

Anne Main: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance his Department has given to other Government Departments on acceptable time limits for the production of asset registers at the end of each financial year; and if he will make a statement. [38130]

John Healey: Section 23.3 of "Government Accounting 2000" www.government-accounting.gov.uk provides Departments with guidance for maintaining asset registers. Departments are expected to maintain and update asset registers continuously. Government Accounting 2000 does not set any specific time limit for the production of asset registers at the end of each financial year.

Cancer/Heart Disease Deaths

Mr. Jenkins: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer what the death rate was for (a) cancer and (b) heart disease in (i) the West Midlands, (ii) Staffordshire, and (iii) Tamworth constituency in the last period for which figures are available. [37824]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Jil Matheson, dated 20 December 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question asking what the death rate was for (a) cancer and (b) heart disease in (i) the West Midlands, (ii) Staffordshire, and (iii) Tamworth constituency in the last period for which figures are available. I am replying in her absence. (37824)

The latest year for which figures are available is 2004 and these are given in the table below. As population estimates are not available for parliamentary constituencies, figures are provided for the two local authorities, Tamworth and Lichfield, which constitute the constituency requested.

Common Agricultural Policy Document

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Department began production of the document 'Vision for a Changed CAP'; which sections of his Department were involved in this work; what the names of the lead officials who contributed to its production are; and from whom outside Government views were sought. [38760]

John Healey: The paper 'A Vision for the Common Agricultural Policy' was a joint publication by HM Treasury and the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. CAP reform has been under continual consideration by the Government for many years, with documents published and views from a wide range of stakeholders considered at many stages; the paper draws on that work. The paper presents for debate a vision for what a sustainable model of European agriculture might look like in the future and the Government looks forward to engaging in a wide and constructive discussion.

The teams in HM Treasury which were principally involved in this work were the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs Team in the Public Services Directorate and the EU Policy Team and the International Poverty Reduction Team in the Macroeconomic Policy and International Finance Directorate. The Civil Service yearbook contains details of lead officials.

Compensation Settlements

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether compensation settlements made with companies working for his Department are tax deductible. [37145]

Dawn Primarolo: A compensation payment made by a company for the purposes of its trade which is not for infraction of law or by way of a penalty will generally be tax deductible provided that it is not capital in nature.

Departmental Consultants

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many secondees there have been to his Department from consultancy firms, including the Big Four accountancy firms, in each of the last three years; and what areas of the Department they have worked in. [37356]

John Healey: The number of secondees to HM Treasury from consultancy firms in each of the last three years is as follows:

	Secondees
2003	4
2004	5
2005	5

Seven have been employed in the Finance, Regulation and Industry Directorate; six in the Budget and Public Finance Directorate; and one in the Government financial Management Directorate.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent on external consultants and advisers by (a) his Department, (b) each (i) non-departmental public body and (ii) executive agency for which his Department is responsible and (c) each independent statutory body, organisation and body financially sponsored by his Department in each year since May 1997. [39080]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to the hon. Member for Hemel Hempstead (Mike Penning) and Cheltenham (Martin Horwood) on 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1571W. The equivalent information in relation to each of the other bodies could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent on advertising by (a) his Department, (b) each (i) non-departmental public body and (ii) executive agency for which his Department is responsible and (c) each independent statutory body, organisation and body financially sponsored by his Department in each year since May 1997. [39082]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow) and the hon. Member for Monmouth (David T.C. Davies) on 6 July 2005, Official Report, column 433W. The equivalent information in relation to each of the other bodies could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many widescreen televisions have been purchased by his Department for use in London headquarters in each of the last five years; and what the cost was in each year. [39141]

John Healey: None.

Departmental Staff (Chronic Back Pain)

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what initiatives are being taken in his Department to help civil servants with chronic back pain. [34979]

John Healey: The Treasury follows the recommendations of the Health and Safety Executive on seating and back problems.

Staff are encouraged to seek medical advice from their general practitioner and those with persistent problems are advised by our occupational health provider.

The Treasury also encourages staff to adopt a healthy work/life balance through the promotion of on site exercise.

Employment Rates

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the percentage employment rate for the working age population was in (a) June to August 1999 and (b) June to August 2004 in each local authority area, listed in descending order according to the difference between the two figures. [38270]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Jil Matheson, dated 20 December 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about employment. I am replying in his absence.(38270)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics of employment from the Labour Force Survey following International Labour Organisation definitions. I am placing a table in the House of Commons Library showing employment rates for people of working age for all local authorities in Great Britain, for the 12 month periods ending February 2000 and December 2004, listed in descending order of the difference between the two rates.

These estimates, as with any from sample surveys, are subject to a margin of uncertainty. Changes in the estimates from year to year should be treated with particular caution.

EU Budget

Mr. McFall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what the UK's contribution to the EU budget will be in each year from 2007 to 2013 under the recently agreed budget. [39618]

Mr. Gordon Brown: The estimated extra costs will be £500 million (0.09 per cent. of public spending) in 2007–08, zero (0 per cent.) in 2008–09, £1.0 billion (0.16 per cent. in 2009–10, and between £1.6 billion and £1.9 billion (0.23 per cent. and 0.26 per cent.) each year between 2010–11 and 2012–13.

The fiscal forecast will be updated as usual at the Budget.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many meetings of the EU (a) Contact Committee on combating money laundering and (b) Insurance Committee have taken place during the UK Presidency of the EU; who presided over each meeting; what other UK representatives were present; what provision was made for representation of the devolved governments; and if he will make a statement. [38778]

John Healey: The Money Laundering Contact Committee met three times during the UK Presidency of the EU. The European Commission is the chair of the committee. At the first two meetings (on 5 July 2005 and 27 September 2005) UK Government officials from HM Treasury represented and led for the UK. For the final meeting of the year on 23 November 2005 officials from both HM Treasury and the Financial Services Authority attended for the UK.

The European Commission has established a new organisational structure for financial services committees. As a result the Insurance Committee has been replaced by the European Insurance and Occupational Pensions Committee (EIOPC). The committee is chaired by the European Commission.

Treasury officials usually represent the UK at EIOPC meetings although HM Treasury may ask the Financial Services Authority to attend alongside its officials to provide technical assistance. There has been one EIOPC meeting during the UK Presidency of the EU, on 2 December 2005. On this occasion, one official from HM Treasury and one official from the Financial Services Authority attended the meeting.

In preparation for the meetings of these European committees, the Government consults as necessary with all interested parties. Devolved Administrations are also consulted before the UK agrees to any major European policy decisions.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many meetings of the EU (a) Advisory Committee on state aid for the application of Articles 92 and 93 of the EC treaty to certain categories of horizontal state aid (exemption), (b) Advisory Committee on state aid on the arrangements for applying Article 93 of the EC treaty (procedure) and (c) Banking Advisory Committee have taken place during the UK presidency of the EU; who presided over each meeting; what other UK representatives were present; what provision was made for representation of the devolved Governments; and if he will make a statement. [38811]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

There have been three European Commission convened multilateral meetings on state aid with member states over the course of the UK presidency: to discuss the draft regional aid guidelines 2007–13; to discuss the Commission's innovation and state aid communication; and the follow up to the council conclusions on state aid.

These were chaired by the Commission, and the UK delegation was led by DTI, and in the case of the latter multilateral, HMT also attended as part of the UK delegation. Representatives of OFT attended the meeting as guests of the Commission (they presented at the meeting) but were not part of the official UK delegation.

While the Commission has exclusive competence in the area of state aid, and it is a reserved matter for the UK Government, we do consult extensively with colleagues in the devolved administrations, and for these meetings the UK line was agreed prior to the meetings, the outcomes of which were reported back to the devolved administrations.

With respect to the third part of the question, the Commission has established a new organisational structure for financial services committees. As a result the Banking Advisory Committee has now become a Lamfalussy Committee. It has been renamed as the European Banking Committee (EEC). EBC is chaired by a senior official from the Commission.

There have been two EEC's during the period of the UK presidency of the EU. The UK was represented by two officials from HM Treasury.

Financial services is a reserved matter for the UK Government and Treasury officials represent the UK at EBC meetings. HM Treasury has regular contacts with significant financial services centres throughout the UK to inform the position of the UK at these meetings.

European Bank for Reconstruction and Development

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether all benefits paid to UK nationals since 1991 from the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development's pension schemes have been subject to UK income tax. [39231]

John Healey: A payment made by the bank from the bank's funds to enable a retiring employee to purchase a pension is, as an emolument of his employment, exempted from UK income tax by paragraph 14 of Statutory Instrument 1991 No. 757 (The European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (Immunities and Privileges) Order 1991). Retirement income arising from the investment of the payment is liable to income tax in the normal way.

External Contractors

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the research commissioned externally by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in the last year for which information is available; which external contractor was commissioned in each case; what the cost was of each research project; how long it took to complete each project; and if he will make a statement. [38344]

John Healey: The information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Fuel Duty

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been raised in fuel duty in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) diesel and (b) petrol. [38827]

John Healey: Historic duty revenue for diesel and petrol can be found on page three of the HM Revenue and Customs Hydrocarbon Oils Bulletin, a copy of which can be found on a HMRC website at: http://www.uktradeinfo.com/index.cfm?task=bullhydro

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the rates of duty for each year since 1997 for (a) low sulphur diesel and (b) rebated diesel fuel. [38882]

John Healey: Historic rates of duty for low sulphur diesel and rebated diesel fuel can be found on page 4 of the HM Revenue and Customs Hydrocarbon Oils Bulletin, a copy of which is available on the HMRC website at: http://www.uktradeinfo.com/index.cfm?task=bullhydro.

The effective rate of duty on rebated diesel fuel has been increased by 1.22 pence per litre from midnight on pre-Budget report, 5 December 2005.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the illegal trade in rebated diesel fuel (a) in each year since 1997 and (b) in each of the next five years; and if he will make a statement; [38883]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact of the UK oils fraud strategy; whether he will publish his findings; what measures he uses to determine the impact of the strategy; how often he reviews the impact of the strategy; and; if he will make a statement. [38924]

John Healey: The UK Oils Strategy is assessed annually and estimates of the illicit market share, revenue loss and methodology are published in "Measuring Indirect Tax Losses", which is published alongside the PER.

When the UK Oils Strategy was introduced in 2001 the illicit market was estimated at 6 per cent. (the majority of which is attributed to the illegal trade in rebated diesel fuel) and without the strategic measures the problem would increase by 1 per cent. year on year.

The latest estimates indicate that in 2004 illicit market share was 4 per cent. and that HMRC is on track to meet the PSA target of 2 per cent. by 2006.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the duty payable on (a) gas oil and (b) fuel oil in each year since 1997. [38929]

John Healey: Historic duty receipts for gas oil and fuel oil can be found on page 3 of the HM Revenue and Customs Hydrocarbon Oils Bulletin, a copy of which is available on the HMRC website at: http://www.uktradeinfo.com/index.cfm7task-bullhydro

Home Information Packs

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the likely impact of the introduction of home information packs on (a) the housing market and (b) the UK economy. [36825]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

There is no reason to believe that the introduction of home information packs will have an adverse effect on the housing market. These reforms are designed to improve the home buying process by making it more transparent and reducing the current high rate of transaction failure. A more efficient system will have clear benefits for the housing market and the UK economy. The information in the pack will help achieve the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's goal of sustainable home ownership, by ensuring that buyers are not faced with unexpected repairs and other commitments they cannot afford. A more efficient housing market will also facilitate greater flexibility and labour mobility. The partial regulatory impact assessment on home information packs shows that the cost of the new system will be broadly neutral and a copy of this has been deposited in the Library of the House. The only new cost being imposed on the system overall is the cost of a home condition report in a proportion of transactions. Any new and additional costs will be offset by savings from a reduction in wasted costs that are currently running at over £1 million per day.

Infant Mortality

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the infant mortality rate has been since 2002 in each primary care trust in England. [38320]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Jil Matheson, dated 20 December 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking for the infant mortality rate in each Primary Care Organisation in England since 2002. I am replying in her absence. (38320)

The most recent year for which figures are available is 2004. Figures requested for the years 2002–2004 are given in the attached table which I am also placing in the House of Commons Library.

Media Monitoring

Philip Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, how much the Department has spent on media monitoring activities in each of the last eight financial years. [35628]

John Healey: The Treasury's spending on media monitoring since 2002–03 is as follows:

£000

	Amount
2002–03	351
2003–04	391
2004–05	345

Because of a change in the Treasury's accounting system in 2002–03, information in relation to the earlier years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Devine: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many companies in Livingston were reported via the National Minimum Wage Helpline for failing to comply with national minimum wage legislation in 2004. [38433]

Dawn Primarolo: National Minimum Wage statistical data is not disaggregated to constituency level.

North Sea Gas

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment his Department has made of the effects of an increase in the supplementary North sea charge to 20 per cent. on future exploration in the North sea continental shelf; [38486]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the effects of an increase in the supplementary North sea charge to 20 per cent. on the volume of gas extracted from the North sea continental shelf in the (a) short, (b) medium and (c) longer term. [38487]

John Healey: The changes announced in the pre-Budget report were subject to detailed analysis to ensure that the North sea tax regime delivers the Government's objectives of striking the right balance between oil producers and consumers, by promoting investment and ensuring fairness for taxpayers.

Office for National Statistics

Adam Afriyie: To ask Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether a racial impact assessment was carried out before the Office for National Statistics (ONS) changed the mid-year population methodology in 2002; and what consultation was undertaken by ONS before making this change; [38552]

(2) whether he has plans to change the methodology used to determine (a) inward and (b) international net migration for use in mid-year population estimate. [38558]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 20 December 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking (a) whether a racial impact assessment was carried out before making changes to the mid-year population estimates methodology in 2002; and what consultation was undertaken before making these changes and (b) whether any changes are planned to the methodology used to determine migration for use in the mid-year population estimates. I am replying in her absence. (38552 & 38558)

No significant changes were made to the methodology used to calculate mid-year population estimates in 2002. The estimates published in 2002 were the mid-2001 population estimates and these were the first mid-year population estimates to use the 2001 Census results. The standard 'cohort component' methodology was used, in that Census data were updated to reflect births, deaths, migration, and ageing of the population between the date of the Census and the mid-year point (approximately 9 weeks). In a Census year the mid-year estimates are rebased on the most recent Census before the method is applied.

The most recent significant change to the way that the mid-year population estimates are compiled was made in 2000, and applies to the mid-1999 and subsequent estimates. This was in respect of the internal-migration component of the population estimates. This change was widely consulted on before introduction. It was extensively peer-reviewed both within the Office for National Statistics (ONS) and by external academic and local authority experts. The then Liaison Group on Population Statistics (now the Central Local information Partnership (CLIP) Population Subgroup) was also fully consulted on the change. This change, in simplified terms, introduced the use of patient records to allocate migration within (former) health authorities instead of electoral roll information. This was widely thought to be a more reliable method for calculating internal migration. This change was documented in Population Trends 101. No specific racial impact assessment was carried out as part of this methodological change. However, consultation confirmed the recommendation that the methodology should be implemented to improve the quality of population estimates.

A detailed description of the current methodology used to estimate population and the methodology used in a 'Census year' is published in "Making a Population Estimate in England and Wales". This document also describes the principal changes that have been made to the methodology over time. The document is published here:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=575

ONS is currently undertaking a major project to research improvements to migration and population statistics (IMPS). Some of the major strands included in this project are the estimation of international migration at the national level, the sub-national distribution of international migration, and the estimation of internal migration. Currently ONS has no plans to implement significant changes to the methodology used in the calculation of mid-2005 population estimates as research and evaluation is ongoing. (Mid-2005 population estimates are due to be published in August 2006.) However, this current position is subject to possible change. Before any changes are implemented, they will be carefully researched, evaluated and where possible assessed for impact. Any changes will be introduced in a planned manner and they will be announced in advance, in accordance with the National Statistics Code of Practice.

In response to the Race Relations Act 2000, ONS has published a Race Equality Scheme which is published on the National Statistics Website at:

www.statistics.gov.uk/CCI/SearchRes.asp?term=race+equality&x=10&y=9.

Palestinian Economy

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his speech at the Treasury and World Bank conference to promote the economy in Palestinian territories, how much new money his Department is making available for this initiative; and what assistance he plans to provide to the private sector firms. [39271]

John Healey: HM Treasury does not provide direct financial support to the Palestinian territories. UK overseas aid is provided via the Department for International Development and through the EU. In 2005–06 total UK contributions will be $108 million.

As well as co-hosting a conference on 13 December 2005 with the World Bank which focused on Palestinian economic growth through the private sector, the Chancellor has built support under the UK's presidency of the EU for an international loan guarantee scheme to improve access to finance for small firms.

Pay Supplements

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what the value is of (a) pay supplements, (b) bonuses and (c) other incentive packages that are payable in his Department on the basis of geographic location; how many people are in receipt of each payment; and what the total cost to his Department of each payment was in 2004–05. [35928]

John Healey: HM Treasury is based in Central London and paid £2,000 p.a. London allowance to 81 staff in SCS Payband 1 during 2004–05. The total cost to the Department was £208,539 (0.4 per cent.) of the pay bill.

PAYE

Mark Durkan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many pay-as-you earn accounts have been transferred out of Foyle House Tax Office in the last three years; to what other offices the accounts were transferred; and if he will make a statement. [39269]

John Healey: Londonderry is one of eight offices forming the Northern Ireland Counties Area. Areas do not keep statistics on the number of individual Pay As You Earn records transferred or where those records are transferred to.

Personal Debt

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average personal (a) unsecured debt and (b) total debt was as a percentage of income in each year since 1997. [38474]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 20 December 2005:

The information requested is shown in the table below. The data for debt and households' gross disposable income used in the calculations are for the combined household and non-profit institutions serving households (NPISH) sectors. The information for the household sector is not available separately. The denominator in the calculations is the population aged 16+

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average total personal debt servicing level as a percentage of income was for each year since 1998; and if he will make a statement. [38750]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 20 December 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what the average total personal debt servicing level as a percentage of income was for each year since 1998. I am replying in her absence. (38750)

Police Force Funding

Pete Wishart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much extra funding in (a) cash, (b) real and (c) percentage terms was made available by his Department to (i) the Metropolitan police and (ii) other police forces in England and Wales to fund the policing of international summits, conferences and state visits hosted by Her Majesty's Government since 1997, broken down by event. [38498]

Mr. Des Browne: The Home Office manage policing for England and Wales and costs for events of this nature are managed within departmental spending allocations. The Treasury has made no direct transfers to forces. However, the Treasury did provide specific funding of £20 million to the Scottish Executive to assist with the policing costs of the 2005 G8 summit in Scotland.

Pre-Budget Report

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on the UK economy of taxation changes announced in the pre-Budget report. [38601]

John Healey: When developing taxation policy, the Government takes account of a wide range of factors, including economic effects. The Government's approach to taxation balances the need to finance better quality public services, deliver fairness and promote sustainable development and economic activity while at the same time ensuring that the UK benefits from the advantages of being a relatively lightly taxed economy.

Public Relations Companies

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the public relations companies that have had contracts with (a) his Department, (b) each (i) non-departmental public body and (ii) executive agency for which his Department is responsible and (c) independent statutory bodies, organisations and bodies financially sponsored by his Department and other such organisations since May 1997. [39081]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by the Economic Secretary (Mr. Lewis) to the hon. Members for Hemel Hempstead (Mr. Penning) and Cheltenham (Martin Norwood) on 2 December 2005, Official Report, column 803W. Further analysis could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public-Private Partnerships

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether it is the Government's policy to fund additional costs arising out of the seven and a half year break clause in public/private partnership contracts. [36759]

John Healey: Variation mechanisms in PPP/PFI contracts are specific to each contract. Changes in costs from variations to PPP/PFI contracts would be for the account of the procuring authority that has entered into the contract.

Rebated Diesel Fuel

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the timetable is for the re-negotiation of the EU derogation on rebated diesel fuel; and if he will make a statement; [38912]

(2) what recent discussions he has had with (a) ministerial colleagues and (b) EU transport Ministers about the re-negotiation of the EU derogation on rebated diesel fuel; and if he will make a statement; [38913]

(3) what the Government's policy is on the EU derogation on rebated diesel fuel; and if he will make a statement. [38918]

John Healey: The UK does not require a derogation to charge a reduced rate of duty on rebated gas oil. The Energy Products Directive (EPD), however, prohibits the use of rebated gas oil in leisure boats for private use, and the UK enjoys a derogation from this provision. This derogation expires at 31 December 2006 and can be renewed only with the unanimous agreement of the Council.

Officials from HM Treasury and HM Revenue and Customs are in regular contact with officials at the European Commission about this matter.

We have already announced in the pre-Budget report that we are minded to apply for an extension of this derogation. We will issue an initial regulatory impact assessment on the effects of ending the derogation early next year and this document will be the basis for further information gathering and discussions.

Road Haulage Industry

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were employed in the road haulage industry in each year since 1997. [38648]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 20 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the number of people employed in road haulage. (38648)

The attached table provides information showing the number of jobs in the road haulage industry for each year from 1997 to 2004; the latest year for which information is available.

These estimates are from the Annual Business Inquiry and the Annual Employment Survey and, as with any sample survey, are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

Number of employee jobs in the road haulage[1] industry: United Kingdom; 1997 to 2004.

1998	282
1999	277
2000	274

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether a case where a tax credit recipient had been told by HM Revenue and Customs staff on the helpline that the award was correct even though the recipient believed there to be an error would pass the Revenue's test of reasonableness for the writing off of overpayments. [25253]

Dawn Primarolo: Where a claimant disputes a tax credits overpayment on the grounds of mis-advice, HM Revenue and Customs can review the call records. In reviewing the call record HMRC would decide whether the claimant had provided the full information to the Helpline advisor at the time of the call that enabled the advisor to provide accurate advice to the claimant. If it is found that a claimant was mis-advised by a Helpline advisor, that overpayment would be written off.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the administration costs of research and development tax credits in the last year for which information is available; and if he will make a statement; [38345]

(2) what estimate he has made of the administration costs of vaccines research relief in the last year for which information is available; and if he will make a statement. [38346]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him to his previous question on 1 November 2005, Official Report, column 991W.

Tax Returns

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals used the HM Revenue and Customs online service to complete an online self-assessment in each year between 2002 and 2004. [36281]

Dawn Primarolo: The number of returns received electronically was:

Year of receipt	Self-assessment returns received electronically
2001–02	419,236
2002–03	705,690
2003–04	1,107,004
2004–05	1,633,347

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many complaints he has received on the operation of the online self assessment tax return form since 6 April 2003; and what measures are in place to correct problems with the operation of such forms. [36296]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor of the Exchequer has received 19 complaints in connection with the operation of the online self assessment tax return form since 6 April 2003.

The Online-Services Helpdesk provides support for users of the online self assessment form and takes action to deal with any problems as they arise. In addition, HMRC has a rolling programme to improve and enhance the online service for its customers.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a greater range of relevant services, including increasing the use of public and private partnerships specialising in online self-assessments, to help achieve HM Revenue and Customs target to obtain 35 per cent. of self-assessment returns electronically by 2007–08. [36300]

Dawn Primarolo: There is a delicate balance to be struck between providing a greater range of services, enhance existing services, and provide increased capacity and resilience of the online services.

The Department has worked closely with the public and private sector since the Self Assessment online service was introduced in 2000.

The HMRC Self Assessment online service was created in close consultation with the software industry and in 2003, we advertised in "Government Opportunities" and encouraged potential Self Assessment filing partners to come forward. Various initiatives have since been established with independent software vendors, payroll companies and financial organisations. Equal prominence is given to third party software products on the Inland Revenue website.

An advertisement was published in December 2005 in "The Banker" sought approaches from banks interested in developing innovative methods of enabling their customers to meet tax obligations.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent steps HM Revenue and Customs has taken to encourage UK individuals to file their tax returns on-line; and what further steps are planned. [36301]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC has encouraged take-up of its online services with an active marketing campaign over the past four years. The online services message is also the predominant message in much of the Department's other marketing activity. For example, the Self Assessment campaign now includes a stand-alone television advertisement focusing on our online services, as well as several print and radio advertising campaigns with the same message.

Additionally, all paper tax returns promote the use of online filing

We plan to continue with the specific marketing activities mentioned above. Going forward the Department's plans and activities will be shaped by Lord Carter's Review of HMRC Online Services. This report is expected to be finalised in early spring 2006.

Unemployment

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people (a) are unemployed and (b) were unemployed in March in each parliamentary constituency ranked in order of the percentage change between the two dates. [38922]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 20 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about unemployment.

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics of unemployment from the Labour Force Survey following International Labour Organisation definitions. However for small areas such as parliamentary constituencies, there is no suitable data available for a comparison between now and March 2005.

However, ONS also compiles statistics for local areas of people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA). I am placing a table in the House of Commons Library showing the numbers of JSA claimants for all constituents for March 2005 and November 2005 listed in order of percentage difference between the two figures.

Changes between the two dates will be affected by seasonal influences which affect different areas in different ways.

VAT

Mr. Spring: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of Article 49 of the EC Treaty concerning the free movement of services on his Department's proposed policy changes for repayment of VAT under the 8th and 13th EC directives; [38175]

(2) whether under his Department's proposed policy changes for repayment of VAT under the 8th and 13th directives a hotel invoice made out in the name and address of the employee will be sufficient to allow UK registered VAT payers to deduct as input tax all the VAT which they incur on hotel accommodation for that employee while he is away from his principal place of work on a business trip. [38176]

Dawn Primarolo: I have written to the hon. Member about this matter.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will consider reducing the rate of VAT payable on home security measures for those who have been the victims of crime. [38624]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 19 December 2005]: A reduced VAT rate of 5 per cent. already applies to certain grant-funded installations of security goods, such as locks, bolts and smoke alarms, for people aged 60 or over and for those in receipt of certain benefits, allowances or tax credits.

All taxes are kept under review and changes are announced by the Chancellor as part of the Budget process. To date the Government has been sparing in its use of VAT reduced rates and has only applied them when we are convinced that they offer the best-targeted and most efficient support for our social objectives compared with other options.

Outside the VAT system the Government has taken a number of measures designed to reduce crime and support improvements in domestic security. For example, in 2004 we launched a crime reduction publicity campaign, communicating home security advice across a variety of media to audiences in high crime areas.

Voting Statistics

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the population is registered to vote in each ward of each constituency in Wales, listed in descending order for each constituency. [38272]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 20 December 2005:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning what percentage of the population is registered to vote in each Ward in Wales. (38272)

I am placing a table giving the requested information in the House of Commons Library.

The closest available geography to electoral wards, for which population estimates are available, is Census Area Statistics (CAS) wards. This geography was created for outputs from the 2001 Census and is based mainly on 2003 electoral wards. It is necessary to convert electorate counts to the CAS ward geography and therefore the electorate counts are not necessarily consistent with data published elsewhere.

The latest available population data available at ward level is for mid-2002, published in April 2004. The ward electorate counts are for December 2002 parliamentary electors, including attainers. No adjustment has been made to reflect the difference between these two timepoints. There are a number of wards that are split by parliamentary constituency i.e. they fall within two or more parliamentary constituencies. These are shown by an asterisk * alongside their ward name, and appear under both constituencies (except where the split is across the English/Welsh border). Electorate and population figures for the whole ward are shown. Some wards will therefore be double counted. It is not possible to split the data for these wards.

There are a number of limitations with the data that mean that some care should be taken with interpretation of the results.

There is inevitably some double counting of the registered electorate as electoral registration officers vary in how quickly they remove people from the registers after they have moved away from an area or after they have died. In addition, people can register in more than one place.

The population data are estimates and as such are subject to a margin of confidence. This margin of confidence is proportionately larger for ward level estimates than for local authority level estimates. These estimates have been published with the status of "experimental statistics". Therefore, the estimates, and figures derived from them, should be treated with some care.

Finally, there a number of other definitional differences between electorates and population estimates. Population estimates include all those usually resident irrespective of nationality, whereas the parliamentary electorate excludes foreign nationals (but Commonwealth and Irish citizens are included). Overseas electors are included in electorate data but not population estimates. Comparable ward counts of local government electors are not readily available.

There is a relatively small number of wards (11) where the electorate counts are more than 10 per cent. greater than the population estimate. The majority of such cases are likely to be attributable to a limitation in the methodology used to convert electorate counts to a CAS ward geography, though the other limitations set out above will also have an effect.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMISSION

National Audit Office

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Chairman of the Public Accounts Commission when the National Audit Office last examined expenditure on the BBC website. [34577]

Mr. Alan Williams: The National Audit Office does not have a general statutory right to examine how the BBC spends licence fee money. However, under an arrangement agreed between the Government and the BBC in 2003, the National Audit Office is undertaking a programme of six value for money reviews, which have been commissioned by the BBC Governors' Audit Committee. The expenditure on the BBC's website is not covered by this programme of reviews.

Three of the six reviews have been published to date—on the BBC's investment in Freeview, the White City 2 development, and the performance measurement framework for public service broadcasting. The remaining reviews will cover the BBC's overhead definitions, outsourcing arrangements, and risk management.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Chairman of the Public Accounts Commission if he will make a statement on the Commission's consideration of the NAO's future workspace requirements. [39413]

Mr. Alan Williams: At its meeting on 13 December the Public Accounts Commission considered a memorandum from the National Audit Office setting out its proposals for securing its future workspace requirements. These had been drawn up taking into account the views expressed during informal discussions between the NAO and myself, as Chairman of the Commission, and the hon. Member for Gainsborough, in his capacity as Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee.

The NAO acquired its existing headquarters building in Buckingham Palace Road, London SW1 in 1984 for £11 million, based on a 127 year lease at a peppercorn rent. Its interest in the building is now thought to be worth about £22 million.

The NAO's case for a significant upgrading of its headquarters accommodation rests on two main factors:

- the partial refurbishment of the NAO's current building in Buckingham Palace Road, carried out prior to their taking occupancy in 1986, will shortly reach the end of its 20-year life expectancy
- a full condition survey of the building in 2003 concluded that the NAO "needed to invest significant expenditure in terms of the necessary, and in some cases urgent, renewal of existing elements of the building fabric and services, including the heating and cooling systems, windows, much of the roof covering and other features of a health and safety concern"; these remedial works would need to be carried out within the constraints imposed by the listed status of the central core of the building.

Faced with these conclusions, the NAO has reviewed the options available to it to meet its future accommodation needs, including:

- a programme of restoration and repair of the building in its existing configuration
- a full refurbishment of the building designed to produce "a more modern, flexible and efficient workspace", based on open plan principles conducive to flexible team-working
- the sale of the NAO's interest in the current building, and relocation to another site.

Taking all these options into consideration, the NAO has concluded that a phased programme of refurbishment will provide the best value for money solution, and has approached the Commission both for approval in principle for such a course and for authority to incur expenditure on preparing a detailed design and firm costings.

The cost of the refurbishment is provisionally estimated at £150 million over 30 years, as against relocation options ranging from £155 to £250 million. The NAO points out, however, that these figures would need to be offset against current annual expenditure on maintaining and operating the existing BPR building of some £4.4 million, which, discounted over 30 years, would equate to about £81 million. So the net cost of all the options should be reduced by that amount.

Expressed in terms of additional net resource requirements (and thus the direct impact on the NAO's Estimate) the NAO's preferred option of refurbishment of the BPR building produces the following estimated figures for years 1 to 3 (although the breakdown between capital and revenue may well change following detailed planning):

£ million

	Year 1 (2007–08)	Year 2 (2008–09)	Year 3 (2009–10)	Total for years
Capital	30	15.25	15.25	60.50
Revenue	9.05	7.07	8.78	24.90
Total	39.05	22.32	24.03	85.40

By contrast, the relocation options would involve an initial negative capital expenditure, as the cost of any necessary works would be more than offset by the proceeds of the NAO's interest in the current building. Thereafter, however, the stream of annual costs arising from relocation would be significantly greater than those for refurbishment reflecting mainly the difference between the current peppercorn and future commercial rents.

In preparation for the Commission's meeting on 13 December, both the hon. Member for Gainsborough and myself visited the Buckingham Palace Road site. We saw not only the current cramped layout and run-down condition of the building, but also the results of a trial refurbishment and conversion to open plan operation of part of the sixth floor. This reorganisation of the workspace represents a stark contrast with the rest of the building and we understand it has already shown tentative results in terms of improved staff morale and efficiency.

We reported these findings to the Commission. Having taken oral evidence from the Comptroller and Auditor General and the Assistant Auditor General responsible for the building project, the Commission accepted the NAO's case for a substantial upgrade of its workspace. Specifically, the Commission agreed:

(i) to approve in principle the NAO's plans to refurbish its Buckingham Palace Road headquarters, subject to project costs being confirmed within a reasonable range of the estimates and projections contained in the NAO's memorandum to the Commission; in time for submission to the Commission for consideration as part of the NAO's next Corporate Plan, for 2007–08 to 2009–10;

(ii) to authorise the NAO to incur expenditure of approximately £500,000 on the preparation of detailed costings for the refurbishment project to include provision in its Estimate for 2006–07 for any of the relevant expenditure falling in that year.

In order to ensure that the NAO's business case is as robust as possible against other options, the Commission has asked it to carry out a cost/benefit analysis of the option of relocating the headquarters building to a north of England location. We have also asked for a detailed explanation of the NAO's reasons for rejecting the option of relocating to a building of similar age on the Civil Estate in London SW1.

The NAO's memorandum setting out its case for the refurbishment option, and the transcript of the evidence given by the Comptroller and Auditor General at the meeting on 13 December are available on the Commission website, at www.parliament.uk

Affordable Homes

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many affordable homes were provided by housing associations in (a) Lancashire and (b) Ribble Valley in each year since 1997. [35730]

Yvette Cooper: The number of affordable homes provided by housing associations in Lancashire and Ribble Valley in each year since 1997, as reported by the Housing Corporation are in the following table. Figures show the number of dwellings provided through the Approved Development Programme, this includes new dwellings built, as well as acquisitions.

	Ribble Valley	Lancashire
1997–98	19	549
1998–99	16	499
1999–2000	15	508
2000–01	34	555
2001–02	16	350
2002–03	0	104
2003–04	0	278
2004–05	8	198

Arm's Length Management

Jim Cousins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to publish the report of the Arm's Length Management Organisation Review Group. [37430]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of The Deputy Prime Minister expects to make the findings from this review group public in the new year.

Buildings (Energy Performance)

Peter Law: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what progress has been made with training arrangements for building professionals to ensure proper support for monitoring and measuring in buildings required by the EU Energy Performance in Buildings Directive (2002/91/EC); whether he expects sufficient skilled building inspectors to be in place when the directive enters into force in January 2006; and if he will make a statement. [35782]

Yvette Cooper: There is a three year derogation period within the directive to apply fully the requirements for energy performance certificates and plant inspection. In the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Press Notice of 13 September, the Government signalled that it proposed to use this derogation as there will not be sufficient numbers of suitably qualified inspectors in place by January 2006.

We are therefore working with stakeholders to muster a cadre of inspectors to support a phased programme of implementation. The introduction of the home inspection pack in June 2007 and associated training of home inspectors will cover requirements of the directive for the marketed sales of dwellings. We expect to make a further statement on the implementation of the directive in the new year.

Correspondence

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 197W, on correspondence, how many letters he wrote in the same time period in (a) 2004 and (b) 2003. [37815]

Jim Fitzpatrick: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has written over 800 letters from May to November in both 2003 and 2004.

Departmental Assets

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many assets were removed from his Department's asset register between 2003–04 and 2004–05. [38123]

Jim Fitzpatrick: This information comes from our accounting system, and it will take time to convert this into a suitable user-friendly format. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects this to be completed in January.

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister why his Department did not produce a public copy of its asset register for financial years ending (a) 2003, (b) 2004 and (c) 2005. [38128]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Departmental Asset Registers were published for the first time in 1997, and again in 2001 as part of the National Asset Register exercise led by HM Treasury. There is no central requirement for Departments to publish an asset register, and given until recently our relatively small asset base, no business reason for us to do so.

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 581W, on the asset register, when he expects his Department's asset register for (a) 2003, (b) 2004 and (c) 2005 to be placed in the Library. [38174]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I expect the Register to be made available in the Library of the House before Christmas.

Departmental Policy

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the Department's policy on the use of (a) broadcast, (b) print and (c) internet media analysis. [37776]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM), like other Government Departments, analyses coverage in the press and broadcast media as part of their day-to-day operations. This is an important part of best practice in communications (in both public and private sectors) as it enables us to measure the impact of our communication activities and so helps us manage future activity more effectively.

Our use of media evaluation is covered by the Government Communication Network central guidance on media evaluation (published at http://www.comms.gov.uk/guidance/media/evaluation.htm). ODPM does not commission formal analysis from external contractors but uses in-house resources to produce summaries of media coverage of issues of concern to the Department.

Departmental Reports

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library copies of (a) print, (b) broadcast and (c) internet media reports undertaken for his Department since 2002. [37775]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM), like other Government Departments, analyses coverage in the press and broadcast media as part of their day-to-day operations. This is an important part of best practice in communications (in both public and private sectors) as it enables us to measure the impact of our communication activities and so helps us manage future activity more effectively.

Our use of media evaluation is covered by the Government Communication Network central guidance on media evaluation (published at http://www.comms.gov.uk/guidance/media/evaluation.htm). ODPM does not commission analysis from external contractors but uses in-house resources to produce summaries of media coverage of issues of concern to us.

Media reports produced by ODPM are internal documents and not in a form which could be published.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost to his Department was of (a) broadcast, (b) print and (c) internet media analysis in the latest year for which figures are available. [37777]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) does not commission formal analysis from external contractors but uses in-house resources to produce summaries of media coverage of issues of concern to the Department. The cost for this activity is covered by the running costs for the directorate and can not be disaggregated. ODPM does commission national and local press cuttings from the Cabinet Office and from a private supplier and the costs of these are as follows:

Costs (£000—exclusive of VAT)

	2004–05	2005–06[1]
National press cuttings	204.9	110.1
Regional press cuttings	74.6	39.4
Media Monitoring Unit (subscription to Cabinet Office)	49.0	26.5

[1] 1 April to 30 September

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether his Department has undertaken research into reporting in the (a) broadcast, (b) print and (c) internet media of the hon. Member for Brent, East since 5 May. [37849]

Jim Fitzpatrick: No such research has been undertaken.

Departmental Travel

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been spent by his Department on taxi travel in the 2005–06 financial year; and what proportion of such travel was undertaken in each nation and region of the United Kingdom, including London. [37468]

Jim Fitzpatrick: From the start of the financial year 2005–06 to 15 December 2005 the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister spent £71,735 on taxi travel. Details of location visited are not recorded.

Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether a Minister in his Department is planned to be nominated to take responsibility for liaison with the Office for Disability Issues; and if he will make a statement. [37067]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Anne McGuire, the Minister for Disabled People, has overall responsibility for the Office for Disability Issues (ODI). The Minister for Disabled People chairs a cross-government steering group which includes ministerial representatives from the Department of Health, Department for Education and Skills, Department for Transport, Department of Trade and Industry and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. The Minister in the ODPM nominated to take responsibility for liaison with the ODI will be myself, as the ODPM Minister with responsibility for equality and diversity issues.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the initial activity undertaken by his Department in response to those recommendations in the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People where lead responsibility was assigned to all Government Departments. [37068]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office for Disability Issues (ODI) will report annually to the Prime Minister on cross-government progress in implementing the Strategy Unit report, "Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People". The first report is due to be published by summer 2006. It will contain an assessment of the initial activity undertaken by the ODI to fulfil its specific responsibilities, which require the active involvement of other Government Departments. It will also include an assessment of the initial activity undertaken by Government Departments to fulfil the responsibilities they have outside of the ODI remit.

e-Enablement

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been spent on e-enablement of local government services, broken down by local authority. [31558]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 24 November 2005, Official Report, columns 2232–33W.

Empty Properties

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the number of empty public sector (a) residential properties and (b) commercial and industrial properties in each Government office region of England. [26921]

Yvette Cooper: The number of empty public sector and RSL residential properties by Government office region is shown in the following table. Additionally this is shown as a percentage of all dwellings in the area. Information on the number of empty public sector commercial and industrial properties is not held centrally. These include short term vacancies.

Energy Efficiency/Performance

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what progress on energy efficiency has been made in relation to (a) building and (b) planning in each year since 1997. [38848]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has raised Building Regulations energy efficiency standards in 2002 and 2005 and will do so again in 2006. From next April standards will be improved by around 20 per cent. for new dwellings and up to 27 per cent. for other new buildings to levels that are up to 40 per cent. higher than those in place in 1997. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is also working with the construction industry, including building control bodies, to facilitate compliance.

We published in September 2004 a broad ranging Better Practice advisory document, the "Planning Response to Climate Change". This supports the core policy in Planning Policy Statement (PPS)1, "Delivering Sustainable Development", published in February 2005, which sets out how Regional Planning Bodies and local planning authorities should ensure that development plans contribute to global sustainability by addressing the causes and potential impacts of climate change.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the 2003 EU directive on energy performance will be implemented. [37578]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 13 December 2005]: In the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's (ODPM) Press Notice of 13 September 2005, changes were announced to the Building Regulations and the implementation of the technical provisions of the EU Energy Performance of Buildings Directive. These measures come into effect in April 2006.

There is a three-year derogation period within the Directive to apply fully the administrative provisions requiring the provision of information. The Press Notice, signalled that Government proposed to use this derogation and work with stakeholders to muster a cadre of inspectors to support a phased programme of implementation.

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the Government's compliance with the 2003 EU directive on energy performance in buildings; and what level of energy efficiency will have been achieved by 4 January 2006. [38732]

Yvette Cooper: I would draw my honourable friend's attention to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's press notice of 13 September in which it was announced changes to the Building Regulations and the implementation of the technical provisions of the EU energy performance of buildings directive. These measures come into effect in April 2006 and will make a major contribution to the UK's commitment to combat climate change delivering increased energy standards of up to 27 per cent. for new buildings. This is on top of significant improvements in energy efficiency in the 2002 changes to building regulations. There is a three-year derogation period within the directive to apply fully the administrative provisions requiring the provision of information.

We expect to make a further statement on the implementation of the directive in the new year.

EU Flag

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what planning rules apply to flying the EU flag; and what plans there are to change them. [34100]

Yvette Cooper: Under the Town and Country Planning (Control of Advertisements) Regulations 1992, the express consent of the local planning authority is presently required to fly the EU flag.

As previously announced the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will shortly be consulting on new draft control of advertisements regulations which will include a provision which will allow the EU flag to be flown without having to apply to the local authority for express consent. National flags already benefit from this exemption.

Flood Plains (Building)

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidelines have been issued on the building of (a) houses and (b) individual premises on flood plains. [36305]

Yvette Cooper: Planning policy guidance on development and flood risk is contained in PPG25, published in 2001. It aims to ensure that flood risk is taken into account at all stages in the planning process to avoid inappropriate development in areas at risk of flooding and to direct development away from areas at highest risk. On 5 December the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister issued for consultation proposals for a new PPS25 which will strengthen and clarify the policy, and a flooding direction which will provide greater scrutiny for major developments proposed in flood risk areas.

Free Bus Travel Scheme

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many local authorities have a forecast shortfall in excess of £1 million in relation to allocated funding for the free bus travel scheme following announcement of the local government revenue support grants. [38564]

Mr. Woolas: Expenditure on concessionary fares is funded via the formula grant settlement. Formula grant is an unhypothecated block grant. This means that councils are able to spend the money on any services. It is not therefore possible to calculate how much funding has been allocated to each authority with respect to concessionary fares. Budget estimates and decisions are for councils themselves to make.

Freedom of Information Act

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many requests under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 his Department has received regarding its asset register. [38127]

Jim Fitzpatrick: There have been no requests under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 regarding the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's asset register.

Green Belt

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much land within 1997-designated green belt in each region changed to developed use in each year since 1997. [15238]

Yvette Cooper: The available estimates are from Land Use Change Statistics, shown in the following tables. The numbers and table titles are unchanged but the units for the tables headed "New dwellings within 1997 designated green belt", given previously as "hectares", are corrected to "dwellings". The order of the tables has also been changed to follow the order of the questions. The estimates for 2003 are provisional and are subject to revision. Figures are not shown for 1999 as the data received for that year were incomplete. Figures for 1997 to 2000 reflect planning policies and decisions made before this Government took office.

Greenbelt Land

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his planning policy for development of green belt land. [39125]

Yvette Cooper: The Government's planning policy in relation to green belt land is set out in Planning Policy Guidance note 2 (PPG2), "Green Belts". Specifically, there remains a general presumption against inappropriate development in the green belt. Such development should not be approved except in very special circumstances, where it can be shown that the harm to the green belt, and any other harm, is clearly outweighed by other considerations.

Growth Areas Directorate

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions have taken place between officials from the Department's Growth Areas Directorate and officials from the Department for Education and Skills on the provision of a university for north Northamptonshire. [34109]

Yvette Cooper: Northamptonshire recently received a boost to its higher education provision when the University College in Northampton gained the Royal Charter and official university status. This is good news for the communities of Northamptonshire who will benefit from the university located at the heart of the county and the university is looking to expand its provision significantly over the next five years. In addition, the Tresham Institute serves the communities of North Northamptonshire, providing Post-16 education, vocational training and a wide variety of adult learning courses. Tresham is also an associate college of De Montfort university, so offers a range of professional and degree level courses. The institute plans to open a new £20 million campus in Kettering in early 2007 as part of a wider programme to renewal all of its campuses by 2010.

The Milton Keynes-South Midlands sub regional strategy identifies the need to expand higher education resources to serve the increasing education and training needs of the sub-region's population and states that it has a key part to play in the growth of the area. I understand that local growth partners in North Northamptonshire recognise that physical presence by a university is an important element in supporting a broad range of jobs, opportunities and economic development of the area and are in early discussions with education providers to explore how this could be best be strengthened. Officials in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister would expect to be involved in these discussions at the appropriate stage.

Homebuyers Information Pack

Mr. Walker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he plans to postpone the introduction of the Homebuyers Information Pack; and if he will make a statement. [39154]

Yvette Cooper: It was recently announced that Home Information Packs will become mandatory from 1 June 2007, and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has no plans to postpone this date. We have listened to views from across the industry, in order to achieve a date that represents the appropriate balance between the various interests. The Government are satisfied that this date provides the time needed to ensure that home information packs can be introduced successfully throughout England and Wales.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what research he has commissioned into the likely impact of the home information pack on house prices; and if he will make a statement. [39259]

Yvette Cooper: No specific research has been commissioned on this, as there is no reason to believe that the introduction of home information packs will have a significant effect on house prices. The only new cost being imposed on the system overall is the cost of a home condition report in a proportion of transactions. Together with the rest of the information in the pack, this will help to ensure that house prices are set more realistically and buyers are not faced with unexpected repair bills and other commitments they cannot afford. The reforms are designed to improve the home buying process by making it more transparent and reducing the current high rate of transaction failure. A more efficient system will benefit the housing market and the UK economy.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the expected benefits of the Home Information Pack. [39260]

Yvette Cooper: The reforms to the home buying and selling process will benefit the home buying process by making it a better experience for the consumer and by creating a more efficient housing market. In particular, packs will:

Increase consumer satisfaction—nearly nine out of 10 consumers are dissatisfied with the present process.

Increase transparency—at present, key information about the property only becomes available after terms have been agreed.

Reduce the current high transaction failure rate—28 per cent. fail after terms have been agreed.

Reduce the huge abortive costs for consumers—over £350 million spent by consumers on failed transactions.

Speed up the transaction process—sales take twice the time of the European average; HIPs should bring us more into line with overseas experience.

Improve consumer redress—estate agents marketing homes with packs will be required, for the first time, to belong to an approved redress scheme.

Improve the position for first time buyers—they will receive pack information "free", thus reducing the cost of entry into home ownership.

Support sustainable home ownership—information in the pack, on property condition for example, will ensure that buyers are not faced with unexpected repairs and other commitments they cannot afford.

Create a more efficient housing market—thus facilitating greater flexibility and labour mobility.

Deliver the European Directive requirement for sellers to provide energy performance certificates to home buyers. The home condition report in the pack will contain an energy efficiency report and certificate. This will assist the delivery of the Government's target of a 20 per cent. reduction in residential carbon emissions by 2010. The energy efficiency report will identify cost effective ways of improving energy efficiency.

Housing

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average weekly rent for a two-bed (a) registered social landlord and (b) local authority property was in each (i) London borough and (ii) English region in (A) 2001 and (B) 2005. [24267]

Yvette Cooper: The data requested are given in the following tables. On average social rents in London for two bedroom properties in 2004–05 are 44 per cent. of private sector rents.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many vacant dwellings there were in (a) London and (b) each London borough in each of the last five years (i) in total and (ii) as a proportion of all dwellings.

[30739]

Yvette Cooper: The number of empty homes in each London borough and London as a whole for each of the last five years both in actual numbers and as a proportion of all dwellings are tabled as follows. These figures include dwellings which are empty for less than six months, some of them for less than one month. Of the 91,900 empty homes in London, 44,300 have been empty for more than six months. From April local authorities will have new powers to bring empty homes back into use.

Figures for 2002, 2003 and 2004 are based on ODPM's CTB1 return. For 2001 and 2002 the figures are based on a combination of two sources. ODPM's Housing Strategy Statistical return for all tenure types except RSL and the latter comes from the Housing Corporation's Regulatory Statistical Return.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he has had with Sefton council on its proposal to ballot its tenants on the large-scale voluntary transfer of council housing; and what investigations he has conducted into the conduct of the last ballot. [31914]

Yvette Cooper: Ministers in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister have had no discussions with Sefton council on its proposal to ballot tenants. Sefton council have discussed with officials in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister the circumstances surrounding their initial ballot. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not undertaken any investigation into the conduct of that ballot. Sefton council have informed officials of their decision to re-ballot tenants on the large scale voluntary transfer of the Council's housing stock.

Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he has set targets for the total output of social rented housing for (a) 2005–06, (b) 2006–07 and (c) 2007–08. [39128]

Yvette Cooper: Additional funding secured through the Spending Review 2004 will, along with efficiency improvements, provide 75,000 social rented properties over the three years 2005 to 2008, that is, an additional 10,000 homes a year by 2008, a 50 per cent. increase on 2004–05.

Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what level of social housing grant from the Housing Corporation was required to produce one unit of rented accommodation in the latest period for which the information is available. [39129]

Yvette Cooper: In 2004–05, the national average social housing grant allocated per unit of rented accommodation was £64,325.

The cost of a unit of social rented accommodation varies widely, dependent on location, size, or type of property, and other issues. The proportion of that cost paid through social housing grant also varies due to a range of factors.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many new houses have been built in Hereford since 1997; and what percentage of these are classified as affordable housing. [38919]

Yvette Cooper: The information on Hereford alone is not held centrally. Information on housing starts and completions for Herefordshire can be viewed on the housing statistics pages of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website. Herefordshire council's Local Development Framework Annual Monitoring Report 2004–05 published in December 2005 contains information on housing completions for Hereford and on affordable housing for the county. The report is available on the council's website.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact of the level of private enterprise building in Herefordshire on the availability of affordable housing there. [38920]

Yvette Cooper: No such assessment has been made by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. This is primarily a matter for Herefordshire council as the local housing and planning authority. Herefordshire council's Local Development Framework Annual Monitoring Report 2004–05 published in December 2005 contains information relevant to this matter and can be viewed on the council's website.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what progress has been made in his negotiations on the housing market renewal budget for Merseyside for 2006 to 2008. [36889]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 12 December 2005]: Merseyside Housing Market Renewal pathfinder has put forward its bid for funding for 2006 to 2008, alongside other pathfinders. All the proposals are being scrutinised and announcements will be made on the budgets for the next phase when that is concluded.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many new residential dwellings will be built in each of the next 20 years in (a) Gravesham and (b) Kent following the Government's response to Kate Barker's review of Housing Supply. [37525]

Yvette Cooper: The Government responded to Kate Barker's review of Housing Supply on 5 December, outlining its ambition to increase housing delivery in England over the next decade to 200,000 net additions per year, from current delivery of around 150,000 net additions per year.

This policy will inform regional and local plans for housing, however the numbers set out in the response represent Government's ambition nationally. Detailed figures at a local level are determined through statutory planning processes.

Improvement and Development Agency

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the work of the Improvement and Development Agency. [33854]

Mr. Woolas: The Improvement and Development Agency (IDeA) has worked very effectively since its formation in 1997 to support improved performance in local government. Full details of the work of the IDeA can be found on their website at www.idea.gov.uk.

Lifetime Homes Standards

Danny Alexander: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he plans to review the effect of the 1999 guidance on access to dwellings; if he will assess the feasibility of introducing Lifetime Homes standards into building regulations; and if he will make a statement. [37095]

Yvette Cooper: The 1999 guidance on access to dwellings is included in the 1999 edition of Approved Document M of the Building Regulations for England and Wales. Building control for Scotland is a devolved matter. A report on the review of the effect of the guidance on dwellings in the 1999 edition of AD M, is expected to be published on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website next year.

Lifetime Homes is to be included as an element of the proposed code for Sustainable Homes, which is currently being developed for new homes in England but could also be applicable in Wales. It is very important that there is progress on increasing take-up of the Lifetime Homes standard. The Government will monitor take-up and review the need for further regulation. The consultation document on the code has now been published and can be found at:

http://www.odpm.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1162094

Local Government

Mr. Bone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he plans to create a unitary system of local authorities for the whole of England; and if he will make a statement. [31548]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has taken no decisions about whether there should be any reorganisation of the structure of local government. We are currently engaged in a wide ranging debate about the future role, functions and form of local government and as part of this we have now actively sought views on the present two tier structure. We plan to publish a White Paper on the future of local government in the middle of next year and will make any decisions regarding unitary local government at about the same time.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the likely impact of the Local Government Finance Settlement for (a) 2006–07 and (b) 2007–08 on the revenues that will need to be raised through council tax by Norfolk county council in each of those years. [38856]

Mr. Woolas: Under our proposals, Norfolk county council will receive an above average increase in formula grant of £6.2 million (or 3.8 percent.) in 2006–07 and £11.9 million (7.1 percent.) in 2007–08. Grants for specific purposes, which will include the dedicated schools grant where Norfolk will receive £377 million in 2006–07 and £400 million in 2007–08, are in addition to formula grant.

It is for local authorities to set their council tax, not central Government. It has been made clear that, given we have delivered above inflation formula grant increases for local government for ten successive years up to 2007–08, we expect to see an average council tax increase in England of less than 5 percent. in each of the next two years.

Authorities which ignore this message could be leaving themselves exposed to the risk of capping action.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what assessment he has made of the (a) likelihood and (b) extent of service reductions in (i) Norfolk and (ii) all shire counties in England following the Local Government Finance Settlement; [38857]

(2) what assessment he has made of the funding position of Norfolk county council following the Local Government Finance Settlement; and if he will make a statement. [38860]

Mr. Woolas: Consultation on the local government settlement for 2006–07 runs from 5 December 2005 to 11 January 2006. Details of the proposed financial settlement for Norfolk county council and all other authorities in England are available on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website at: http://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/0607/grant.htm. The provision of local services is a matter for Norfolk and all other county councils themselves, bearing in mind their statutory responsibilities.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what representations he has received on the Local Government Finance Settlement relating to (a) Norfolk and (b) all shire counties in England; [38858]

(2) if he will meet the leader of Norfolk county council to discuss the Local Government Finance Settlement as it relates to Norfolk county council. [38859]

Mr. Woolas: The consultation on Government's proposals for the 2006–07 and 2007–08 Local Government Finance Settlements runs from 5 December 2005 to 11 January 2006.To date we have received no written representations on the consultation from Norfolk county council or any other shire county.

I will be meeting a delegation from Norfolk county council on 11 January 2006 to "discuss their response to the settlement consultation.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) whether the current mid-year population estimates will be used in the Local Government Grant Settlement for 2006–07; [38554]

(2) whether mid-year population estimates were used in the calculation of Local Government Grant Allocations for 2005–06. [38562]

Mr. Woolas: Mid-2003 population estimates were used in the 2005–06 Local Government Finance Settlement issued on 27 January 2005.

The Government announced the provisional settlements for 2006–07 and 2007–08 on 5 December 2005. These have used projections of population in 2006 and 2007 as the dominant data drivers of population in the formulae. These population projections are the 2003-based population projections for 2006 and 2007 produced by the Office for National Statistics (ONS).

Mid-2004 population estimates have been used within indicators used in the calculation of top-up formulae.

Marine Bill

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his Department's involvement with preparations for the Marine Bill. [38734]

Yvette Cooper: Preparation of a consultative draft Marine Bill is the responsibility of the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA). The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) is one of a number represented on DEFRA's Management Board for this project. Officials in the ODPM will continue to contribute to the development of the policies to be reflected in the Bill when it is published.

Ministerial Travel

Bob Russell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister on how many occasions since 7 July he has used the London underground in connection with his official duties. [35018]

Jim Fitzpatrick: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has used the London underground on several occasions since the 7 July, but it is not possible to provide precise numbers as no formal records are kept of the trips.

MPs (Outside Appointments)

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by his Department, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [36683]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Information about the political activity of appointees is recorded and published in accordance with the independent Commissioner for Public Appointments' Code of Practice. This shows that the following former hon. Member who left Parliament in 2005 has since been appointed to public bodies sponsored by the Office of The Deputy Prime Minister. The information requested is as follows.

Name	Party	Appointing authority
Candy Atherton	Labour	Minister for Housing and Planning

New University (Northamptonshire)

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions the Growth Areas Directorate within his Department has had with the Department for Education and Skills on the creation of a new university for North Northamptonshire. [38210]

Yvette Cooper: Northamptonshire recently received a boost to its higher education provision when the University College in Northampton gained the Royal Charter and official University status. This is good news for the communities of Northamptonshire who will benefit from the university located at the heart of the County and the university is looking to expand its provision significantly over the next five years. In addition, the Tresham Institute serves the communities of North Northamptonshire, providing Post-16 Education, Vocational Training and a wide variety of Adult Learning Courses. Tresham is also an associate college of De Montfort University, so offers a range of professional and degree level courses. The institute plans to open a new £20 million campus in Kettering in early 2007 as part of a wider programme to renewal all of its campuses by 2010.

The Milton Keynes-South Midlands Sub Regional Strategy identifies the need to expand higher education resources to serve the increasing education and training needs of the Sub-Region's population and states that it has a key part to play in the growth of the area. I understand that local growth partners in North Northamptonshire recognise that physical presence by a university is an important element in supporting a broad range of jobs, opportunities and economic development of the area and are in early discussions with education providers to explore how this could be best be strengthened. Officials in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister would expect to be involved in these discussions at the appropriate stage.

Parish Councils

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the (a) Lathom and (b) Bickerstaff area of West Lancashire constituency will receive notice as to whether it will be allowed to form a parish council. [37420]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of The Deputy Prime Minister has received a petition for a new parish of Lathom South the area of which comprises parts of Bickerstaff, Derby and Skelmersdale South district wards.

In order to create this parish council one of the steps required is for the Electoral Commission to receive information from West Lancashire district council on their consultation about the electoral arrangements in the proposed parish. When this information has been received by ODPM and subject to the satisfactory completion of other processes that need to be undertaken then it should be possible to establish a parish council.

Permitted Development Rights

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the consultation phase on the Government's proposed response to the Lichfield Report on the Operation of Permitted Development Rights (2003) has commenced. [39127]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) commissioned Nathaniel Lichfield and Partners to undertake a review of permitted development rights which was published in September 2003. The ODPM has not formally commented on the report.

Planning Applications (Consultees)

Bob Russell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make it a requirement for water and sewerage companies to be statutory consultees in respect of planning applications and development proposals; and if he will make a statement. [31636]

Yvette Cooper: Water companies are already statutory consultees on regional spatial strategies (RSSs) and local development plan documents (DPDs) since water resource issues are an important consideration in determining the pattern of development.

Under the plan-led system, planning applications are determined in accordance with the development plan (the RSS and DPDs) unless material considerations indicate otherwise.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, has no plans to make water and sewerage companies statutory consultees on individual planning applications. However, if evidence emerged that the current approach was not working further consideration would be given to the matter.

Planning Decisions

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many and what percentage of planning decisions in (a) Lancaster and Wyre and (b) Lancashire were over-turned by his Department in each year since 1997. [36241]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold information centrally on the type and number of decisions made prior to April 2002. Since that date the First Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has decided 19 called-in planning applications or recovered appeals in Lancashire. Of those three were in Wyre and one in Lancaster.

Private Sector Investments

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what measures the Government and its agencies are taking to encourage and facilitate private sector investment in (a) the Thames Gateway growth area and (b) Kent Thameside. [36724]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of The Deputy Prime Minister's £210 million investment in the regeneration of North Kent is supporting private sector investment through land remediation and local infrastructure. We are seeing some of these private sector schemes coming on stream, such as some £400 million for The Bridge development in Dartford and some £100 million for Gravesham Town Centre's Heritage Quarter.

Government realise private sector investment in the Thames Gateway is essential if we are to deliver sustainable housing and economic growth. We work closely with developers and investors in a number of different ways including the Developers Forum and the Investors Group. Both the London and Thurrock Thames Gateway Development Corporations, as well as the sub-regional and local regeneration partnerships have representatives from the private sector on their boards. In addition we have recently set up an Invest in Thames Gateway team within the Thames Gateway Delivery Unit with a single number—02079 44 66 33—dedicated to helping investors and developers who want to work in the area.

In Kent Thameside specifically, private sector is represented on the Local Regeneration Partnership. Our individual partners, such as the local authorities, the South East of England Regional Development Agency, and English Partnerships also work closely with private sector, consulting both on local strategies and individual developments.

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much private sector investment has been levered in through section 106 agreements in (a) the Thames Gateway growth area and (b) Kent Thameside since the publication of the Sustainable Communities Plan. [36725]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of The Deputy Prime Minister does not monitor section 106 agreements. However, we would expect the major contributions arising from section 106 agreements to be reflected in the local regeneration frameworks being drawn up by the local regeneration partnerships in the Thames Gateway area.

Public Bodies/Agencies

Mr. Weir: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many staff were employed by non-departmental public bodies and agencies for which he has responsibility in 2004–05 in (a) total and (b) each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK and (c) London. [35958]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Total Executive non-departmental public bodies (NDPB) staff numbers as at 31 March 2005 for the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is recorded in Table 2 of Public Bodies 2005, a copy of which is available in the Libraries of the House, and online at:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/the_future_of_the_civil_service/agencies_and_public_bodies/publications/pdf/public-bodies/publicbodies2005.pdf

The number of staff in individual Executive agencies as at 1 April 2004, including a regional analysis, is available in Civil Service Statistics 2004 which was published in February 2005, a copy of which is available in the Libraries of the House. It is also available online at:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_of_the_civil_service/statistics/contents_for_civil_service_statistics_2004_report/number_of_civil_servants/index.asp

Both of the aforementioned represent the latest available information which is held centrally.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold data centrally for NDPB and agencies broken down by regions.

Right-to-Buy

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of the council housing stock (a) houses and (b) flats has been sold since 1980 under the right to buy scheme. [35289]

Yvette Cooper: [holding answer 6 December 2005]: An estimated 30 percent. of council housing stock in England has been sold through the right to buy scheme since 1980. Information concerning the type of dwelling is not available.

An estimate of the percentage of council stock sold is based on right to buy sales as a percentage of the "notional" stock (the most recent stock figure plus all reported sales since 1 April 1979).

Support Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps his Department has taken to remove duplication in the (a) assessment, (b) commissioning and (c) planning in the delivery of extra care schemes. [37302]

Mr. Woolas: The Department of Health and the Housing Corporation have been working closely together on the assessment, commissioning and planning the delivery of extra care schemes for older people to ensure a co-ordinated approach whether funding for such schemes comes through the Housing Corporation's Affordable Housing programme or the Department of Health's Extra Care Housing Fund. The Housing Corporation is continuing to work closely with the Department of Health on the next round of bids from 2006 to consider further joint funding of some schemes.

Telecommunications Masts

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will change the planning laws so that telecommunications mast applications have to go through the full planning process; and if he will make a statement. [17838]

Yvette Cooper: In 2000 the Stewart Report recommended that telecommunication developments should be subject to the normal planning process. The Stewart Report made this recommendation in order to improve local consultation. The arrangements the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister put in place following the Stewart Report provide for the same consultation arrangements on mobile phone masts up to 15m in height as is required by the full planning process which applies to masts over 15m in height.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 17 October 2005, Official Report, column 819W, on telecommunications masts, if he will break down the number of mobile phone masts registered for business rates in England in (a) April 1998 and (b) March 2005 by local authority area. [24687]

Yvette Cooper: A break down by local authority area, of the number of non-domestic hereditaments shown in the Rating List for England, under the description of Communication Stations, for April 1998, could be delivered only at a disproportionate cost.

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) whether planning guidelines limit the proliferation of telecommunications masts on one site; [34333]

(2) which planning and policy guidance notes limit the density of the distribution of telecommunications masts in a particular area. [34334]

Yvette Cooper: Planning policy guidance does not set any limits or expectations in respect of the density of telecommunications masts in a particular area or particular site. However, it does require that authorities consider the cumulative impact upon the environment of additional antennas sharing a mast or masts sharing a site.

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the minimum recommended distance of phone masts from (a) schools, (b) hospitals and (c) town centres. [37873]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 15 December 2005]: Mobile phone mast and base station developments near schools, hospitals and town centres are subject to the normal planning regulations in place throughout England, unless exempted by the regulations set out in Part 24 of the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 (GPDO).

The precautionary approach recommended by the Stewart report has provided the basis for Government policy. The Group's report did not recommend a ban on the construction of mobile phone masts near schools or any other site and we have no plans to introduce such a ban.

Thames Gateway

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much capital would be raised in (a) the Thames Gateway area and (b) Gravesham by the introduction of the proposed planning-gain supplement; and what proportion of this funding would be handed back to elected local government in (i) the Thames Gateway and (ii) Gravesham. [37524]

Yvette Cooper: A consultation paper setting out the Government's proposals for a Planning-gain Supplement (PGS) was published on 5 December 2005. Chapter 6 of the consultation paper sets out the key principles for allocating revenues if PGS is implemented, and seeks the views of consultees on the mechanisms for achieving these.

The closing date for responses to the consultation is 27 February 2006.

Vacant Domestic Properties

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many vacant domestic properties there were in (a) England and (b) each London borough in each of the last five years, broken down by tenure. [35354]

Yvette Cooper: Five tables, one for each of the five years from 2000 to 2004, containing the total number of vacant dwellings in England and in each London borough, broken down by tenure, have been placed in the Library of the House, and provide the latest available data.

The majority of empty homes in London are in the private sector. Of the 716,800 empty homes at national level 45.6 per cent. have been empty for more than six months. London boroughs like other local authorities will have new powers from April to bring empty homes back into use.

Valuation Office Agency

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what powers the Valuation Office Agency has to conduct internal inspections of property for business rates valuation purposes. [33497]

Mr. Woolas: Paragraph 7 of Schedule 9 to The Local Government Finance Act 1988 enables a valuation officer and any person authorised by him in writing to conduct internal inspections for the purpose of carrying out a valuation for non-domestic rating. The policy of the VOA is not to enter a property without the permission of the occupier.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Afghanistan

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the press release issued by his Department on 16 November, how much money has been pledged so far to the Afghan Counter Narcotics Trust Fund; how many of those pledges have been realised; which donor nations have (a) pledged and (b) donated; what evaluation his Department has undertaken to ascertain the amount required to make the Trust Fund a viable option; and what that figure is. [38225]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 19 December 2005]: A total of around US $26 million has so far been pledged to the Afghan Counter Narcotics Trust Fund. So far, A$2 million (US$1.5 million) from Australia and NZ$500,000 (US$0.35 million) from New Zealand have been transferred into the Fund. The United Nations Development Programme will contribute US $300,000 towards the management of the Fund.

The European Commission has made a firm commitment to the Fund of 15 million euros ($18 million), and for 2005–06 the UK, through the Afghan Drugs Inter-Departmental Unit, has made a firm commitment of £3.5 million (US$6 million). The Department for International Development is considering a contribution of £20 million over three years, making a total initial UK contribution of around US $40 million. At least seven other donors have expressed an interest in contributing but have not yet pledged money.

The Trust Fund does not require a large minimum amount in it to make it financially viable. These pledges are already enough to make it a worthwhile funding instrument.

Airspace (Extraordinary Rendition)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he (a) has written and (b) intends to write to other EU Governments to ask whether their airspace has been used for the purpose of the extraordinary rendition of those accused of terrorist activities; and if he will make a statement. [37889]

Dr. Howells [holding answer of 19 December 2005]: At the request of his EU colleagues, as the EU presidency, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary wrote to the United States Secretary of State on 29 November about media reports of US rendition operations and detention camps in Europe. The US Secretary of State replied on 6 December, enclosing a copy of her public statement of 5 December, available at:

www.state.gov./secretary/rm/2005/57602.htm, by way of response. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary forwarded the US Secretary of State's reply to his EU colleagues on 7 December.

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will carry out an investigation similar to the one proposed by the Polish Government into the use by US aircraft of UK airports and airspace. [38717]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to the right hon. and learned Member for North- East Fife (Sir Menzies Campbell) on 12 December 2005, Official Report, columns 1652–53W.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether (a) he, (b) members of his Department and (c) members and representatives of the UK Government have sought from the US Administration clarification concerning (i) the application of the stated prohibition on the use of cruel and inhumane and degrading treatment as specified by Condoleeza Rice in her statement of 5 December 2005 and (ii) whether the prohibition applies to all US civilian and military personnel regardless of agency affiliation; what assurances he has (A) sought and (B) received concerning exceptions to this prohibition; and if he will make a statement. [38771]

Dr. Howells: The United States Secretary of State's statement on 7 December, available at http://www.state.gov/secretary/rm/2005/57723.htm, was clear: as a matter of US policy, the US's obligations under the United Nations Convention Against Torture, which prohibits cruel, inhumane and degrading treatment, extend to US personnel wherever they are.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 12 December 2005, Official Report, column 1653W, to the right hon. and learned Member for North-East Fife (Sir Menzies Campbell), on terrorist suspects (rendition), whether his officials checked (a) Ministry of Defence records of civil registered flights using military airfields and (b) national air traffic services data; and what discussions were held with BAA on this matter. [38962]

Dr. Howells: Neither the records and data to which the hon. Member refers, nor BAA records, would demonstrate whether or not terrorist suspects have been rendited through UK territory or airspace.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assurances the Government has sought from the United States Administration on its purpose in rendering detainees for questioning to (a) Egypt, (b) Syria and (c) other countries; and if he will make a statement. [38964]

Dr. Howells: In the United States (US) Secretary of State's statement on 5 December, available at http://www.state.gov/secretary/rm/2005/57602.htm, following my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's letter to her of 29 November, Condoleeza Rice explained that for decades the US and other countries have used renditions to transport terrorist suspects to their home country or other countries where they can be questioned, held or brought to justice. She also made clear that:

> The United States has respected—and will continue to respect—the sovereignty of other countries.
> The United States does not transport, and has not transported, detainees from one country to another for the purpose of interrogation using torture.
> The United States does not use the airspace or the airports of any country for the purpose of transporting a detainee to a country where he or she will be tortured.
> The United States has not transported anyone in, and will not transport anyone to, a country when it believes he or she will be tortured. Where appropriate, the United States seeks assurances that transferred persons will not be tortured.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment the Government has made of the effect of the Chicago Convention in relation to suspected rendition flights on (a) the application of domestic criminal law and (b) other international conventions incorporated into UK law. [38965]

Dr. Howells: The Government does not consider that the Chicago Convention inhibits the application of United Kingdom domestic law or the implementation of our international obligations.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any detainees originally held by UK (a) armed forces and (b) other agencies and subsequently transferred to United States responsibility has been rendered to (i) Egypt, (ii) Syria and (iii) other countries. [38966]

Dr. Howells: We are unaware of any individuals originally detained by UK authorities and subsequently rendited by the USA to any country.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the implications of the United States (a) reservations and (b) derogations from the UN Convention Against Torture for UK policy on the rendition of detainees to third countries. [38967]

Dr. Howells: The UK policy on rendition of detainees to third countries is very clear. Where we are requested to assist another State and our assistance would be lawful, we will decide whether or not to assist taking into account all the circumstances. We would not assist in any case if to do so would put us in breach of UK law or our international obligations, including the UN Convention Against Torture. In particular, we would not facilitate the transfer of an individual from or through the UK to another State where there were grounds to believe that the person would face a real risk of torture. This is not affected by the position of other States on the Convention.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures are in place to ensure that the UK's interpretation of the UN Convention Against Torture is applied in decisions on the rendition of detainees to other countries via UK territory or airspace. [38968]

Dr. Howells: The term "rendition" is currently being used to describe informal transfers of individuals in a wide range of circumstances. Whether any particular "rendition" is lawful depends on the facts of each individual case. Where we are requested to assist another State and our assistance would be lawful, we will decide whether or not to assist taking into account all the circumstances. We would not assist in any case if to do so would put us in breach of UK law or our international obligations, including under the United Nations (UN) Convention Against Torture. In particular, consistent with our obligations under the UN Convention Against Torture, we would not facilitate or permit the transfer of an individual from or through the UK to another State where there were substantial grounds to believe that the person would face a real risk of torture.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the criteria by which the Government makes the decision on whether to accept or reject an application from overseas for access to UK (a) facilities and (b) airspace for the purpose of rendition of a detainee to a third country. [38969]

Dr. Howells: The term "rendition" is currently being used to describe informal transfers of individuals in a wide range of circumstances. Whether any particular "rendition" is lawful depends on the facts of each individual case. Where we are requested to assist another State and our assistance would be lawful, we will decide whether or not to assist taking into account all the circumstances. We would not assist in any case if to do so would put us in breach of UK law or our international obligations, including under the United Nations Convention Against Torture. In particular, we would not facilitate or permit the transfer of an individual from or through the UK to another State where there were grounds to believe that the person would face a real risk of torture.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1023W, on airspace (extraordinary rendition), whether carriers are legally obliged to provide passenger lists when (a) refuelling on, (b) overflying and (c) landing on UK overseas territories. [36813]

Ms Buck: I have been asked to reply.

There is no legal obligation for carriers to provide passenger lists when refuelling, overflying or landing at UK Overseas Territories. The Chicago Convention on International Civil Aviation applies equally to UK Overseas Territories as it does to the UK. Article 5 provides that airlines are not required to seek prior permission for non-stop flights across the territory of another state or to make a non-traffic stop in another state. Refuelling is a non-traffic stop (i.e. where no passengers or cargo are taken on board or dropped off).

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1023W, on airspace (extraordinary rendition), if he will define the term 'non-scheduled, non-commercial civil aircraft'; and if he will make a statement. [36814]

Ms Buck: I have been asked to reply.

"Non-scheduled, non-commercial civil aircraft" refers to foreign civil aircraft that are not engaged in scheduled international air services and have not been engaged in the carriage of passengers, cargo, or mail for remuneration or hire. Such flights do not require prior permission to land from the Secretary of State for Transport. Article 5 is the relevant article in the Chicago Convention.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1043W, on airspace (extraordinary rendition), what plans there are to review the agreement between the US and the United Kingdom regarding the provisions of the Chicago Convention; and if he will make a statement. [36815]

Ms Buck: I have been asked to reply.

The Chicago Convention is the founding instrument of the International Civil Aviation Organisation and any proposals to review it are considered by ICAO's contracting States within its established structure. The EU is negotiating an air services agreement with the US that, if agreed, will replace existing agreements between member states and the US.

Antarctic Research

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much Government funding has been allocated in each of the last five years to the Antarctic Research stations of (a) Halley, (b) Bird Island, (c) Signy Island and (d) Rothera. [36076]

Alan Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

The Natural Environment Research Council's funding (through the British Antarctic Survey) of these Antarctic stations in the last five years is detailed in the following table:

£000

	Bird Island	Signy Island	Rothera	Halley	Total bases
2000–01	971	976	10,293	5,825	18,066
2001–02	854	856	8,478	5,227	15,415
2002–03	936	1,001	8,883	5,687	16,507
2003–04	910	964	8,811	5,361	16,047
2004–05	2,048	1,037	9,254	5,580	17,919

China

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Chinese Government following the action by paramilitary police against villagers protesting over the seizure of land for a power plant in Dongzhou, Guangdong province. [38667]

Ian Pearson: The Government are aware of reports of action by Chinese police against villagers in Dongzhou, Guangdong province. We have not made representations to the Chinese about this particular incident. We understand that the Chinese authorities have taken action against a police commander held responsible for the incident. We are continuing to monitor the situation.

The Government remain concerned about the human rights situation in China in general. Through regular dialogue with the Chinese authorities we encourage China to engage constructively with the international community on social issues and human rights.

Departmental Assets

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the works of art and antiques owned by his Department with a value over £20,000 each together with the (a) value and (b) location. [38547]

Mr. Straw: A list of art and antiques owned by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office will be placed in the Library of the House. This list excludes all items owned by the Government Art Collection but out on loan. Please note that not all the art and antique items at Lancaster House have been given a specific value but are included in an overall valuation undertaken by Sotheby's.

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the art and antiques with a value of over £10,000 (a) sold and (b) purchased by his Department since 1997. [38548]

Mr. Straw: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office does not hold information about purchases and sales of art and antiques in previous financial years in a format that enables us to identify individual items. Such a list could only be produced from a detailed examination of financial records in the UK and at posts. This examination could be carried out only at a disproportionate cost.

Detention Centres (US Flights)

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 12 December 2005, Official Report, column 1647W, on detention centres (US flights), whether (a) he and (b) his officials have (i) received and (ii) sought from the US Secretary of State following her statement of 5 December 2005 (A) the US Administration's working definition of torture and (B) details of the questioning techniques used when interviewing terrorist suspects in countries other than the United States. [38315]

Dr. Howells: We discuss security and human rights issues with the United States (US) Government on a regular basis. My hon. Friend will be aware of the recent understanding reached between President Bush and Senator McCain on legislation confirming that cruel, inhumane or degrading treatment of detainees in US custody is forbidden, and that this prohibition will apply to all US personnel. As the US Secretary of State made clear in her statement of 7 December 2005, US obligations under the United Nations Convention Against Torture already extend to US personnel wherever they are. We understand that the US Government will shortly issue guidelines confirming the way that the legislation and policy should be implemented.

[38796]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: During the UK presidency there were no meetings of the Co-operation Committees with Georgia and San Marino, or the Association Committee with Tunisia.

A Co-operation Committee with Ukraine took place on 19 October in Kiev. Mr Hugues Mingarelli, European Commission, led the EU delegation. [39036]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: There are no Joint Committees as such, but there are EU-Association Committees for both Bulgaria and Romania. One meeting of the EU-Romania Association Committee has taken place under the UK presidency, on 15 July in Bucharest. This was chaired by the European Commission. A representative of the UK presidency was present as an observer. The EU-Bulgaria Association Committee has not met under our presidency. No provision was made for representation of the devolved Governments at these meetings.

During the UK presidency the Community Assistance for Reconstruction, Development and Stabilisation (CARDS) Management Committee met twice, on 15 September and 18 November. The CARDS Management Committee oversees the implementation of council regulation (EC) No 2666/2000. The Committee is convened and constituted for member states to assist the Commission with the implementation of the CARDS programme of assistance to Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia. It is chaired by the Commission. The meetings were attended by officials from the Department for International Development (DFID).

During the UK presidency the Technical Assistance to the Commonwealth of Independent States (TACIS) Management Committee met four times: 8 July, 23 September, 24 October and 25 November. The TACIS Management Committee oversees the implementation of council regulation (EC, Euratom) No 99/2000. On one occasion a Foreign and Commonwealth Office official also attended.

No provision was made for representation of the devolved administrations at these meetings.

EU Presidency

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the products associated with the EU presidency logo developed by his Department; how many of each were produced; and what the cost was of the production of each. [37344]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Member states holding the presidency normally commission a range of promotional goods bearing the presidency logo. The UK did the same. The items were pin-chased by Government Departments and overseas posts for public diplomacy use in connection with a wide range of Government events and activities.

The overall quantities commissioned were determined in response to demand from across Government. No extra money was made available to posts to cover this expenditure and it was met by reallocating existing resources. The largest item in terms of expenditure was stationery.

The following details reflect the estimated total quantities of goods commissioned for the whole of the presidency on a Government-wide basis:

	Cost (£)
Stationery for use at presidency meetings and events	539,000
Small gifts for use at presidency events (mugs, umbrellas, bags etc)	251,000
Clothing (ties, scarves, lapel pins etc)	243,000
Materials for dressing venues for presidency events (logo stands etc)	32,000

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the UK presidency of the EU. [37727]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary set out the work programme for the UK presidency in detail in the White Paper "Prospects for the EU in 2005" (Cmnd 6611) presented to the House on 30 June 2005. A new White Paper will follow in the new year. We have made progress in a number of areas, including the historic decision to open accession negotiations with Turkey and Croatia on 3 October 2005. Last month we achieved significant reform of the EU sugar regime. And we continue to work on a range of issues from the fight against terrorism to the future financing of the EU.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many meetings of the EC-United States of America Joint Committee have taken place during the UK presidency of the EU; who presided over each meeting; what other UK representatives were present; what provision was made for representation of the devolved governments; and if he will make a statement. [38780]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: There are no Joint Committee meetings between the European Commission and United States of America.

Falkland Islands

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions the Government has had with the Government of Argentina about (a) the lifting of economic sanctions against the Falkland Islands and (b) permitting charter flights to the Falkland Islands; and if he will make a statement. [38305]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We regularly discuss issues of mutual interest in the South Atlantic with Argentina and have expressed our concern about recent Argentine actions on a number of occasions.

We would like to see an agreement on further flights between the Falklands and mainland South America but this must be on terms acceptable to all sides. So far, we have not reached an agreed basis for starting discussion. The UK has made it clear to Argentina that we are prepared to enter into discussions, on the understanding that any future arrangements must be acceptable to the Falkland Islanders and that any such discussions would need to take place against the backdrop of charter flight authorisations proceeding normally.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effect of recent economic development measures on the Falkland Islands; what steps have been taken to improve the economic viability of the Falkland Islands; and if he will make a statement. [38306]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The management of the economy of the Falkland Islands is the responsibility of the Falkland Island Government. With the exception of Defence costs, the Islands are fully economically self-sufficient. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office contribution is limited to small grants for individual projects from the economic diversification programme budget.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the prospect of regular charter flights to the Falkland Islands from Chile. [38307]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We would like to see an agreement on further flights between the Falklands and mainland South America but this must be on terms acceptable to all sides. So far, we have not reached an agreed basis for starting discussion.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has had with the Ministry of Defence about establishing a commercial element to the military air-bridge to the Falkland Islands; and if he will make a statement. [38308]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office regularly discuss a full range of Falkland Islands issues with the Ministry of Defence. The military air-bridge forms part of these discussions, but so far the establishment of a commercial element has not been discussed.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether it is his Department's policy to bring about the commercialisation of the Ministry of Defence air-bridge to the Falkland Islands. [39169]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The military air-bridge has been part of discussions between the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Ministry of Defence, but so far the establishment of a commercial element has not been part of these discussions. No policy decisions have been made on the subject.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Falkland Islands Government about establishing a commercial northbound air link to the Falkland Islands avoiding Latin America in conjunction with the Ministry of Defence. [39170]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: No recent discussions have taken place with the Falkland Islands Government on the subject of commercialisation of the military air-bridge. The Falkland Islands have recently submitted a paper on this on which we plan to hold discussions with them and other stakeholders in the new year.

Gibraltar

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much money was allocated to Gibraltar from the Overseas Development Fund in each of the last five years; and what proportion of this money was used to pay the pensions of Spanish citizens affected by the closure of the border with Gibraltar. [37745]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Department for International Development's (DFID) development budget expenditure for Gibraltar over the last five years was as follows:

2000–01	27,000
2001–02	23,000
2002–03	6,000
2003–04	5,000
2004–05	1,000

None of this money was spent on pension payments to Spanish citizens who were contributors to the former Gibraltar Social Insurance Fund.

Payments to these pensioners over the last five years were:

2000–01	7,720,000
2001–02	5,390,000
2002–03	7,780,000
2003–04	6,990,000
2004–05	6,210,000

Although administered by DFID these payments are not part of DFID's development aid budget.

Guantanamo Bay

Ms Barlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people who were UK residents at the time of their seizure are detained in Guantanamo Bay. [38300]

Dr. Howells: We are aware of five detainees at Guantanamo Bay who have British resident status, but who are not British nationals.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the detention camp at Guantanamo Bay. [39237]

Dr. Howells: The Government have made clear that it regards the circumstances under which detainees continue to be held in Guantanamo as unacceptable. The United States (US) Government knows our views. Since the release of the last British nationals from Guantanamo in January 2005, we have continued to raise Guantanamo Bay with the US authorities. We will continue to raise our concerns at Ministerial and official level and to work with the US authorities to resolve the issues of concern to us.

It is important to remember, however, the circumstances which led to Guantanamo Bay. Nearly 3,000 people were killed during the terrorist attacks on 11 September 2001. Valuable information has been gained from detainees at Guantanamo Bay which has helped the international community in the fight against terrorism.

Human Rights, Democracy and Good Governance Programme

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the projects being supported under the Human Rights, Democracy and Good Governance programme for the promotion of democracy in (a) China, (b) the Balkans region, (c) Kenya, (d) Uganda, (e) Eritrea, (f) Russia, (g) Pakistan and (h) Burma; and what the (i) nature of support and (ii) level of funding is for each project. [35620]

Ian Pearson: I refer my right hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 19 December 2005 (UIN 35619) in which I set out the criteria for supporting projects that promote democracy. The latest details of relevant projects are set out in the Global Opportunities Fund (GOF) Annual Report 2004–05 published as Command Paper 6665 in October 2005 which is also available on the FCO website at http://www.fco.gov.uk/Files/KFile/GOFAnnualReport200405.pdf. Details of GOF projects supported in 2005–06 will be published in the next annual report.

Although the report refers to the inclusion of funding the Westminster Foundation for Democracy (WFD) within the GOF programme it did not provide details of individual projects. However, during this period WFD undertook projects in the Balkans region, Kenya, Uganda and Russia in line with agreed priorities in Eastern Europe and Africa. A copy of the list of these projects will be placed in the Library of the House.

Insurance Costs

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 17 November 2005, Official Report, column 1482W to the hon. Member for Hemel Hempstead (Mike Penning) what the cost of insurance for (a) the silver set in Washington, (b) the two chandeliers in Istanbul, (c) the rug in Havana and (d) the Jaguar XJ 4.2s in (i) New Delhi, (ii) Islamabad and (iii) Cairo was in 2004–05. [38546]

Mr. Straw: The three vehicles are insured as part of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Global third party insurance with Axa Insurance. It is not therefore possible to identify the costs of insuring individual vehicles under this policy. The cost of mandatory local third party insurance for the vehicles was:

Islamabad	8.64
New Delhi	10.00

International Meetings/State Visits

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the international summits, conferences and state visits hosted by the Government in each year since 1997; and on what date each was held. [38502]

Mr. Straw: The following are details of the state visits hosted by the Government since 1997:

8–10 November 2005: China
15–17 March 2005: Italy
1–3 December 2004: Korea
5–7 May 2004: Poland
18–21 November 2003: US A
24–27 June 2003: Russia
(No State Visits in 2002, the jubilee year)
6–9 November 2001: Jordan
12–15 June 2001: South Africa
16–18 February 2000: Denmark
19–22 October 1999: China
22–25 June 1999: Jordan
1–4 December 1998: Germany
26–29 May 1998: Japan
2–5 December 1997: Brazil

25–28 February 1997: Israel.

A further state visit from Brazil is planned from 8–9 March 2006.

Details of international summits and conferences hosted are not held centrally within the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and can only be collated at disproportionate cost.

Interrogation

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether (a) he, (b) his Department and (c) members and representatives of the UK Government have received reports of incidents of the technique known as waterboarding being used as an interrogation technique; and if he will make a statement. [38819]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, his Department and other members and representatives are aware of public reports that the technique known as waterboarding has been used as an interrogation technique. But they have received no information to corroborate those reports.

Iran

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with (a) the president of Iran, (b) his US counterpart and (c) counterparts in the European Union on the Iranian president's recent comments about Israel. [37952]

Dr. Howells: On 8 December, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, acting on behalf of the UK presidency of the European Union, condemned unreservedly the comments in which President Ahmadinejad denied that the holocaust had taken place and called for Israel to be moved to Europe. The European Council repeated this condemnation on 16 December. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not discussed these remarks with the President of Iran. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has very regular discussions with his US counterpart on Iranian issues but it would be inappropriate to go into the detail of those conversations.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the political situation in Iran. [38230]

Dr. Howells: We have serious concerns about Iranian policies in a number of areas, including its nuclear programme; approach towards terrorism; human rights record; and attitude towards the Middle East peace process. President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad's recent comments denying the existence of the Holocaust and calling for Israel to be 'wiped from the map' have been widely condemned by the international community, including the European Union and the United Nations Security Council.

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he will make to the Iranian Government following the statement by President Mahmoud Admadinejad dismissing the Nazi holocaust as a myth. [38664]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my noble Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, gave the noble Lord Dykes today [HL 2960].

Iraq

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1072W, on Iraq, for what reasons the intelligence available to Lord Butler was not available to the Intelligence and Security Committee at the time of its 2003 inquiry. [38424]

Mr. Straw: The Butler Review and the inquiry conducted by the Intelligence and Security Committee had different terms of reference. Both had extensive access to intelligence material.

Israel

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 12 December 2005, Official Report, column 1648W, on Israel, whether it is Government policy to apologise routinely when people from any country are arrested or threatened with arrest following private prosecutions. [38311]

Dr. Howells: It is not Government policy to apologise routinely when people from any country are arrested or threatened with arrest following private prosecutions.

Kenny Richey

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made of the US authorities regarding Kenny Richey who is under a death sentence in Ohio; what representations he has received from (a) campaign groups and (b) other organisations in relation to the case; and what assistance has been given to Kenny Richey's family to visit him in the US. [39197]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office(FCO) filed an amicus curiae brief in the United States (US) 6th Circuit Court of Appeal in September 2004 on behalf of Kenny Richey. Since then, the US Supreme Court has overturned that Court's decision that Mr Richey's conviction was unsafe, effectively reinstating the conviction. The FCO receives regular representations from various organisations and individuals who are concerned about Mr Richey's plight. We take all such representations seriously, and are in close and regular contact with Mr Richey's lawyers both in the US and the UK. Any representations made by the FCO on his behalf are made in consultation with Mr Richey and his legal team. We cannot provide assistance for Kenny Richey's family to travel to the United States, although FCO officials are offering them all appropriate consular support.

Maldives

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library public statements made by Ministers on the Gayoom regime in the Maldives. [38350]

Dr. Howells: With the exception of responses to parliamentary questions appearing in Hansard, I am not aware that there have been any recent ministerial statements about the current Government of the Maldives.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the high commissioner in the Maldives has met Ms Jennifer Latheef. [38352]

Dr. Howells: The British high commissioner at Colombo, who is accredited to the Maldives, met Jennifer Latheef as well as other representatives of the Maldivian Democratic Party in Male on 22 September.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will visit the Maldives to press for the restoration of democracy in the islands. [38353]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has no current plans to visit the Maldives. However, together with EU partners, we remain seriously concerned about the need for political reform there. We raised those concerns most recently on 12 December when the British high commissioner led an EU troika of Colombo-based heads of mission, also accredited to the Maldives, to call on President Gayoom. We will continue closely monitoring developments in the Maldives.

Morocco

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the recent arrest of Saharawi human rights activists by the government of Morocco; and if he will make a statement. [38628]

Dr. Howells: The Government are aware that several Saharawi human rights activists have recently been tried in Laayoune. Officials at our Embassy in Rabat are monitoring the situation.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Government of Morocco on its decision to block the Association for a Referendum in Sahara Occidental website; and if he will take steps to make websites available for political activity in other countries. [38629]

Dr. Howells: In EU discussions with Morocco, the UK, as presidency of the EU, has emphasised the importance of respecting freedom of expression and freedom of the press. Morocco's record in this area is generally positive. We have not raised the specific case of the Association for a Referendum in Sahara Occidental. However, officials in our embassy in Rabat are monitoring the situation.

The Government has no plans to make websites available for political activity in other countries.

Mudawi Ibrahim Adam

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise the case of Dr. Mudawi Ibrahim Adam, a political prisoner in Sudan, with the Sudanese Government at the earliest possible date; and if he will make a statement. [38253]

Dr. Howells: Dr. Mudawi Ibrahim Adam, chairperson of the Sudan Social Development Organisation and a prominent Sudanese human rights activist, has been detained by Sudanese authorities on several occasions, most recently in Khartoum on 8 May 2005. Our embassy in Khartoum raised this case with the acting Foreign Minister on 10 May and on 14 May. We also supported representations made by the local EU presidency on this matter. Dr. Mudawi was released unharmed on 17 May 2005 and has continued his work on human rights. Our embassy in Khartoum is in regular contact with Dr. Mudawi and last spoke to him on 14 December 2005.

Osama Bin Laden

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has received evidence to suggest that Osama Bin Laden is still alive; and whether the UK Government have been (a) involved with and (b) informed of the drawing up of trial plans in the event that he is captured alive. [37736]

Dr. Howells: We have not currently seen evidence confirming that Osama Bin Laden is still alive, nor have we received information suggesting that he has died. It is premature to consider the possibilities for trial should he be captured alive: these would depend on, among other things, the circumstances and location of his capture.

Pakistan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the situation pertaining to the Sangha Hill trial in Pakistan and the threats being made against Yousaf Marik; and if he will make a statement. [38627]

Dr. Howells: We deplore the unprovoked attacks against Christians in Sangla Hills on 12 November 2005. We have made representations to the Government of Pakistan on this issue and welcome the public condemnations of the violence from President Musharraf and Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz.

We are not aware that any trial is yet underway following the attacks. We understand that Yousaf Masih remains in police custody. The Imam of the local lamia mosque allegedly called for Yousaf Masih to be hanged without trial. Our High Commissioner in Islamabad has written to Pakistan's Minister for Religious Affairs to urge him to investigate this matter immediately and take strong action against those concerned.

Uganda

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reservations (a) he and (b) his officials expressed as a result of recent events in Uganda during the recent Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in Malta concerning the offer by the President of Uganda that Kampala host the 2007 Heads of Government meeting. [38227]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 19 December 2005]: The UK remains concerned about the progress of political change in Uganda. On 18 November, the UK issued a statement, on behalf of the EU:

http://www.eu2005.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1115146994806&a=KArticle&aid=1131976425734&date=2005-11-18, outlining our concerns regarding the arrest of Dr. Kiiza Besigye on charges including treason. We continue to press for a free and transparent civilian trial. My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for International Development, and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister for Africa, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, all made this clear to President Museveni at the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in Valletta.

The Commonwealth will keep the situation in Uganda under review in the coming months. It will be for the Commonwealth Secretary-General, Don McKinnon, in consultation with member states, to make a final decision on whether the 2007 Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting should be held in Kampala.

United States

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether (a) he, (b) members of his Department and (c) members and representatives of the UK Government have (i) sought and (ii) received from the US Administration clarification concerning the application of the prohibition on the use of cruel and inhumane and degrading treatment as specified by Condoleeza Rice in her statement of 7 December 2005 to (A) non-US citizens, (B) terrorist suspects, (C) enemy combatants and (D) high-ranking members of al-Qaeda; and if he will make a statement. [38772]

Dr. Howells: The United States (US) Secretary of State's statement of 7 December 2005, available at http://www.state.gov/secretary/nn/2005/57723.htm, was clear: the US's obligations under the United Nations Convention Against Torture, which prohibits cruel, inhumane, and degrading treatment, extend to US personnel wherever they are. There is no suggestion that this policy is qualified according to category of detainee.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received from the UK embassy in Washington DC of (a) the effect of Senate Amendment 1977 to the Defense Appropriations Bill for the financial year 2006, (b) the US position with regard to the amendment and (c) the compatability of the proposed amendment and the US Administration's stated prohibition on the use of cruel and inhumane and degrading treatment as specified by Condoleeza Rice's statement of 7 December; and if he will make a statement. [38818]

Dr. Howells: The British Embassy in Washington reports on Congressional matters on a regular basis, including the recent understanding reached between President Bush and Senator McCain on language to prohibit the use of cruel, inhumane and degrading treatment of detainees in United States custody.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last discussed the humanitarian and political situation in Zimbabwe with (a) the US Secretary of State, (b) the Foreign Ministers of the member states of the EU, (c) the Foreign Minister of the Republic of South Africa and (d) the Secretary-General of the UN. [38257]

Ian Pearson: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary most recently discussed the situation in Zimbabwe with the South African Minister of Foreign Affairs, Dr. Zuma, at the EU South Africa Co-operation Council on 7 November, and with the United Nations Secretary General on 30 October. European Union Ministers met at the General Affairs and External Relations Council on 18 July, where Zimbabwe was also discussed. Additionally, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary regularly converses with the US Secretary of State, Dr. Rice, including, when appropriate, on Zimbabwe.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Payments

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what measures he is taking to ensure that carers claim the benefits to which they are entitled; [35506]

(2) what plans he has to increase carer's allowance. [35508]

Mrs. McGuire: Carers may be entitled to the full range of social security benefits depending on their individual circumstances. Information and advice about entitlement to carer's allowance and other benefits are available from a range of outlets including social security offices, Jobcentre Plus offices, DWP and other helplines, DWP and other internet sites, local authorities, Citizens Advice and welfare benefit offices, public libraries, health clinics, doctors' surgeries and health visitors. Officials from the Department's Disability and Carers Service also discuss carer's allowance at outreach events up and down the country.

In addition, the extensive pension credit take-up campaign, mounted by the Pension Service, has helped many older carers to benefit from the Government's abolition of the upper age limit on claims to carer's allowance and provided advice on other benefits. As at 31 May 2005, some 437,000 carers were receiving carer's allowance, around 210,000 were receiving the carer premium in income support or income-based Jobseeker's Allowance, and about 164,000 were receiving the carer's additional amount in pension credit.

The carer's allowance claim pack is kept under review and improvements are introduced on an ongoing basis. Claims can be made in writing, by phone and on-line, and can be accepted by organisations such as Age Concern and Citizens Advice as well as DWP offices.

The weekly rate of carer's allowance is increased annually in line with the Retail Prices Index. As announced on 6 December, it will go up to £46.96 in April 2006.

Bereavement Allowance

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on bereavement allowance. [38538]

Mr. Timms: Bereavement benefits, which were introduced in 2001, are payable to both men and women who satisfy the qualifying conditions.

The bereavement allowance is a contributory benefit payable for a maximum period of 52 weeks from the date of bereavement. It is a weekly benefit payable to qualifying widows and widowers who are aged between 45 and state pension age.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 72–3W, on the Child Support Agency, in which of the last eight years the Agency's accounts have been qualified by the National Audit Office. [37944]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 20 December 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 28th November 2005 Official Report columns 72–73W on the Child Support Agency in which of the last eight years have the Agency's accounts been qualified by the National Audit Office.

The Agency's Client Fund accounts have been qualified by the National Audit Office every year since the Agency's inception. The Agency's administrative accounts have never been qualified.

I hope you find this response helpful.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what training staff who work for the Child Support Agency receive in understanding the law in relation to child support; and if he will make a statement. [30028]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member on 11 January 2005, Official Report, column 459W.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the internal target for full maintenance calculations under the new scheme was for 2004–05. [30032]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 20 December 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the internal target for full maintenance calculations under the new scheme was for 2004–05.

In 2004/05 the Agency had an internal target 'to ensure that 60% of all new applications cleared resulted in full maintenance calculations', with the remainder being closed.

In 2005/6, this target was dropped as it was recognised that Agency staff had no control over whether or not a parent with care chose to close their case prior to it reaching a calculation, or whether a case is subject to a reduced benefit decision or claiming good cause.

At September 2005, 44% (scheme to date) of all new applications cleared resulted in a full maintenance calculation.

However the Agency definition of 'cleared' has recently changed following improvements and availability of management information. Where as previously a 'clearance' only included a case which had been closed or had received a calculation, it now includes cases subject to a reduced benefit decision, claiming good cause or identified as being a change of circumstances on an existing case (as opposed to a new application). As a result, the volume of recorded clearances rose, making the proportion of clearances resulting in a maintenance calculation lower than the 60% originally envisaged in 2004/5.

I hope you find this response helpful.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the work involved in transferring old Child Support Agency cases to the new scheme. [30044]

Mr. Plaskitt: Before moving cases to the new scheme from the old scheme, each case needs to go through a data cleansing process. It is then migrated from the old computer system to the new system.

Before we can convert the bulk of cases we also need to introduce a commencement order to make the new scheme rules apply to these cases.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were paid compensation payments by the Child Support Agency in each year since 2001. [31585]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 24 November 2005]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 20 December 2005:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many people were paid compensation payments by the Child Support Agency in each year since 2001. We are unable to state how many people received payments from the Child Support Agency in accordance with the Departmental Guide to Financial Redress. This is because the Agency records the number of payments made and an individual may have received more than one payment.

The Agency does not hold sufficiently robust information prior to 1 December 2001 to give you the data over the entire period requested. I apologise for this but can give you information on payments, made since 1 December 2001 up until 10 November 2005.

The table below contains the available information:

Period	Number of payments made
1 December 2001 to 31 March 2002	2,758
1 April 2002 to 31 March 2003	9,522
1 April 2003 to 31 March 2004	6,883
1 April 2004 to 31 March 2005	10,144
1 April 2005 to 10 November 2005	6,251

I hope you find this useful.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what proportion of the Child Support Agency's cases (a) pre-dating 3 March 2003 and (b) awaiting calculation of child maintenance under the new scheme involve a non-resident parent; [36948]

(2) what proportion of Child Support Agency cases pre-dating 3 March 2003, and awaiting recalculation for child maintenance under the new scheme, involve a (a) non-resident and (b) resident parent in receipt of a state benefit or benefits; [36958]

(3) How many Child Support Agency cases pre-dating 3 March 2003 await recalculation under the new methods of assessing the level of child maintenance payments. [36956]

Mr. Timms: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 20 December 2005.

In reply to your recent parliamentary question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions;

What proportion of the Child Support Agency's cases (a) pre-dating 3 March 2003 and (b) awaiting calculation of child maintenance under the new scheme involve a non-resident parent.

You also asked how many Child Support Agency cases pre dating 3 March 2003 await recalculation under the new methods of assessing the level of child maintenance payments.

You also asked what proportion of Child Support Agency cases pre-dating 3 March 2003 and awaiting recalculation for child maintenance under the new scheme involve a (a) non-resident and (b) resident parent in receipt of a state benefit or benefits.

All Child support Agency cases by definition involve a non-resident parent.

In respect of those old scheme cases pre-dating 3 March 2003 remaining to be transferred from the old to the new child support schemes, the old scheme caseload stood at 938,000 (of which 286,000 were operating on the new computer system) as at the end of September 2005.

Of those old scheme non-resident parents on the old computer system at the end of September 2005, 29 per cent,. of those with a full maintenance assessment were recorded as being in receipt of Jobseekers Allowance, Income Support, Incapacity Benefit or other disability benefits at the time of their last assessment by the Agency. Information relating to the receipt of other state benefits is not recorded on the old scheme old computer system.

Of those old scheme non resident parents on the new computer system at the end of September 2005, 28 per cent. of those with a full maintenance assessment were recorded as being in receipt of Income Based Jobseekers Allowance, or Income Support. Information relating to the receipt of disability benefits is not currently available due to limitations with management information systems, and information relating to the receipt of other state benefits is not recorded.

At the end of May 2005, 32 per cent. of old scheme parents with care were in receipt of Income Support Or Income Related Job Seekers Allowance. This is the latest period for which such data is available. Information for other state benefits is not held on the Child Support system, as they are not relevant to the parent with care's child support claim.

I hope you find this information helpful

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total of unpaid maintenance owed by the Child Support Agency to parents with care has been in each quarter since 1997–98; how much has been written off each year as uncollectable maintenance; and if he will make a statement. [21438]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty dated 20 December 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the total of unpaid maintenance owed by the Child Support Agency to parents with care has been in each quarter since 1997; how much has been written off each year as uncollectable maintenance; and if he will make a statement.

The Child Support Agency does not owe child maintenance to parents with care; child maintenance is owed by non-resident parents.

The Child Support Agency has no legislative power to write off debt, and current debt is now the cumulative total of 12 years. For accounting purposes the Agency accepts that in some cases some debt is "probably un-collectable" (for example, where the non-resident parent is long-term unemployed, has gone abroad, or has died). The accounts have been adjusted accordingly: however the full amount owed remains due from the non-resident parent.

The table below summarises the cumulative total of the Child Support Agency's "collectable" and "probably un-collectable" debt on an annual basis since 1996/97. It is extracted from the annual debt analysis and is as reported in the Annual Report and Accounts. Information is not held on a quarterly basis:

£ million

	Amount classed as collectable[1]	Amount classed as probably un-collectable
2004–05	1,268.378	1,984.400
2003–04	975.894	2,004.847
2002–03	790.070	1,965.340
2001–02	611.209	1,915.312
2000–01	618.020	1,692.380
1999–2000	653.705	1,410.853
1998–99	690.235	1,069.680
1997–98	597.165	829.237
1996–97[2]	397.447	748.040

[1] Collectable debt includes that classified as "probably collectable" and "deferred" in the agency's annual report and accounts.

[2] 1996–97 re-stated in 1997–98 accounts for change in accounting policy.

Note:

These amounts include maintenance owed either to the parent with care, or the Secretary of State (where the parent with care is in receipt of benefit). It is not possible to apportion money not yet collected to the parent with care or Secretary of State.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Christmas

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether staff in his Department and its executive agencies have been required to remove from their offices (a) charity collection boxes and (b) charity appeal literature referring to Christmas and the birth of Jesus; and if he will make a statement. [27022]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions standards of behaviour policy allows for charitable collections to be made at the approval of local managers.

In exercising this discretion we expect managers to take into account local knowledge, operational needs and the personal responsibilities all managers have for implementing diversity principles in their day to day dealings with customers, with DWP staff and with partner organisations. This includes respecting cultural and religious differences.

The Department has not issued any instructions centrally relating to charity boxes or appeal literature referring to Christmas.

Debt Manager Software

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total implementation costs of the new Debt Manager software package has been to his Department. [38386]

Mr. Plaskitt: The introduction of the new IT system is part of the programme to modernise the recovery of overpaid benefits; in particular to bring about improvements in accounting controls to ensure that accounting irregularities, which have contributed to the qualification of DWP accounts by the C&AG in previous years, are removed from the system.

The total cost of introducing the new DWP Debt Manager system is £21.509 million: this includes all supplier costs (including hardware and software), the costs of project staff and the debt management operational staff costs relating exclusively to the implementation of the new system.

Community Care Grants

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many community care grants were awarded in the (a) Staffordshire county council area and (b) Tamworth borough council area in each year since 2001. [35677]

Mr. Timms: Data is not available by county council area or borough council area but only by Jobcentre Plus district (and previously by social fund district). The available information is in the following tables.

Community care grants for the Staffordshire social fund district

	Initial awards
2001–02	3,108
2002–03 (to October)	1,859

Community care grants for the area covered by the Staffordshire Jobcentre Plus district

	Initial awards
2002–03 (from November)	1,433
2003–04	3,572
2004–05	3,567
2005–06 (to November)	2,701

Community care grants for the Derwent and Trent social fund district

	Initial awards
2001–02	2,157
2002–03(to October)	1,278

Notes:

1. Staffordshire county council area was not included in a single social fund district, but used to be part of the area covered by Staffordshire and Derwent and Trent social fund districts. It is now part of Staffordshire Jobcentre Plus district. The latter was formed in November 2002 by combining Burton-on-Trent (from Derwent and Trent social fund district) with Staffordshire social fund district. Tamworth borough council area used to be part of Staffordshire social fund district and is now part of Staffordshire Jobcentre Plus district. The three areas for which data is given above are thus different, so the data is not comparable.

2. Initial awards do not include awards made after review.

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many community care grants were awarded for each year in the period 2001 to 2005 in the Leeds metropolitan district area. [35127]

Mr. Timms: The available information is in the table.

Community care grants in the Leeds metropolitan district area

	Initial awards

4. From April 2003 responsibility for guardian's allowance and child special allowance has been transferred to the Inland Revenue.
5. All benefit expenditure figures are consistent with Budget 2005 and with expenditure information which is published on the Department's internet website at the following address: http://www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd4/expenditure.asp. Data Protection

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many complaints about his Department have been made to the Information Commissioner in connection with the Data Protection Act 1998 since it came into force. [20341]

Mrs. McGuire: Since the Data Protection Act came into force on 1 March 2000, 214 letters have been received from the Information Commissioner following complaints.

Departmental Expenditure

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total departmental expenditure was on the administration of (a) the Employment Service, (b) the Benefits Agency and (c) Jobcentre Plus in each of the last five years; and what the projected expenditure is in each organisation for the next three years. [34386]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 20 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning: what the total departmental spend was on the administration of (a) the Employment Service, (b) the Benefits Agency and (c) Jobcentre Plus in each of the last five years; and what the projected spends are in each organisation for the next three years. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The Employment Service (an Executive Agency of the former Department for Education and Employment) and the Benefits Agency (part of the former Department of Social Security) ceased to exist on 31 March 2002. From 1 April 2002, the Benefits Agency's functions were split between The Pensions Service and Jobcentre Plus, both Executive Agencies of the newly formed Department for Work and Pensions. The Employment Service then became part of Jobcentre Plus. The table below shows the approximate net administration costs of the part of the Benefits Agency that transferred to Jobcentre Plus added to the administration costs of the Employment Service for 2000–01 and 2001–02.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

The administration costs of Jobcentre Plus for the three years from 1 April 2002 to 31 March 2005 are contained in the Agency's Annual Report and Accounts, copies of which can be found in the House of Commons Library. However, to assist you I have reproduced the figures below.

£ million

	Net administration costs
2002–03	2,951
2003–04	3,042
2004–05	3,148

The projected net administration costs for the subsequent three years are as follows:

£ million

	Net administration costs
2005–06	3,301
2006–07	3,323
2007–08	3,146

I hope this is helpful.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Midlothian are in receipt of (a) incapacity benefit, (b) disability living allowance, (c) attendance allowance, (d) reduced earnings allowance, (e) retirement allowance and (f) industrial injuries benefit. [37559]

Mrs. McGuire: The most recent available information for each benefit is in the following tables.

Claimants in the Midlothian parliamentary constituency, as at May 2005

	Number
Incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance	4,400
Disability living allowance	5,000
Attendance allowance	2,000

Employment Zone (Tower Hamlets)

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the total cost is to date of implementing the (a) Employment Zone and (b) Working Neighbourhood pilots in the London borough of Tower Hamlets; [36369]

(2) if he will list the payments agreed by his Department to each private contractor for the Employment Zone in the London borough of Tower Hamlets; [36371]

(3) what targets have been set for the (a) Employment Zone and (b) Working Neighbourhood pilots in the London borough of Tower Hamlets; and what the performance has been against each one. [36368]

Margaret Hodge: The specific information requested is not available.

Health and Safety Report

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the Government plans to respond to the EU report on Health and Safety in the Workplace; and if he will make a statement. [33797]

Mrs. McGuire: I am unsure to which report the hon. Member refers. However, the European Commission has recently published its second consultation paper on a simplification proposal to rationalise the reporting arrangements on the practical implementation of occupational safety and health directives.

At this stage of the process, only employers and workers organisations are involved in the consultation. Therefore the UK Government will not respond to this paper. Once the social partner consultation process has been completed, the European Commission may propose a directive. The UK will support any proposal that seeks to simplify the current reporting system. We expect to see a proposal towards the end of the UK presidency or early in 2006.

Housing Allowances

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the cost of extending local housing allowances to the whole of the UK; how much he estimates the administration cost will be; and what the cost of administering housing benefit under the previous arrangements are estimated to be in the next three years. [31586]

Mr. Plaskitt: The costs of any possible local housing allowance scheme extended across Great Britain would depend on the exact design. This would be determined by the experience of the current local housing allowance pathfinder pilot areas, for which the evaluation is still ongoing.

The Department does not collect management information relating to the cost to local authorities of administering housing benefit under the existing national scheme. The Department has commissioned a research project looking into the overall administration costs of housing benefit and council tax benefit. This project is near completion and will help us obtain a better indication of these costs in the future.

Human Resource Management Strategy

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on his Department's human resource management strategy. [24669]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department's staff are integral to the achievement of its objectives. In order to support the delivery of its work agenda and realise the benefits of modernisation, the Department's human resource strategy is for a smaller work force that is more highly skilled, more productive, better motivated and rewarded, delivering an improved level of customer service.

A key element of the Department's human resource strategy, set out in the 2004 Spending Review, is the managed reduction in staff numbers of 30,000 posts by March 2008 taking place alongside significant investment in information systems. Against this target, as at the end of September 2005 the Department had reduced staff numbers by 14,215.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many incapacity benefit claimants in the Gravesham constituency have been receiving the benefit for five years or more. [33608]

Mrs. McGuire: As at May 2005 there were 3,500 people claiming incapacity benefit or severe disability allowance in the Gravesham parliamentary constituency. Of these 1,700 had been claiming the benefit for five years or more.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on how many occasions incapacity benefit sanctions have been applied at the discretion of personal advisers in each of the last five years in each region. [34284]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested is not collected routinely and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of people in each (a) parliamentary constituency in England and (b) English local authority area are in receipt of incapacity benefit. [34669]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available in the format requested, because population estimates are not available by parliamentary constituency. The available information has been placed in the Library.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people living in (a) the Wakefield area and (b) Hemsworth constituency were in receipt of incapacity benefit in each of the last 10 years. [34670]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is in the table.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what percentage of telephone calls were (a) offered, (b) answered, (c) engaged and (d) given up in each Jobcentre Plus contact centre in each month from January to November; and if he will make a statement. [34170]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 20 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning how many and what percentage of telephone calls were offered, answered, engaged, and given up in each Jobcentre Plus contact centre in each month from January 2005 and November 2005. This is something, which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

I have arranged to place in the House of Commons Library details of calls offered and answered at each Contact Centre for both Jobseeker Direct and First Contact for benefit claims. I have included abandoned calls as we assume that this is what is meant by calls 'given up'. When customers call a contact centre and there is no agent free they are placed in a queue rather than hear an engaged tone, so no callers would hear an engaged tone.

Our aim is to answer 90% of all calls. The latest figures available for November show we answered 92.4% of all calls.

Finally, in my reply to your earlier question on this subject (PQ 32512—appearing in Hansard on the 7 December) there were two slight inaccuracies in the figures provided. The information I have placed in the Library now contains the correct figures. I apologise for this oversight.

Laptops

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many laptop computers have been used by (a) Ministers, (b) special advisers and

(c) officials in his Department in each year since 1995; how many have been (i) lost and (ii) stolen in that period; what the cost was of the use of laptops in that period; and if he will make a statement. [4113]

Mrs. McGuire: The available information is provided in the tables. Figures are available from 2003 only. Prior to this, laptops were included in an overall workstation allocation and not accounted for separately.

	Number of laptops	Number of laptops used by Ministers	Number of laptops used by special advisers
December 2003	1,478	4	2
December 2004	6,951	3	4
June 2005	6,218	2	0

Laptop numbers have increased due to a major IT modernisation programme within the Department and in line with flexible working practices.

Support costs for 2003 refer to the period June to December 2003 and were £173,730. Support costs for 2004 refer to the whole year, and were £250,140. Support costs for January to June 2005 were £165,092[1].

The number of stolen laptops is as follows:

Period (April to March)	Number stolen
2002–03	4
2003–04	14
2004–05	5

Figures for lost laptops are not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

[1] The figures provided in the table were the recorded volumes at the points in time stated. The support costs noted over the yearly and half yearly periods may reflect a higher number of laptops as volumes fluctuate with demand.

Maladministration

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many payments for maladministration have been made by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies, (c) its non-departmental public bodies and (d) other bodies for which his Department has responsibility in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [32250]

Mr. Timms: The Department for Work and Pensions operates a discretionary, non-statutory scheme providing financial redress for maladministration. The operation of the scheme is delegated to the Department's agencies.

The following figures represent the number of awards of special payments by the Department's agencies in the last five years. A single person may be awarded redress (i) for financial losses incurred; and/or (ii) for delay; and/or (iii) for the inconvenience, worry and distress caused. Since one person can receive more than one award for their case, the number of awards is significantly higher than the number of people receiving redress.

2004–05	—	17,852	3,736	60	6,800	11,058	—

[1] The Child Support Agency (CSA) does not regard the information prior to 1 December 2001 as robust.

The Independent Living Fund (ILF) has made five payments.

The Disability Rights Commission has made one payment.

No payments for maladministration have been reported for the years in question by any of the other non-departmental public bodies or other bodies for which the Department is responsible.

Notes:

1. The former Benefits Agency of DSS and Employment Services of DFES were replaced in 2002–03 by new agencies: (Disability and Carers Service (DCS), Jobcentre Plus (JCP) and The Pension Service (TPS).

2. Responsibility for the War Pensions Agency moved to MoD in April 2001. It is now referred to as the Veterans Agency.

3. Departmental figures for 2000–01 and 2001–02 include additional payments awarded in recognition of the then difficulties with the NIRS2 computer system.

4. The Pension Service figures for 2004–05 include payments awarded as a result of a special exercise to award a carer premium to some pension credit customers.

5. The figures shown in the tables represent payments authorised rather than payments made within each financial year and as such may differ from the total figures shown in the Department's Resource Account.

6. The term 'maladministration' is not defined in legislation but is considered to include a variety of failings including delays and errors by officials.

Ministerial Meetings

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent meetings he has had with the First Minister of the Welsh Assembly Government; what was discussed; and what decisions were taken. [35837]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Secretary of State has contact with colleagues across the devolved Administrations and discusses a variety of issues with them.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will provide a substantive answer to the question from the hon. Member for Birkenhead tabled on 1 November reference 25136 on Pathways to Work pilots. [35813]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 8 December 2005]: An answer was given on 12 December 2005, Official Report, column 1764W.

Pathways to Work

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the target is for the proportion of participants moving into employment in each Pathways to Work pilot area. [38247]

Margaret Hodge: The Pathways to Work districts are piloting new measures and innovative approaches to helping people with long term illnesses or a disability to return to work. As pilot schemes, they are a chance to assess what approaches may be more effective than the existing measures.

There are no targets specifically for the Pathways to Work pilots. However, the Pathways districts have the same range of job entry targets that all Jobcentre Plus districts have. We are essentially measuring the impact of the additional help offered through Pathways by comparing performance before and after the roll-out of the pilots and by comparison with national performance.

Early results show off-flows from incapacity benefit at six months of around 48 per cent. in the pilot areas compared with around 40 per cent. nationally, an improvement of eight percentage points.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the (a) total cost and (b) cost per participant moved into employment is of each Pathways to Work pilot area. [38251]

Margaret Hodge: By 2007–08, Pathways to Work will cover one-third of new incapacity benefit cases and support will be available to around 900,000 claimants. The total budget allocation for Pathways to Work for 2004–05 was £45 million, rising to £85 million in 2005–06.

Information on the cost per participant that moved into employment in each of the Pathways to Work pilot areas is not available.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the breakeven proportion of participants in pathways to work moved into employment is for each pilot area (a) overall and (b) for participants who have been receiving incapacity benefit for (i) less than a year and (ii) more than a year. [38494]

Margaret Hodge: Information in the form requested is not available. The Pathways to Work districts are piloting new measures and innovative approaches to helping people with long term illnesses or a disability to return to work. As pilot schemes, they are designed to test whether alternative approaches may be more effective than existing measures.

Early results show off-flows from incapacity benefit at six months of around 48 per cent. in the pilot areas compared with around 40 per cent. nationally, an improvement of 8 percentage points, resulting in a reduction in the incapacity benefit caseload which more than pays for the additional costs of the pilots.

Pension Credit

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what percentage of pensioners in (a) the UK, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) Scotland have levels of income which are above the level of entitlement to pension credit by (i) £5, (ii) £10 and (iii) £20; and if he will make a statement. [34739]

Mr. Timms: No such estimate has been made.

Entitlement estimates for pensions credit will not be available until National Statistics take-up estimates for the first six months of pension credit are published early in 2006. Following publication of these estimates, we will be able to provide estimates of the proportion of pensioners who are in various bands of entitlement, Great Britain.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the level of take-up of pension credit has been in each quarter since its launch. [38528]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is not available.

Latest estimates of the number of pensioners entitled to but not receiving the main income related benefits relate to financial year 2002–03 and predate the introduction of pension credit. Estimates for minimum income guarantee—the predecessor to pension credit—can be found in the DWP report entitled "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up in 2002–03". Copies of the publication are available in the Library.

Estimates of pension credit will be published in early 2006; this publication will include the first six months of pension credit. Estimates for the full year 2004–05 are expected to be published in May 2006.

Rent Service

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the basis was for the allocation of funding attributable to Scotland for administration of the rent service in the public sector statistical analysis; and which functions of the rent service relate to Scotland. [36017]

Mr. Timms: The allocation of DEL related expenditure over country and region, which includes the rent service, is based on DWP staff numbers in those areas.

The rent service is an executive agency of the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP). It operates across England only, but there are separate organisations for rent officer functions linked into both the Scottish Executive and the Welsh Assembly.

Revised Jobseekers Agreement (Staffordshire)

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what evaluation has been carried out of the revised jobseeker's agreement piloted in North Staffordshire. [37723]

Mr. Timms: The jobseeker's allowance (JSA) pilots were trialled in 13 districts covering 138 offices. The pilots were primarily designed to test different ways of delivering the JSA regime.

The research report "The Qualitative Evaluation of the JSA Intervention Regime Pilots" was published on 8 December this year, and contains an assessment of the revised jobseeker's agreement. The results were anonymised to avoid identification of information sources from individual offices. The report, therefore, does not single out North Staffordshire. The report is available in the Library.

Social Fund Loans

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Leeds applied for a social fund loan in each year since 2001. [37990]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is in the table.

Loan applications in Leeds Social Fund District/Leeds Jobcentre Plus District

	Budgeting loans	Crisis loans
2001–02	24,434	11,608
2002–03	25,309	12,524
2003–04	25,837	13,117
2004–05	23,757	12,216
2005–06 (to end of November)	16,335	12,187

Leeds Jobcentre Plus District was previously known as Leeds Social Fund District.

Volunteers

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many volunteering positions his Department has offered in each of the last five years. [17886]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested is not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Winter Fuel Payment

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will take steps to ensure that single pensioners living in a property that shares a postcode with a care home receives the correct amount of winter fuel payment. [36627]

Mr. Timms: In these cases the decision is based on whether the accommodation the customer lives in constitutes a separate household. It takes into account factors such as whether the accommodation has its own postal address. If the lower amount is issued and further inquiries reveal that a £200 payment was due, a top up payment is issued.

If the hon. Member is aware of any instance in which a pensioner has received a smaller winter fuel payment than he or she was entitled to because of an error of this nature, the chief executive of the Pension Service would be grateful to be informed.

Women's Pensions

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had with the Minister for Women on the future of women's pensions. [34635]

Mr. Timms: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Women spoke at the launch of the Department's report 'Women and Pensions: the Evidence' in Manchester on 7 November. Women's ability to build up pension entitlement is influenced by multiple factors such as education, employment, earnings and caring responsibilities that impact during their lifetime. We are continuing to work closely with the Minister for Women, the Deputy Minister for Women and Equality and colleagues in the Department of Trade and Industry on the issues surrounding women's working lives including labour market participation and the gender pay gap and their subsequent impact on pension accruals and entitlements.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Alcohol-related Crime

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has commissioned into the role of alcohol in rising levels of violent crime. [34159]

Paul Goggins: The British Crime Survey is considered the most reliable source of data on violent crime and the data published in July 2005 in a report called Crime in England and Wales 2004/05 indicates that the number of violent incidents fell by 11 per cent. based on comparison between 2003–04 and 2004–05 interview. Violent crime has fallen by 43 per cent. since a peak in 1995, an estimated 1.8 million fewer incidents. Although the Home Office has not commissioned any specific research into the role of alcohol and its impact on levels of violent crime it does monitor, via social surveys, levels of alcohol-related crime including violent crime. Data from the British crime survey on the percentage of violent incidents in England and Wales in which the victim believed one or more offenders was 'under the influence of drink' are published on a regular basis. The Offending crime and justice survey also contain information on the role of alcohol and violent offences and this information is also published on a regular basis.

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many violent attacks were committed under the influence of alcohol and in connection with licensed premises in each of the last three years in (a) Croydon, (b) Sutton and (c) Bromley boroughs. [32277]

Paul Goggins: The requested information is not available.

Banned Drivers

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many drivers have been banned from driving for drink or drug related offences in the last 12 months; [38662]

(2) what percentage of drivers randomly tested were found to be over the legal alcohol limit in the last year for which figures are available. [38668]

Paul Goggins: 2005 data on drivers disqualified for drink or drug related offences will not be available until early 2007. 2004 data will be issued in March 2006.

Breath tests can be conducted only in accordance with the provisions of the Road Traffic Act 1988 and may not be carried out at random.

Animal Cruelty

Asylum/Immigration

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many outstanding applications for leave to remain on grounds of asylum there are from applicants from each member state of the European Union; and if he will make a statement. [37577]

Mr. McNulty: Information on outstanding applications for asylum by nationality is unavailable and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by examination of individual case records. There were 6,100 asylum applications outstanding at the end of September 2005.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on asylum seekers from Zimbabwe whose asylum applications have been rejected; and whether such asylum seekers are being sent back to their country of origin. [32698]

Mr. McNulty: I refer the hon. Member to the statement I made on 14 December 2005, Official Report, columns 153–54WS.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to ensure (a) that Iraqi failed asylum seekers are returned to their town of origin, (b) that their safety is guaranteed and (c) that they receive assistance to readjust to life in Iraq. [36308]

Mr. McNulty: All cases are taken forward on a case by case basis and we will return individuals to their home towns in those particular areas assessed as sufficiently stable.

The Home Office will enforce the return of Iraqis only if satisfied that they will not be at risk. These will be individuals whose asylum claim has been turned down on the basis that they are not at risk of persecution and do not need humanitarian protection.

As highlighted in previous announcements, in light of current circumstances in Iraq, there is a package of support in place for the enforced returnees. This includes $100 USD cash payment, access to re-skilling training and provision of transport to their home address in Iraq.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many asylum seekers accommodated in (a) England, (b) Northamptonshire and (c) Kettering constituency were granted asylum in each of the last 10 years; [37044]

(2) how many illegal immigrants who had been accommodated in (a) England, (b) Northamptonshire and (c) Kettering constituency have been deported in each of the last 10 years; [37045]

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

(3) how many asylum seekers accommodated in (a) England, (b) Northamptonshire and (c) Kettering constituency were not granted asylum but were granted indefinite leave to remain in each of the last 10 years; [37046]

(4) how many asylum seekers accommodated in (a) Northamptonshire and (b) Kettering constituency have been granted refugee status in each of the last 10 years. [37047]

Mr. McNulty: Information on the case outcome of asylum seekers who have resided in particular areas of the UK is not available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by the examination of individual case records.

The case information on illegal immigrants removed from the UK and their residences is unavailable.

Statistics on the location of asylum seekers in the UK are linked to the available information on the support that the asylum seeker receives. The numbers of asylum seekers supported by the National Asylum Support Service (MASS) are published on a quarterly and annual basis, broken down by local authority. The most recent publication covering the third quarter of 2005, and further historical publications are available on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html. Data on asylum seekers supported by MASS broken down by parliamentary constituency are also available from the Library of the House.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 970W, on asylum/immigration, when information on allowed appeals is expected to become available; how many cases in which appeals have been allowed and the appellant has not yet been issued leave to remain are outstanding; and if he will make a statement. [36816]

Mr. McNulty: As previously explained information on how many outstanding cases there are in which appeals have been allowed and the appellant has yet to be issued with leave to remain is not available and can only be produced at disproportionate cost upon examination of individual cases.

Cannabis

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the levels of cannabis arriving in the UK from Afghanistan in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [33188]

Paul Goggins: The available information relates to seizures. In the last four financial years Her Majesty's Customs and Excise (HMCE) made seven seizures of cannabis (with a total weight of 300 kilograms) known to have originated in Afghanistan out of a total of 13,878 seizures (with a total weight of 240,000 kilograms).

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Government will publish the findings of the review of the reclassification of cannabis. [38140]

Paul Goggins: At the request of the Home Secretary, the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs (ACMD) has undertaken a review of the recent evidence about the effects of cannabis use on mental health and the alleged increase into the potency of cannabis products. The ACMD intends to publish its Report in early 2006.

Chemical/Biological Agents

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the research funded by his Department and conducted by the Food Standards Agency into the survivability of chemical and biological agents in bottled water and packaged food will be published; and if he will make a statement. [37899]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Information contained in this research could prove of value to individuals potentially wishing to tamper with food or drink products in order to pose a threat to the public for terrorist or other criminal purposes. Accordingly, it is not the intention of the Department to publish this research.

Christmas

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department is taking to celebrate and promote Christmas in 2005. [37286]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office is participating in a range of activities for its staff both to promote and celebrate Christmas.

Home Office staff have been invited to attend the Whitehall-wide Carol Service to be held on 15 December, organised and funded by the Whitehall Network of Christian Fellowships. Carol concerts are also being held in the main Home Office buildings in Croydon.

The Home Office has produced a corporate Christmas card to send to its external stakeholders, partners and contacts. The Home Secretary and permanent secretary will also send a seasonal message to staff. There will be Christmas trees and decorations in offices and reception areas in Home Office buildings. Staff restaurants in 2 Marsham Street and other buildings in the Home Office estate are providing a traditional Christmas lunchtime menu and individual prisons will organise a special Christmas dinner and other activities.

The Home Office is also participating in the Westminster Christmas Challenge organised by the Volunteering Centre Westminster to provide a range of practical assistance over the Christmas period to a number of local charities. Other individual areas of the Home Office are also organising fundraising and voluntary Christmas activities for a range of different charities.

Civic Pioneers Learning Network

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which local authorities (a) participate in and (b) used to participate in the Civic Pioneers Learning Network; and if he will make a statement. [33597]

Paul Goggins: There are 22 local authorities participating in the Civic Pioneer Network, shown in the list.

The Civic Pioneers initiative was developed by the Home Office's Civil Renewal Unit in discussion with the Local Government Association and the Society for Local Authority Chief Executives. A Civic Pioneer is a local authority committed to the ethos of community engagement, and is willing to share its experience in empowering local people in shaping public policies and services. Local authorities were invited to put themselves forward in working with the Home Office to develop and promote effective practices in support of this agenda. The scheme is voluntary and there is no funding attached to membership.

Corporate Fraud

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government are taking to encourage firms to report incidents of corporate fraud to the police; and if he will make a statement. [38236]

Paul Goggins: Criminal offences, including incidents of fraud, should be reported to the police.

A large amount of fraud can be prevented if organisations have proper fraud prevention measures in place and individuals take simple precautions to protect themselves. Government therefore works closely with the finance and retail sectors as well as with the police to combat fraud and takes an active role in improving public awareness of fraud and how to avoid becoming a victim.

For firms which are regulated by the Financial Services Authority (FSA), the Financial Services and Markets Act gives the FSA a role in preventing financial crime, including fraud. The FSA handbook includes a requirement that firms take reasonable care to establish and maintain effective systems and controls for countering the risk that they might be used to further financial crime and there is also an explicit requirement to report significant fraud. The combined code on corporate governance similarly requires all listed companies to maintain sound systems of internal control so as to safeguard company assets against relevant business risks, including the risk of fraud.

Terms of reference for a wide-ranging cross Government review of fraud were announced by the Attorney-General on 27 October 2005. The review will look at the scale of the problem, the appropriate role for Government in dealing with fraud and how resources could best be spent to maximise value for money across the system.

Correspondence

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green of 5 July, 19 July and 5 October regarding a constituent, Mr. Rastgouy; what the average response time to hon. Members' inquiries to the immigration and nationality directorate is; and if he will make a statement. [32003]

Mr. McNulty: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 12 December.

Credit Card Crime

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many stolen credit cards have been reported in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [38312]

(2) how much has been reported as stolen through fraudulent use of credit cards in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [38316]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office does not keep statistics on the number of stolen credit cards or how much money has been stolen through fraudulent use of credit cards.

Industry figures produced by the Association for Payment Clearing Services (APACS) show that UK plastic card fraud losses in the last five years have been:

	£ million
2004	504.8
2003	420.4
2002	424.6
2001	411.5
2000	317.0

The most recent APACS figures issued in November show that total card fraud losses in the six months to the end of June 2005 decreased by 13 percent. (from £252.6 million to £219.4 million) compared with the same period in 2004.

Crime Rates

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the change in (a) recorded crime rates and (b) crime detection rates was between 2003–04 and 2004–05 in each basic command unit in the Northumbria police area. [34390]

Hazel Blears: The requested information has been published in the online statistical bulletin 11/05 'Crime in England and Wales 2004/05', and can be accessed via the following links:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/bcu1.xls-offences recorded http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/bcu2.xls-offences detected

From April 1999 to March 2004, Northumbria police force had fifteen basic command units (BCUs) within its area. With effect from April 2004, they were condensed to six BCUs by the force.

As a result of this action, Northumbria BCU figures for 2003–04 and 2004–05 are not directly comparable.

Criminal Assets

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the Home Office Annual Report, what percentage of the £84 million of criminal assets recovered in 2004–05 has been assigned to (a) front-line capacity and (b) local community objectives; and if he will make a statement. [32802]

Paul Goggins: Of the £84 million of criminal assets recovered in 2004–05, 34 per cent. (£28.5 million) was assigned to frontline capacity and 8.3 per cent. (£7 million) to local community projects.

Cycling (Blue Flashing Lights)

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the extent of the use of blue flashing lights by cyclists; and what guidance (a) he and (b) the Association of Chief Police Officers has issued regarding the implications for their use of the 1989 Road Vehicle Lighting Regulations. [38256]

Paul Goggins: No such assessment has been made and no such guidance has been issued.

Chief officers of police are best placed to assess the nature and cause of cycling offences locally and to decide the most appropriate response.

Under the 1989 road vehicles lighting regulations (as amended) blue flashing lights on pedal cycles are prohibited, unless the pedal cycle is being used for police, fire brigade or ambulance purposes. Flashing lights are now permitted on pedal cycles generally but must be white to the front and red to the rear.

Damages

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the 10 largest amounts of damages paid out by his Department in the last year for which figures are available, indicating in each case the nature of the claim. [27727]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office Legal Advisors Branch, Treasury Solicitors Finance and Home Office Finance are unable to produce this information without disproportionate cost being incurred.

Departmental Estate

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which buildings and sites used by his Department and related agencies (a) have ceased to be used in the last year and (b) will be closed under plans for relocation. [31742]

Departmental Research

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research projects commissioned by his Department are being undertaken; and what the publication arrangements are in each case. [32997]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office commissions a variety of social and scientific research in order to improve policy making, decision taking and to provide the public and Parliament with information necessary for informed debate and for future use. All high quality social research outputs will either be published by the Home Office, or permission granted for such outputs to be published elsewhere.

The majority of social research is published as online reports, freely available on the Home Office website. Some works are still published in paper form, such as the Home Office research studies, and the summary publication: Findings. The Home Office Scientific Development Branch (HOSDB) Business Plan 2005–06 outlines the wide range of work carried out by HOSDB to deliver on the (recently published) HO Science and Innovation Strategy, increasing the effective use of physical sciences in Home Office business. The HOSDB Business Plan is available on the Home Office website. HOSDB is carrying out in excess of 100 science and technology projects to increase the capabilities of its stakeholders. As has been the case for many years, publications arising from the (non-classified) work will be made available in hard copy and (more recently) on the Home Office website.

Other (classified) publications will be given a limited circulation and issued to key stakeholders in their preferred format as appropriate. The Forensic Science Service carries out projects funded by the Home Office Hard Science research and development fund. The results of these projects are published when appropriate in peer-reviewed journals.

There are a number of other areas of the Department that also undertake research to inform policy development. The available information providing details of the research projects currently being undertaken across the Department and its agencies has been summarised in tables which will be placed in the Library, together with copies of the business plan for RDS NOMS.

Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the initial activity undertaken by his Department in response to those recommendations in the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People where lead responsibility was assigned to all Government Departments. [37090]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office has welcomed the Strategy Unit Report Improving Life Chances for Disabled People. The package of recommendations put forward should deliver improved outcomes for disabled people, their families and society as a whole. Although the Home Office does not hold sole responsibility for the recommendations put forward, the department has responded positively by taking forward the joint recommendations as part of the work on public sector duties under the Disability Discrimination Act 2005. The department, working closely with the new Office of Disability Issues and the Disability Rights Commission is reviewing its policies and services to identify the action needed to deliver equality for disabled people.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff in his Department were (a) civil servants, (b) contractors and (c) other staff in each year since 1997. [27446]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Department has awarded one contract for direct mail in 2005–06. The value of the spend to date is £17,200. The Department did not award any contracts for direct mail in 2004–05.

DNA Profiles

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people who have not been charged or cautioned for an offence have DNA profiles stored in the police national database; and if he will make a statement. [34330]

Andy Burnham: There are 139,463 people who have a DNA profile on the national DNA database (NDNAD) who have not been charged or cautioned with an offence.

This figure comprises: 124,347 people who have a DNA profile on the NDNAD who have been arrested and subsequently not been charged or cautioned with an offence. This information was provided by the Police Information Technology Organisation (PITO) and obtained from the police national computer (PNC) which is linked to the NDNAD; and 15,116 volunteer sample profile records retained on the NDNAD.

A volunteer sample is a DNA sample taken from an individual in relation to the investigation of an offence for elimination purposes and not as a result of the individual having been arrested in connection with an offence. The volunteer must give written consent to provide the sample; and can also volunteer to have their DNA profile held on the database by providing separate written consent for this. Volunteer samples may be taken from, for example, the victim of a crime, a third party, a member of a population identified for an intelligence-led screen or from an individual at their request.

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children under the age of 18 years have been added to the national DNA database in each year since 1996. [38505]

Andy Burnham: The estimated number of records of individuals aged 10–17 years added to the national DNA database in each year since 1995 is shown in the following table. The figures take account of replicate sample records on the database.

	Estimated number of 10 to 17-year-olds added to the database
1995	3,163
1996	11,719
1997	18,387
1998	32,810
1999	42,631
2000	70,627
2001	95,471

Domestic Violence

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 3 November 2005, Official Report, column 1253W, on domestic violence, what surveys on child and elder abuse have been undertaken by his Department in each of the last five years. [29559]

Hazel Blears: The Home Office has not undertaken any dedicated surveys on child and elder abuse.

Drug Testing (Drivers)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) unit cost per test and (b) cost of the necessary equipment for testing for drugs while driving is using the latest methods of testing saliva; whether he plans to make these tests available for roadside testing; and if he will make a statement. [28590]

Paul Goggins: The Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 amends the Road Traffic Act 1988 to authorise the police to conduct compulsory roadside test for impairment and for the presence of drugs. Any equipment used to test for drugs by testing a specimen of sweat or saliva must be of a type approved by the Secretary of State. Since there is as yet no such equipment, tests cannot at present be conducted. It is therefore not possible to give the unit cost per test or the cost of the equipment necessary to conduct the test.

A detailed device specification is currently in preparation. We hope this will be available in early 2006. Manufacturers will then be able to submit to the rigorous type approval process any device they have developed which complies with the specification.

Drugs

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish drug seizure and offender statistics for England and Wales for 2003; and what the reasons are for the delay in publication. [37900]

Paul Goggins: These statistics have been published within "Drug offenders in England and Wales 2003" (findings 256, 1 March 2005) and "Seizures of drugs in England and Wales, 2003" (findings 265, 25 August 2005). Both of these publications, along with respective supplementary tables, are available online at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/rfpubs1.htm.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals were sentenced to immediate custody for unlawful possession of cannabis in 2004 in cases where that was the most serious offence for which the individual was sentenced. [37901]

Paul Goggins: There were 161 persons sentenced to immediate custody for possession of cannabis, out of 13,302 sentenced for this offence in 2004. These figures relate to cases where the possession offence attracted the highest penalty.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) arrests, (b) convictions and (c) cautions for offences relating to (i) possession and (ii) dealing in class (A) A, (B) B and (C) C drugs there were in each police authority area in 2004. [35467]

Paul Goggins: Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of cautions and convictions for possession of and dealing in drugs in 2004, broken down by class of drug, is provided in the following table.

The information requested on arrests is not collected centrally.

Drunk and Disorderly

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many assaults recorded in the last five years in (a) London, (b) Havering and (c) Romford alcohol consumption was a contributing factor. [33918]

Paul Goggins: From the information collected on recorded crime it is not possible to identify those assaults which are alcohol-related. Such offences are not specifically defined by statute and details of the individual circumstances of offences do not feature in the data series.

Economic Crime Units

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the size is of the Economic Crime Unit of each police force in England. [37428]

Hazel Blears: This information is not held centrally. It is for the chief officer of each force to determine how to allocate the resources, including staff, at his/her disposal, taking into account local and national policing priorities.

EU Criminal Intelligence

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the development of an EU criminal intelligence model. [35523]

Paul Goggins: The criminal intelligence model being developed in the Council of the European Union is a cyclical intelligence process based on Europol's organised crime threat assessment. The Government are pleased that during the United Kingdom's presidency of the EU agreement has been reached that Europol will produce a first threat assessment by April 2006. This will provide a new basis for Ministers in the Council to set strategic organised crime priorities.

It will also provide operational leads that member states can pursue through initiating major cross-border investigations to disrupt significant criminal activity. The intelligence cycle will be completed with the results and intelligence generated by cross-border investigations being recycled to support the next round of the threat assessment.

European Commission (Anti-crime Measures)

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on the European Commission's proposals to establish a specialised investigation or prosecutorial body for dealing with the investigation of cases linked with organised crime. [36321]

Paul Goggins: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 8 December 2005, Official Report, column 1527W.

General Group Managed Migration Directorate

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department's target is for (a) an acknowledgement of and (b) a substantive response to correspondence received by the General Group Managed Migration Directorate. [36885]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) receives well over 1 million pieces of correspondence each year. The IND's policy is to acknowledge the receipt of all immigration, asylum, asylum support and citizenship applications either by sending a letter or issuing a form. We aim to acknowledge all new applications within one week of receipt. If there is a problem with the payment in connection with an application, the applicant will receive a reply rather than an acknowledgement. Other casework-related correspondence is not at present routinely acknowledged. General Group deals with casework correspondence as part of substantive consideration of applications. Service standards for decisions depend upon the type of application made and are published on the IND website.

Influenza Pandemic

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1061W, on the influenza pandemic, if he will (a) publish the assessment and (b) place a copy in the Library when it is put to Ministers. [38008]

Paul Goggins: I anticipate that draft guidance will be circulated to stakeholders early next year: a copy of the draft guidance will be placed in the House Library.

Licensing Act

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what extra resources he is providing to (a) police authorities and (b) other bodies to implement the Licensing Act 2003. [34163]

Hazel Blears: On 5 December 2005 I announced the provisional funding settlement for Police Authorities in England and Wales for 2006–07 and 2007–08. Government grant and central spending on services for the police will have increased by 56 per cent. or almost £4 billion between 2000–01 and 2007–08. Allocation of resources between activities is an operational matter for the Chief Constable, in the context of local police authority plans.

Streamlining administrative licensing processes by the police under the Licensing Act 2003 should lead to a saving of up to £15million annually. The Act gives the police further powers to tackle alcohol related disorder, for example, by allowing temporary or permanent reductions in trading hours. Through the Violent Crime Reduction Bill we are also introducing further powers for the police to help them tackle the problems of alcohol related crime or disorder.

We have also recently announced funding of £2.5 million to boost a range of operations to crack down on alcohol-related disorder; the sale of alcohol to under-18s and drunks; and the closure of problem premises.

Mobile Speed Cameras

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the accuracy of the mobile speed camera LTI 2020; and if he will make a statement. [33008]

Paul Goggins: The version of the LTI 20.20 speed meter that is type-approved for use by the police underwent very rigorous field and laboratory testing prior to the grant of type approval. It is self-calibrating and has an internal fault reporting system. All speed cameras are also subject to an annual check to ensure their continuing reliability.

I am satisfied that the device operates to a high degree of accuracy when used in accordance with the code of practice issued by the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Motor Vehicles (Safety Equipment)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) males and (b) females have been (i) charged with and (ii) convicted of offences under section (A) 1 and (B) 2 of the Motor Vehicles (Safety Equipment for Children) Act 1991 in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement on the operation of the Act. [29299]

Paul Goggins: Statistics on the number of persons charged with a crime are not centrally collected.

There are no offences under The Motor Vehicles (Safety Equipment for Children) Act 1991.

The Motor Vehicles (Safety Equipment for Children) Act 1991 enables regulations to be made about the type of restraints (e.g. car child seats) to be used by children in motor vehicles. It also covers the information to be provided on the installation and use of such restraints.

No such regulations have been made. Instead, provisions for child restraints are included in the Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts) Regulations 1993 (SI 1993 No 176) and the Motor Vehicles (Wearing of Seat Belts by Children in Front Seats) Regulations 1993 (SI 1993 No 31) made under sections 14 and 15 (as amended) of the Road Traffic Act 1988.

Those Regulations refer to the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986 (SI 1986 No 1078) which demand that child restraints satisfy the requirements of the British Standards Institute or the international requirements of EC Directive 77/541/EEC or Regulation 44 of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe. In addition to performance standards, these include requirements for installation instructions to be provided with new restraints.

National Firearms Register/National Identity Card Project

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the budget is for (a) the National Firearms Register and (b) the National Identity Card project for each year from 2002–03; and how many staff from his Department are working on each. [33241]

Hazel Blears: The Police Information Technology Organisation's (PITO) budget for the National Firearms Licensing Management System for 2002–03 was £997,000 (8), 2003–04 was £1,625,000 (5) and for 2004–05 it was £1,400,000 (5).

The Project Manager and Project Support Officer are the only people employed on this project full time. All other areas of PITO contribute time as and when needed. The figure in brackets represents the number of full time equivalents for each year.

The Identity Cards Programme expenditure for 2002–03 was £280,801.94, for 2003–04 it was £1,035,717.55 and for 2004–05 it was £12,376,637.77.

A total of 49 Home Office staff are employed on the Identity Cards Programme. Within the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) there are 6.9 people (full time equivalent) working on the ID cards project. A number of people at United Kingdom Passport Service (UKPS) work on the ID cards project, although none exclusively, in terms of full-time equivalent there were 3.2 UKPS staff working on the ID cards project.

Passports

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of passport photographs were rejected for not meeting the required standards in the last year for which figures are available. [35391]

Andy Burnham: The United Kingdom Passport Service (UKPS) have not retained detailed data on the reasons for rejection of applications in the past. As such, it is not possible to answer this question for the full year as requested. UKPS have manually kept photo rejection data from 12 September 2005. For the period of 18 September 2005 to 4 December 2005, UKPS rejected 12.5 per cent. of applications due to passport photograph standards.

Prior to the implementation of the new photographic standards, data is not available.

People Trafficking

David Mundell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why the Government have not yet ratified the Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings. [33412]

Paul Goggins: The Government have not yet taken a final decision on whether to sign the Council of Europe Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings. Whilst we support the aims of the Convention, there are provisions which present concerns for the UK and which remain under active consideration.

The Government have in place a multi-faceted strategy to tackle trafficking in human beings. We are determined that the measures we take both protect the victims of trafficking and bring the criminals responsible for this serious organised crime to justice.

Police

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what sanctions exist for misuse of confidential information relating to activities of the police by (a) elected local representatives and (b) police authority members, their advisers or employees. [26107]

Hazel Blears: Local authorities and police authorities are required to adopt a Code of Conduct that sets out rules governing the behaviour of their members, including the disclosure of confidential information. The Standards Board for England can consider any written allegations it receives that claim a member has breached that Code. Police authority employees or advisors are not covered by this Code. Police authority employees have an employment contract that sets out the action that may be taken for misuse of confidential information. Inappropriate use of information by police authority advisers is deemed to be a 'breach of trust' by the police authority. Authorities have a range of processes for dealing with inappropriate use of information, but no central established procedures.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the occasions (a) before and (b) after 26 October on which (i) the chief constable and (ii) other senior police officers of the Surrey constabulary contacted hon. Members representing constituencies in Surrey about the Terrorism Bill; and what form that contact took. [34201]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This is a matter for the chief constable of Surrey.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the pilot scheme on hand-held computers for police officers on the beat to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [34495]

Hazel Blears: The Police Information Technology Organisation is currently working with a small number of forces on trialling the use of hand-held computers. The trials are expected to be completed by mid 2006 and the results will be circulated to all forces.

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have been allocated to the London borough of Barnet in each year since 1997. [36470]

Hazel Blears: The information for Barnet borough Operational Command Unit is set out in the following table. Data on strength at Basic Command Unit (BCU) level has only been collected since 2002. Deployment of police resources to Barnet is an operational matter for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis.

Barnet borough operational command unit police officer numbers, 2002 to 2005

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) which police authorities have agreed joint protocols with local authorities in their areas for management of cases of children reported missing from home or care; [36473]

(2) which police authorities use (a) computerised and (b) paper-based recording and case management systems for reports of children missing from home or care; [36474]

(3) what information is centrally recorded on the number of children and young people reported missing to the police; for how long such information is held; and for what purposes it is used; [36476]

(4) which police authorities meet the missing person case management recording and investigation standards published by the Association of Chief Police Officers in 2005. [36477]

Hazel Blears: Information on protocols with local authorities and police forces meeting the relevant Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) standards is not centrally held. A Centrex implementation team is assisting police forces to achieve compliance with the ACPO standards with a target date of April 2006. Police forces with IT systems for handling missing persons reports are set out in the following list.

Information on missing persons reported to the police is held centrally on the police national computer (PNC)—name, date of birth, sex, description, date when person went missing, date reported to the police, circumstances of the disappearance and force reference number—and in the Police National Missing Persons Bureau (PNMPB)—full descriptive information relating to missing person and circumstances of disappearance, investigative considerations, person making the report and next of kin. All unresolved cases are held indefinitely.

Reporting to the PNC permits forces in the UK to identify a person reported missing and to respond appropriately. PNMPB records permit comparison of missing person reports and notification to police forces or Interpol. The PNMPB also prepares quarterly statistics including missing males/females under fourteen years of age, between fourteen and seventeen and aged eighteen and over.

The best information to hand at the present time relating to IT systems in forces shows that the following have such systems:-

Avon and Somerset
Derbyshire
Gloucestershire
Greater Manchester police
Hampshire—in development
Hertfordshire
Lancashire
Leicestershire
Lincolnshire—in development
Metropolitan police
Norfolk
North Wales
Northamptonshire—in development
Nottinghamshire
Staffordshire
South Yorkshire

West Mercia
West Midlands

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire, (d) Greater London and (e) England and Wales use bicycles while patrolling; and what the figures were in (i) 1992, (ii) 1996, (iii) 1997, (iv) 1998, (v) 2001 and (vi) 2004. [37540]

Hazel Blears: This information is not collected.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers are serving in (a) Essex and (b) England and Wales; what these figures represent per head of the population in each case; and how many police officers were serving in (i) Essex and (ii) England and Wales in 1997. [35451]

Hazel Blears: The number of police officers serving in Essex as at 31 March 2005, was 3,230 full-time equivalent (FTE), this constitutes 198 officers per 100,000 population. The number of police officers serving in England and Wales as at 31 March 2005 was 142,795 (FTE), this constitutes 270 officers per 100,000 population.

As at 31 March 1997, there were 2,961 (FTE) police officers serving in Essex, this constitutes 196 officers per 100,000 population. The number of police officers serving in England and Wales as at 31 March 1997 was 127,158 (FTE), this constitutes 244 officers per 100,000 population.

Following boundary changes with the Metropolitan police on 1 April 2000, parts of the Met area and resources were transferred to Essex, Hertfordshire and Surrey.

Police Basic Command Units

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police basic command units there were in England and Wales in each year since 1997. [36146]

Hazel Blears: The available information is shown in the following table. Data on the number of Basic Command Units (BCUs) has only been collected since March 2002. The number of BCUs in each force is an operational matter for the chief constable.

Number of basic command units in England and Wales 2002 to 2005

2003[2]	274

Police Force Mergers

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the costs associated with merging police forces. [30421]

Hazel Blears: I am aware that there will be initial upfront costs associated with developing strategic police forces. I have requested that as part of developing their proposals forces and authorities undertake a cost benefit analysis of the options that have been identified as suitable for progression. This will included estimates surrounding 'set up' costs. We will be in a better position to assess up front costs once final options have been submitted in December.

Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary (HMIC) report has shown that although there will be upfront costs associated with developing strategic forces, there will be greater savings made through economies of scale resulting from restructuring.

Predictive Diallers

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many calls were made from call centres in his Department in 2004–05 using predictive diallers; how many such calls resulted in contact being made with the recipient without a Government agent available to talk to them; and what assessment he has made of the likely impact of Ofcom's policy on silent calls on the use of predictive diallers in departmental call centres. [28173]

Mr. Charles Clarke: None; the Department does not utilise predictive diallers in its call centres.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those Private Members' Bills introduced (a) under Standing Order No 14(6), (b) Standing Order No 23 and (c) Standing Order No 57 which were (i) supported and (ii) opposed by his Department in each Session since 1997–98. [36216]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested in not collected by the Department and providing it would incur disproportionate costs.

Proceeds of Crime Act

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the basis of apportionment was in 2004–05 for the incentivisation fund for recoveries under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002. [37679]

Paul Goggins: As agreed with the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO), under the police incentivisation scheme the police service would receive one-third of the total assets recovered over and above £40 million in 2004–05, increasing to one half in 2005–06. The Government are spending more than the first £40 million to support existing spending commitments in the asset recovery field. It was also agreed with ACPO that incentive payments would be based on the performance of each force in 2004–05 in the recovery of criminal assets. The amount allocated to each force was determined by its percentage contribution to the total value of cash forfeitures and confiscation orders obtained by the police service in 2004–05.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) searches were carried out and (b) cash seizures were made in each of the last three years by (i) police officers and (ii) Customs officers exercising their powers under Part 5, chapter 3 of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002; and how much cash was seized in each case. [37755]

Paul Goggins: Information on the number of searches carried out by police and Customs officers is not held centrally. Information on the total number and value of cash seizures by (i) police officers and (ii) Customs officers in each of the last three years is set out in the following table.

Cash detention orders

	HMR and C		Police
	Volume	Value (£)	Volume	Value (£)
2003–04	403	19,351,537.19	128	5,259,997.52
2004–05	664	20,221,726.93	521	14,257,952.36
2005–06	256	13,731,475.77	458	14,065,604.45

Rape Units

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police forces in England and Wales have specialist rape units. [37341]

Paul Goggins: In the stock take of implementation of the Rape Action Plan 2002 carried out in September 2005, four police forces reported that they had specialist rape units staffed by Sexual Offence Liaison Officers.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many regulatory impact assessments have been published in relation to legislation sponsored by his Department in each year since 1995; and if he will make a statement. [34321]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 998W, which gives details of regulatory impact assessments (RIAs) from August 2001 to June 2005. The number of RIAs published before August 2001 was as follows:

RIA Table

	Number of RIAs
1997 (July to December)	[1]6

Road Safety

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 11 November, Official Report, column 852–3W, on road safety, why figures on numbers of road traffic police officers are unavailable for years before 2003. [31352]

Paul Goggins: Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) held data prior to 2002–03 on their Matrix database. However, following a software upgrade, this data was corrupted. It was unclear how long it would be before it was restored, so we provided the information that was currently available in order to meet the PQ deadline. This information is now available from 1999–2000 and is given in the following table.

Police officers whose main function is Traffic[1], total for England and Wales, 2000–02

As at 31 March each year	Full-time equivalent[2]
2000	7,525
2001	7,238
2002	7,005

[1] Staff with multiple responsibilities(or designations) are recorded under their primary role or function.

[2] Full-time equivalent includes those on career breaks or maternity/paternity leave.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to allow persons guilty of an offence under section 14(3) of the Road Traffic Act 1988, in lieu of a fine, to attend a driving safety course paid for by the offender that includes instruction on the benefits of wearing seat belts; and if he will make a statement. [38032]

Paul Goggins: The Government are keen to use education as part of a penalty where it is appropriate. Rehabilitation courses for persons convicted of drink driving have been available nationally since 2000 and have proved successful. On this basis, we propose through the Road Safety Bill, currently under consideration in another place, to provide the courts with powers to refer people convicted of speeding and careless driving offences to retraining courses with the incentive of a reduction in disqualification or penalty points. There are no plans to extend the scope to non-endorsable offences including seat belt offences.

Roads (Policing Costs)

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost was of policing roads in England and Wales in each year since 1997. [38450]

Paul Goggins: This available information is set out in the table.

Traffic and road safety expenditure in England and Wales

2000–01	391,251
2001–02	410,868
2002–03	446,534

Skills for Security

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department's role was in the establishment of Skills for Security as a sector skills body for the security industry; and if he will make a statement. [36373]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office has not been involved in the establishment of the new Skills for Security organisation. Traditionally, SITO (Security Industry Training Organisation—a subsidiary company of the British Security Industry Association) had been the national occupation standards setting body for the industry. That work was carried out co-operatively between the BSIA, SITO and the Security Industry Authority. It was considered crucial for the future good of the industry that the experience and knowledge within the SITO organisation should not be lost.

Tackling Drugs, Changing Lives

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what events are planned as part of 'Tackling Drugs, Changing Lives'; and when they will be held. [38098]

Paul Goggins: A key challenge faced by the Government are communicating the positive impact and tangible difference to communities that is being delivered by the Drug Strategy. To address this, a series of events have been organised that will engage communities directly.

Nine public-facing regional events are taking place; one in each Government Office region. The events are designed to provide local communities with the opportunity to speak directly to Ministers and senior officials and hear what the Government are doing to tackle drugs. Events have taken place in the North West and the South West. The next event is due to take place in Hull, covering the Yorkshire and Humberside region, on 31 January 2006. Due to ministerial diary pressures, it is not yet possible to confirm the dates of the remaining regional events.

Terrorism

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to (a) develop the capacity of UK law enforcement agencies to detect and disrupt hostile reconnaissance of potential targets by terrorists and (b) to ensure that this work brings maximum benefit to (i) the public and (ii) commercial organisations; and if he will make a statement. [37898]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office works closely with police forces and the intelligence agencies to develop the strategy in tackling terrorism. It is the operational responsibility of the police to develop tactics to address local terrorist activity. Forces across the country have operations in place to gather and analyse information on hostile reconnaissance of potentially targeted sites. The Metropolitan, City of London and other forces have projects to share information and skills with business.

UN Convention against Corruption

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the timetable to introduce the Orders in Council which will enable the United Kingdom to meet its remaining obligations under the UN Convention Against Corruption will allow the UK to ratify the Convention before the end of 2005. [33506]

Paul Goggins: The formalities of ratification of the Convention are completed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office when they deposit the instrument of ratification with the body acting as depositary (in this case, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime based in Vienna). UK policy on ratifying treaties is that we move to formal ratification only when UK law is in compliance. The enabling legislation to achieve compliance requires four Orders in Council, two of which are the responsibility of the Home Office. Both of the Home Office Orders, which extend to England and Wales, were laid in Parliament on 25 November. The remaining two Orders are the responsibility of the Northern Ireland Office and the Scottish Parliament. All of the Orders are timetabled to come into force at the turn of the year.

Under-age Drinking (Penalty Notices)

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fixed penalty notices have been issued for (a) selling alcohol to under-18s, (b) under-18s drinking alcohol, (c) attempting to buy alcohol when under age and (d) selling alcohol to a person who is drunk; and if he will make a statement. [32793]

Paul Goggins: The Penalty Notice for Disorder (PND) scheme was brought into effect in England and Wales during 2003–04 to provide the police with a quick and effective means of dealing with minor offences. Under the scheme an offender is issued with a fixed penalty notice and has 21 days in which to pay the penalty or request a court hearing.

The numbers of penalty notices issued for offences related to selling and buying alcohol are provided in the table.

Number of Penalty Notices for Disorder for certain offences relating to alcohol, England and Wales, 2004 and 2005[1]

Offence description	2004	2005
Selling alcohol to person under 18	113	385
Consumption of alcohol by under 18 in licensed premises	7	33
Buying/attempting to buy alcohol by under 18	—	5

[1] Provisional data January-July 2005

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) businesses and (b) individuals were prosecuted for supplying alcohol to youths under the age of 18 years in (i) England, (ii) Staffordshire and (iii) Tamworth constituency in each of the past five years. [27486]

Paul Goggins: The number of defendants proceeded against at magistrates courts in England and Staffordshire police force area for "Selling etc., intoxicating liquor to persons under 18 for consumption on the premises" (including "wholesaler selling intoxicating liquor to a person under 18") 2000 to 2004 is contained in the following table. It is not possible to identify those prosecuted in Tamworth, as the data is not collected at this level of detail.

The penalty notice for disorder scheme provides for persons who commit specified penalty offences to be issued with a fixed penalty notice instead of being prosecuted. The offence of selling alcohol to persons aged under 18 was added to the Penalty Notice for Disorder (PND) scheme on one November 2004 for use on bar or off license staff. License holders will be prosecuted. The court has powers to declare a justices' licence forfeit on a second or subsequent conviction. The Licensing Act 2003 allows the court on conviction to suspend a personal licence for up to six months or to declare it forfeit for first conviction.

In England, 112 penalty notices were issued for this offence in 2004 and provisional data for 2005 shows that 377 were issued to the end of July. In Staffordshire, no penalty notices were issued in 2004 or 2005 for this offence.

Weapons Amnesty

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) which local police forces in England have offered a weapons amnesty in each year since 1997; [36988]

(2) whether he plans to encourage local police forces to offer permanent weapon amnesties. [36989]

Hazel Blears: The information requested is not collected centrally. It is a matter for police forces in conjunction with the local Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) to decide whether to hold an amnesty or hand-in scheme in respect of particular types of weapons. We are, however, developing plans for a knife amnesty in England and Wales in the new year.

TRANSPORT

A21 Upgrade

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about further public consultations for the proposed A21 upgrade. [39254]

Dr. Ladyman: A meeting was held on 7 December 2005, chaired by the Hurst Green Parish Council Chairman, where the Highways Agency discussed the plans to upgrade the A21 between Flimwell and Hurst Green with representatives of Goudhurst Parish Council, Hurst Green Parish Council, Hurst Green And Flimwell Chamber of Commerce, A21 Sussex Action Group, Cedar and Ringden Farms and councillors from Rother district council and East Sussex county council.

The details of the meeting will be reported back to me shortly and I will write to my hon. Friend with further information.

Air Bags (Motor Vehicles)

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has commissioned independent research on the efficiency of air bags in motor vehicles. [38729]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department completed research into the effectiveness of airbags in motor vehicles in 2003. The principal findings were presented at the International Research Council on the Biomechanics of Impact International Conference 2002. This project focused on obtaining an improved understanding of the overall benefits and risks involved with both front and side airbag deployments for a range of vehicle occupants. The project determined that in general frontal airbags offer extra protection to vehicle occupants, with significant overall benefits for head injuries. The benefits for thoracic injuries are less clear, and airbags are less effective at reducing injuries in certain types of accidents (such as angled impacts, pole impacts and high intrusion impacts). There is insufficient data available at present to draw any firm conclusions on the risks and benefits of deploying side airbags.

Aircraft Flight Plans

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many aircraft flight plans have been filed to the Integrated Flight Plans System for or on behalf of (a) the Central Intelligence Agency and (b) other departments or agencies of the United States Administration since the beginning of 2003; and if he will make a statement. [38944]

Ms Buck: UK law on civil air operations is governed by the UK's obligations under the Chicago Convention on International Civil Aviation 1944.

Under the Rules of the Air established in Annex 2 to the Convention, the commander of an aircraft must file a flight plan for all flights that will cross international borders, and for most other flights that are engaged in commercial operations. For flights operating in European controlled airspace, flight plans are filed with the Central Flow Management Unit (CFMU) at Eurocontrol, the European Organisation for the Safety of Air Navigation.

On receipt of the flight plan, the CFMU perform a number of checks before distributing the information to the relevant air traffic control units along the projected route of the aircraft. Each of the air traffic units, for example National Air Traffic Services (NATS) in the UK, then utilises the information in order to provide air traffic services for the flight.

The flight plan provides information on the aircraft's identity (whether it is civil or state) and equipment, the point and time of departure, the route and altitude to be flown, the destination and estimated time of arrival, and the alternate airport to be used should landing be impossible. The flight plan also specifies whether the flight will be carried out under visual or instrument flight rules.

Consequently, the Department does not hold the requested information.

Aircraft N829MG

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions since September 2001 an aircraft with registration number N829MG has transited a United Kingdom airport carrying a passenger who was not of US nationality. [38630]

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport has no records of an aircraft with registration N829MG having been granted a permit under article 138 of the Air Navigation Order 2005. Permission from the Secretary of State for Transport is only required by foreign aircraft operating civil flights into the UK where they land and take on board or discharge passengers or cargo, and where payment is given or promised in respect of that carriage.

Airports

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) paved and (b) unpaved airport runways there are in (i) Scotland, (ii) Wales, (iii) each of the English regions and (iv) Northern Ireland of (A) under 914 metres, (B) 914 to 1,523 metres, (C) 1,524 to 2,437 metres, (D) 2,438 to 3,047 metres and (E) over 3, 047 metres in length. [39210]

Ms Buck: The full information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Arriva Buses

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much bus service operators grant has been claimed by Arriva buses in (a) England, (b) the North East Government Office Region and (c) the boroughs of the Tees Valley sub-region since 1995. [32811]

Ms Buck: We are unable to provide commercially confidential information.

Arriva Trains Wales

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many trains on the Arriva Trains Wales service between Birmingham and Aberystwyth did not (a) depart from and (b) arrive at Birmingham in the most recent period that figures are available; and what percentage of journeys on the line these figures represent. [35446]

Derek Twigg: Between 16 October and 12 November 2005 (Period 8), 112 services between Aberystwyth and Birmingham either terminated short of Birmingham or commenced outside Birmingham. This accounts for 24 per cent. of the scheduled services between Aberystwyth and Birmingham. This is due to a combination of speed restrictions and delays caused by other train services. It is for Network Rail to determine the location and duration of temporary speed restrictions.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much subsidy Arriva Trains Wales has received from his Department in each year since 2004; how much the company has paid in penalties in each year; and if he will make a statement. [38241]

Derek Twigg: Arriva Trains Wales received a total cash subsidy of £46.4 million for the period from franchise commencement on 8 December 2003 to 31 March 2004. It received a total cash subsidy of £97.8 million for the period 1 April 2004 to 31 March 2005. No penalty payments were made by Arriva Trains Wales during either of these periods.

Bicycle Use (Environmental Effects)

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what lifecycle analysis he has (a) conducted and (b) evaluated on the carbon dioxide emissions of bicycle use. [39339]

Dr. Ladyman: We are not aware of any detailed research in this area. Any carbon dioxide emissions resulting from the manufacture and distribution of bicycles are likely to be more than outweighed by the carbon savings associated with the use of the bicycle as a substitute for motorised transport over its lifetime.

British Transport Police

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what additional manpower he plans to allocate to the British Transport police for security duties on the London underground. [37177]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 13 December 2005]: The London underground area of the British Transport police is funded by London Underground and Transport for London. Since 2003–04, TfL/LU has funded an additional 200 police officers bringing the total for LU to 677.

C2C Line/One Rail

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many trains on (a) the C2C line and (b) One Rail were cancelled in the last year; and what the reason was for each cancellation. [34256]

Derek Twigg: The most recent performance summary indicates that the total train cancellations for year to date on C2C stands at 1,451 and 'One' Railway 6,815.

In the last 12 months, punctuality figures for One and C2C were 93.7 per cent. Public Performance Measure (PPM) and 88.1 per cent. PPM respectively. PPM is the industry standard for measuring the proportion of trains arriving on time.

Cancellations causation is grouped as follows:

Car Sales

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) new and (b) second hand cars were sold in the UK in each financial year since 1997. [38816]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of cars newly registered in Great Britain in each financial year are as follows:

	Thousand
1997–98	2,234
1998–99	2,293
1999–2000	2,297
2000–01	2,363
2001–02	2,639
2002–03	2,669
2003–04	2,681
2004–05	2,544

The number of second hand cars sold is not available.

Cheap Rail Tickets (Availability)

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the availability of advance cheap rail tickets over the Christmas period. [39335]

Derek Twigg: No routine assessment is made of the availability of cheap airline, coach or train tickets. These fares are not regulated, so airlines, coach companies and train operators are free to set fares and manage availability to make the best use of their available capacity.

Cost Benefit Analyses

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what financial value is placed by his Department on the saving of a human life for the purposes of undertaking cost-benefit analysis of transport projects. [34335]

Ms Buck [holding answer 2 December 2005]: The Department estimate values for the prevention of road casualties for use in the appraisal of road schemes. These values are published in the annual Highways Economics Note No. 1 which can be found at www.dft.gov.uk.

The Department also applies these values for the prevention of fatal casualties in the appraisal of rail schemes.

Crossrail

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will issue the consultation proposals for the funding of Crossrail. [27936]

Derek Twigg: As the Secretary of State made clear to the House on 19 July, the consultation on alternative funding mechanisms for Crossrail will take place after the conclusion of Sir Michael Lyons review of local government funding.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make an announcement on the funding of Crossrail. [30579]

Derek Twigg: As the Secretary of State made clear to the House on 19 July, decisions on the balance of funding on Crossrail, including the planned consultation on the use of alternative funding mechanisms, will be made after the conclusion of Sir Michael Lyons' review of local government funding.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what the total estimated cost is for the construction of Crossrail; [31725]

(2) how the construction costs for Crossrail will be funded. [31726] [31726]

Derek Twigg: I refer the hon. Member to the parliamentary estimate of expense submitted with the Crossrail hybrid Bill. As the Secretary of State made clear to the House on 19 July, decisions on the balance of funding on Crossrail, including the planned consultation on use of alternative funding mechanisms, will be made after the conclusion of Sir Michael Lyons review of local government funding.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of the costs of the Crossrail project he expects to be met by (a) the Government and (b) the private sector. [32380]

Derek Twigg: I refer the hon. Member to the parliamentary estimate of expense submitted with the Crossrail hybrid Bill. As the Secretary of State made clear to the House on 19 July, decisions on the balance of funding on Crossrail, including the planned consultation on use of alternative funding mechanisms, will be made after the conclusion of Sir Michael Lyons review of local government funding.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the Department's latest estimate is of the projected costs of the Crossrail project, broken down by (a) central government funding and (b) London-generated funding; what assessment he has made of the local Government funding mechanisms that might be used to raise London-generated funds; and if he will make a statement. [34262]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 2 December 2005]: I refer the hon. Member to the parliamentary estimate of expense submitted with the Crossrail Hybrid Bill.

As the Secretary of State made clear to the House on 19 July 2005, decisions on the balance of funding on Crossrail—including the planned consultation on the use of alternative funding mechanisms to collect a London contribution—will be made after the conclusion of Sir Michael Lyons review of local government funding.

Departmental Estate

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was paid by his Department in 2004–05 in rent for properties in (a) total, (b) each (i) region and (ii) nation of the UK and (c) London. [35961]

Ms Buck: The requested information is as follows:

(a) £27,161,852 (and £3,375,393 VAT).

(b) A breakdown of rents paid on individual properties has been placed in the Libraries of the House. Data in respect of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency rent VAT payments and Highways Agency payments by property can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the initial activity undertaken by his Department in response to those recommendations in the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report, Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People, where lead responsibility was assigned to all Government departments. [37064]

Ms Buck: The Report recommended that local authorities should be encouraged to play a strategic role to ensure that disabled people do not experience barriers at any stage of the journeys they need to make. The Department has introduced Accessibility Planning within the next Local Transport Plans, requiring local authorities to identify the accessibility problems of individuals or communities in areas of social need and to produce plans for tackling them. The Department has also encouraged authorities to identify the needs of disabled people as part of that approach.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many meetings of the EU (a) Advisory Committee on restrictive practices and dominant positions in the transport industry, (b) Advisory Committee on restrictive practices and dominant positions in the shipping industry and (c) Advisory Committee on restrictive practices and dominant positions in air transport have taken place during the UK presidency of the EU; who presided over each meeting; what other UK representatives were present; what provision was made for representation of the devolved Governments; and if he will make a statement. [38773]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I have been asked to reply.

The only meeting to take place during this period was one meeting of the Advisory Committee on restrictive practices and dominant positions in the shipping industry. The European Commission chairs the Committee and officials from the Office of Fair Trading (OFT), Department for Transport (DfT) and DTI represented the UK. No provisions were made for the representation of the devolved Governments, as this is not a devolved issue.

Eurotunnel

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on the cost of the civil engineering and building infrastructure maintenance strategy for the Eurotunnel concession under development by Eurotunnel; [24608]

(2) if he will make a statement on the (a) timetable for and (b) costs of the completion of Operation TAPIS 2 by Eurotunnel; [24609]

(3) whether defects resulting from the detoriation of the upper track bed at its interface with the sleeper blocks in the Channel Tunnel have been remedied. [24610]

Derek Twigg: Eurotunnel's Operation TAPIS 2, to remedy defects resulting from the deterioration of the upper track bed at its interface with the sleeper blocks in the Channel Tunnel, was completed in the course of November 2005. It is part of an ongoing programme of corrective and preventive maintenance on the permanent way in the Tunnel. The work needed has been fully discussed between Eurotunnel and the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority's safety experts.

My Department does not hold details of the cost or of the schedule for completion of the TAPIS programme, which forms part of Eurotunnel's civil engineering and building infrastructure maintenance strategy and is a matter for Eurotunnel.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of (a) whether the avant-projets of Eurotunnel remain relevant and (b) the development of alternative procedures (i) for considering modifications to Eurotunnel's existing arrangements and (ii) for determining which modifications are sufficiently significant to require the involvement and agreement of the Intergovernmental Commission and the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority. [24612]

Derek Twigg: We understand that discussions have taken place, involving Eurotunnel, on the need to continue to update avant projets when changes are made, and on alternative methods of obtaining agreement to any further major changes in procedures or physical structures. These discussions are not concluded.

It is for the Channel Tunnel Intergovernmental Commission, advised by the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority, to determine the extent to which Eurotunnel's avant projets remain relevant and the extent to which the Intergovernmental Commission needs to approve the development of alternative procedures for modifications to Eurotunnel's existing arrangements.

Agreement to the original commissioning of the tunnel operation was on the basis of agreement by the Intergovernmental Commission to "avant projets" submitted by Eurotunnel, which described proposed structures and procedures.

General Lighthouse Fund

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many former overseas lighthouse keepers receive pensions from the General Lighthouse Fund. [38419]

Dr. Ladyman: 34 former overseas lighthouse keepers receive pensions from the General Lighthouse Fund.

Internet (Environmental Effects)

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of changes in carbon dioxide emissions resulting from internet purchasing. [39338]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has not made any estimates of the carbon impacts of internet shopping.

Light Rail Schemes

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much funding has been (a) allocated and (b) spent directly by his Department on (i) the Leeds Supertram scheme and (ii) light rail schemes in England. [37869]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 15 December 2005]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer of 5 October 2005, Official Report, column 2858W.

The Department does not directly fund light rail schemes in England. It is for Passenger Transport Executives/Authorities and local authorities, as promoters of light rail schemes, to do so with funding provided by the Department.

Around £39 million of public sector finance has been spent on Leeds Supertram. Of this, around £5 million has been spent on construction costs with around a further £14 million on land and property purchase.

In 2004–05 the Department provided £6 million to the promoters of Leeds Supertram for scheme development costs, including advance works.

Lights Commissioners

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on hospitality by the Lights Commissioners in (a) Scotland, (b) the Isle of Man, (c) England and Wales, (d) Northern Ireland and (e) the Republic of Ireland in each of the last three years. [38439]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is shown in the table.

		2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
Northern Lighthouse Board	Scotland and the Isle of Man	16,756	18,947	20,356
Trinity House Lighthouse Service	England and Wales	35,000	37,000	50,000
Commissioners of Irish Lights	Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland	5,000	4,200	4,500

The information for the Isle of Man is included in the figures for the Northern Lighthouse Board. The figures cover funding of internal and external functions that include staff and visitors from other General Lighthouse Authorities.

Liverpool City Council

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions have taken place between officials in his Department and the chief executive and officials of Liverpool city council since June; what means of communication were used in each case; and if he will place in the Library the (a) minutes and (b) submissions relating to such communications. [35195]

Derek Twigg: There were several telephone conversations with the chief executive of Liverpool city council in connection with the assurances the council might give in relation to the Merseytram scheme. There are no minutes or specific submissions recording these communications.

A Liverpool officer recently attended the Department's street lighting PFI conference.

London Olympics

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 565W, on the London Olympics, if he will list the relevant bodies funding improvement extension schemes for the (a) Channel Tunnel Rail Link, (b) East London Line Extension and (c) Docklands Light Railway. [37034]

Ms Buck: The Channel Tunnel Rail Link extension is being funded by the Department for Transport. The temporary works to allow the operation of the Olympic Javelin Shuttle service in 2012 are being funded from the Olympics Budget.

The East London Line Extension is being funded by Transport for London.

Extensions to the Docklands Light Railway are being funded by Transport for London. However, a number of service enhancements and station improvements for the DLR are being funded from the Olympics budget.

Lorries/Commercial Vans

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new (a) lorries and (b) commercial vans were bought in each year since 1997. [38815]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of lorries and commercial vans newly registered in Great Britain in each year are as follows:

Thousand

	Lorries	Commercial vans
1997	35	216
1998	41	234
1999	38	234
2000	47	249
2001	51	274
2002	45	284
2003	36	318
2004	35	341

M1 (Junction 29)

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has plans to improve egress from the northbound carriageway of the M1 motorway at junction 29 to reduce congestion; and if he will make a statement. [38441]

Dr. Ladyman: A Highways Agency scheme, designed to reduce congestion on the Northbound Exit Slip Road at Junction 29 of the M1 Motorway, is currently being prepared.

The scheme consists of the signalisation of the Northbound Exit Slip Road at its interface with the Roundabout at Junction 29. There will also be localised realignment and widening of the carriageway to bring it up to current standards, together with improved signing and white lining to this slip road and the roundabout.

The works are scheduled to commence on site in February 2006 and are expected to be complete by the end of March 2006.

Metrolink Tram Network (Manchester)

Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the latest financial situation in relation to the Phase Three extension of the Metrolink tram network in Greater Manchester. [29592]

Derek Twigg: I refer my the hon. Member to the Statement my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport made on 16 December 2004 about committing public sector funding for Manchester's transport network.

Motorbikes

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many second hand motorbikes were purchased in each year since 1997. [38661]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not available.

Motorised Mini-scooters

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what laws apply to the use of motorised mini-scooters on (a) public highways, (b) public land and (c) private land. [39333]

Dr. Ladyman: It is for the courts to provide an authoritative interpretation of the law, and two High Court judgments have confirmed miniature motor scooters to be motor vehicles within the meaning of the Road Traffic Act 1988 as amended. We believe it likely that a similar ruling could be made on other vehicles, such as miniature motorcycles, should a court case arise.

Motor vehicles on the public highway must meet relevant construction requirements and be registered, taxed, insured etc. Drivers/riders must hold an appropriate licence and where necessary wear a suitable helmet. Off-highway use is possible where landowners' permission (whether private or public landowners) is received.

Enforcement of road traffic law is a matter for individual Chief Officers of Police. In addition police forces can counter irresponsible use of miniature motor scooters and other such vehicles under the Police Reform Act 2002. This enables the police to seize vehicles being driven in a careless and inconsiderate manner or off-road without consent and in a way which causes alarm, distress or annoyance to members of the public.

I understand that the packaging on powered items such as miniature scooters or motorcycles generally includes a warning that they are not for highway use. However it may be that, once such packaging is discarded, this is overlooked or ignored. The Department has issued guidance on our website to remind purchasers and others about responsible use of these vehicles and about possible penalties for mis-use, while the Home Office has published advice on its TOGETHER website for practitioners tackling the associated mis-use. In addition, a number of local authorities and police forces are running initiatives to inform the public about these matters, and are taking action where offences are committed.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent estimate he has made of the number of (a) accidents and (b) casualties which arose in a year from the use of motorised mini-scooters. [39334]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not available.

Motorway Lighting

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will initiate a study to compare the number of night-time accidents on stretches of unlit motorway with stretches of motorway that have lighting; and if he will publish the conclusions. [38440]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency, who operate and manage the motorway network in England, have already instigated a project that is comparing night-time accidents on sections of lit and unlit roads. The aim is to review the benefit of road lighting on motorways by analysis of accident statistics. The findings will be incorporated into the revised national standard for the appraisal of road lighting provision on trunk roads and motorways, which is planned to be published towards the end of 2006.

Multi-modal Study (Tyneside)

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action has been taken by Newcastle-upon-Tyne city council in response to his suggestion in the response to the Tyneside area multi-modal study that local authorities locate major generators of personal travel in areas best served by public transport. [38024]

Ms Buck [holding answer 15 December 2005]: The "Newcastle Upon Tyne Unitary Development Plan" (UDP), adopted in January 1998 guides the consideration of possible locations for major travel generating development. The UDP also provides the context for decisions upon individual planning applications. In addition, Government's national planning policy documents—principally, planning policy guidance and planning policy statements—provide a context for the development of plans at the local level.

In order to update and review the UDP, in consultation with the local community, the city council is producing a "local development framework" (LDF). The LDF will contain a suite of local development plan documents prepared under the powers of the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004.

Within the council's local development scheme,, effectively the LDF project plan of action, a key priority is to produce a "core strategy" development plan document which will be the subject of public consultation in 2006. The core strategy will provide a vision, strategic objectives, spatial strategy and an implementation framework for all other more detailed and site-specific development plans that will be produced in the city. It is these development plans that will help to shape how the city develops and regenerates over the current and next decade, including how development relates to the local transport system.

Parking Offences

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many times bailiffs have been used to obtain money owed as a result of non-payment of penalty charge notices following the decriminalisation of parking offences; and in how many such cases the initial penalty charge notice has subsequently been found invalid. [37977]

Ms Buck [holding answer 15 December 2005]: Information on the number of times bailiffs have been used to obtain money owed as a result of non-payment of Penalty Charge Notices is not held centrally.

Port of Sharpness

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what security is available at the port of Sharpness; who provides the security; and how many hours per week the security is in place. [39276]

Dr. Ladyman: Sharpness Dock is permanently covered by a port facility security plan that was approved by the Department on 28 June 2004.

Responsibility for implementing and exercising the plan rests with the port facility security officer who received Government accredited training in January 2004.

Potters Bar Rail Crash

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from the Coroner of Hertfordshire regarding the Potters Bar derailment. [37938]

Derek Twigg: The Department has received several communications about the timing of the decision to be taken by the Secretary of State on a public inquiry information on the costs of holding an inquest, and a paper outlining the coroner's views on the difficulties he might face in conducting the inquest into the deaths at Potters Bar. As a result of these representations, the Secretary of State has agreed, if necessary, to fund the coroner's costs for the inquest.

Public Service Vehicles Accessibility Regulations

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2005, Official Report, column 1852W, on buses, what mechanism exists to ensure that the Public Service Vehicles Accessibility Regulations 2000 (a) are kept under review and (b) will be developed in line with technology. [39383]

Ms Buck: Regular working group meetings take place at official level with representatives of the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee. Officials also participate in international discussions, meet trade bodies, individual operators and manufacturers to ensure that standards remain appropriate and reflect developments in technology.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2005, Official Report, column 1852W, on buses, who the stakeholders affected by the Public Service Vehicles Accessibility Regulations 2000 are. [39384]

Ms Buck: The stakeholders are bus passengers, groups representing disabled people such as the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee, bus operators, vehicle manufacturers and those organisations with responsibility for funding bus services.

Public Transport Accessibility (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to improve access to public transport for disabled people in Coventry South. [39235]

Ms Buck: 50 percent. of Travel Coventry's bus fleet are already low floor, wheelchair accessible vehicles.

We are supporting, through the local transport plan, Coventry Primelines which is the first phase in Coventry's plans to introduce a city wide quality bus network expanding the bus showcase concept over a wider area. The programme of works include provision of bus boarders, dropped kerbs and tactile paving. There are also proposals to introduce CCTV where appropriate. The scheme started this year and is due to compete in 2009.

At a national level there has been significant progress in making public transport accessible to disabled people through regulations made under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (DDA 1995). We made the Rail Vehicle Accessibility Regulations in 2000 and many of the trains calling at the station comply with those. Disabled people in Coventry, for example, are benefiting from the RVAR compliant trains which are now serving their area.

More generally disabled people in Coventry South as elsewhere in the country will also benefit from the provisions in the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 (DDA 2005). We have already laid regulations which will, from December 2006, lift the transport exemption in Part 3 of the Act for land-based public transport, vehicle hire, breakdown services and vehicles used on leisure and tourism transport services. We will also be consulting shortly on draft regulations to set an "end date" of no later than 1 January 2020 for when all trains will have to meet the rail vehicle accessibility regulations and to apply those regulations to older trains when they are refurbished.

Railways

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with rail franchisees on linking extended franchise periods to increased investment in rolling stock. [37726]

Derek Twigg: Extensions to existing franchise periods are currently under discussion in only two cases; Silverlink and Central Trains. In both cases the extensions are for short periods and increased investment in rolling stock does not therefore form part of the discussions. No other extensions to existing franchises are currently planned.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of the implications for high speed train passenger safety of passengers standing; and if he will make a statement; [30729]

(2) what recent discussions he has had with train operating companies on passenger health and safety during periods of overcrowding on trains. [30732]

Derek Twigg: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE), the safety regulator for the railways, has not been persuaded that there are significant safety concerns associated with standing passengers travelling on high speed (or other) trains.

A report by the Health and Safety Executive in 1999, entitled 'Implications of overcrowding on railways', concluded that whether a passenger on a train involved in an incident is sitting or standing makes little difference to the overall severity of any injuries sustained. A copy of this report is available in the House Library.

As part of the approval process for rolling stock, the HSE takes into account the safety of both seated and standing passengers. Train operators monitor the levels of crowding on their trains.

The Secretary of State has discussions with train operators on a wide range of topics, including how they respond to crowding.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the average number of return journeys per week on the direct train service between Bath Spa station and London Waterloo station in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [31194]

Derek Twigg: The information is not available in the form requested. Ticket sales figures include London as a destination but do not distinguish between different London termini. On average, there were 4700 return journeys between Bath Spa and London termini (London Paddington or London Waterloo) each week last year. The majority of these journeys would have been to London Paddington owing to the quicker journey time. Bath Spa -London Paddington takes one hour 50 minutes. Bath Spa- London Waterloo takes two hours 40 minutes.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the total length of rail track in the UK is; and what it was in 1997. [5222]

Derek Twigg: Network Rail advises that its network currently comprises 10,014 route miles. In 1997–98 the network was recorded as 10,350 route miles.

Network Rail has advised that this 336 route mile difference in total network length appears to reflect primarily refinements to its methodology for collecting and collating track length data, rather than physical changes to the rail network. The Office of Rail Regulation has said that it has not specifically carried out a verification exercise on the change but believes Network Rail's explanation to be credible.

Network Rail has said that the following factors might contribute towards the 336 mile total:

transfer of use of track from heavy to light rail;

closure of depots (freight, maintenance etc);

closure or transfer of ownership of freight spurs and sidings; differences of definition e.g. whether routes no longer open to traffic are included or excluded; use of different source documents; and transfer of ownership of route from the national to the heritage rail network e.g. Wensleydale railway.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions he has met representatives of the rail franchisees; where these meetings took place; how many people where present on each occasion; and if he will place copies of the minutes of these meetings in the Library. [26516]

Derek Twigg: Ministers meet on many occasions with rail franchisees. Matters discussed at many of them are confidential for commercial or other reasons. It would not therefore be practicable or appropriate to place minutes in the Library.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what total (a) public and (b) private sector monies have been spent on capital infrastructure improvements on the (i) East Coast Mainline, (ii) West Coast Mainline and (iii) Paddington to Penzance line since privatisation. [27787]

Derek Twigg: The Department does not hold detailed records on the allocation of funding for renewal and improvement of the infrastructure for individual lines. Network Rail is responsible for the maintenance of infrastructure, within the funding limits determined by the Office of Rail Regulation (ORR). I have requested that Network Rail write to the hon. Member with the spending figures requested.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the (a) morning and (b) afternoon or evening (i) peak number of trains, (ii) number of passengers, (iii) number of passengers in excess capacity and (iv) proportion and total number of passengers in excess capacity was for each of the last five years for each train operating company service to and from London terminals. [34725]

Derek Twigg: Passengers in Excess of Capacity (PIXC) applies to weekday commuter trains arriving in London between 07:00 and 09:59 and those departing between 16:00 and 18:59. The measure is derived from the number of passengers travelling in excess of capacity on all services divided by the total number of people travelling, expressed as a percentage. PIXC counts are carried out once a year, on a typical weekday during the autumn.

Focus is being given to improve timetabling, infrastructure maintenance, renewals and other factors that can impact on reliable delivery of train services, which in turn will impact on crowding levels. The Department will continue to review train counts and train plans to gain comfort that resources are being deployed effectively.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what efficiency and performance targets will be set for the new East Midlands rail franchise; and what sanctions will be imposed if the operator fails to meet them. [36630]

Derek Twigg: The specification of the new East Midlands franchise, including performance targets is currently being developed by the Department of Transport. The franchise specification is expected to go out to public consultation in summer 2006.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average percentage change in rail fares was in each year since 1997. [38461]

Derek Twigg: Fares increased on average by 6.3 percent. in real terms from 1995 to 2005. Regulated fares (most commuter fares plus saver returns) decreased by 4.2 percent. over the same period.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people have been employed by (a) train operating companies and (b) railway companies in each year since 1997. [38462]

Derek Twigg: The data requested is not held by the Department and the information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passengers the UK's railways can transport at any one time. [38464]

Derek Twigg: There are an average of 3 million passenger journeys each day within the United Kingdom.

Passenger numbers are increasing with patronage up 40 per cent. in the last 10 years. Britain has the fastest growing passenger use in Europe. Over 1 billion passengers used the UK railway in 2004.

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 13 December 2005, Official Report, column 1857W, on First Great Western Services, by whom records on the reliability and punctuality of rail services between London and Worcestershire are kept. [38542]

Derek Twigg: Records on the reliability and punctuality of rail services at the level of detail needed to establish the level of performance between London and Worcestershire are held by Network Rail.

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the implications of his policy of promoting traffic restraint in major regional cities for the level of passenger rolling stock required for the commuter rail networks serving those cities. [38702]

Derek Twigg: It is for local transport authorities to determine the appropriate balance between transport modes in the context of their local transport plans and policies. As part of this process, they will need to take account of the capacity of their regional rail networks. The Department will continue to consult with relevant local transport authorities in developing the future specification of the railway.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent campaigns his Department has undertaken to tackle trespass on the railways by children. [38228]

Derek Twigg: Ministers have discussed with the industry action to reduce trespass and have supported initiatives undertaken by Partners Against Railway Crime, a partnership of rail industry organisations which co-ordinates campaigns to reduce trespass on the network. Activities specifically targeting at children have been branded as part of the "track off" campaign and have included free resources for use in schools (including video material), teaching plans, community newsletters and speakers for talks in schools.

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many times he met Network Rail in 2005; and what was discussed. [28841]

Derek Twigg: Ministers meet representatives of Network Rail on many occasions and a range of subjects are discussed.

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will lift the moratorium on considering rail passenger partnership support for the Newcastle-Blyth-Ashington rail line. [38025]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 15 December 2005]: There are no plans to re-instate the rail passenger partnership funding programme.

Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will arrange for the publication of the full report and background paper produced for the Strategic Rail Authority on a north-south high speed rail line. [38179]

Derek Twigg: A summary of the Strategic Rail Authority's report on a north-south high-speed rail line is available in the House Library and from the Department for Transport's website.

The full report is confidential because it includes potential route alignments, and could lead to severe planning blight if released.

The Government has a manifesto commitment to look at the north-south high-speed link. This will be taken forward in the context of Sir Rod Eddington's study and the high-level output specification for the railways.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 329W, on train operating companies, what the net performance bonus for each qualifying train operating company was in each year between 1997–98 and 2004–05; and what the difference between performance penalties and net performance bonuses was (a) for all train operating companies combined in each year between 1997–98 and 2004–05 and (b) for each train operating company during the period 1997–98 to 2004–05. [36906]

Derek Twigg: The performance regime the Department has in place with franchised train operators takes account of all train lateness on a train-by-train basis. When financial calculations are made every four-weeks, a single payment encompasses all the bonus and penalty elements occurring during that time period. These in turn aggregate into annual sums shown on the following table, which represent the net performance bonus to (or penalty payment from), each train operating company in each year requested. The amount shown is therefore the overall difference between performance penalties and bonuses.

In addition to my answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, columns 329–30W, I regret that an error occurred when the penalty cost figures quoted in my earlier answer were being compiled. The following table gives corrected figures.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will undertake an investigation into reliability of trains on Great Western lines; and if he will suspend the franchise process until reliability has improved. [36914]

Derek Twigg: Joint action plans are in place between Network Rail (who have overall responsibility for performance) and First Great Western and Wessex Trains to address performance trends. These are monitored monthly.

The new Great Western franchise awarded to First Group plc, announced on 13 December contains clear and improving performance targets which the operator must meet.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had on imposing penalties on train operating companies for operating trains that are overcrowded; and if he will make a statement. [37964]

Derek Twigg: There are no proposals to apply penalties to train operating companies where trains are overcrowded. Train operators and Network Rail work together to make best use of available capacity to reduce overcrowding.

Focus is being given to improve timetabling, infrastructure maintenance and renewals and other factors that can impact on reliable delivery of train services, which in turn will impact on crowding levels. We will continue to review train counts and train plans to assess that resources are being deployed effectively.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many trains have been removed from service in each year since 1997. [38421]

Derek Twigg: This information is not held centrally by the Department. However following major investment in the network, a total of around 4200 new vehicles have been brought into service since 1996. This has resulted in the replacement of around 2000 Mark 1 slam door vehicles. It has also led to complete fleet replacements on the C2C, West Coast and Cross Country passenger services and replacement of some vehicles on other routes which were approaching the end of their operating life.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many people have been carried on the UK's trains in each year since 1997; and how many people he expects to be carried in each of the next five years; [38423]

(2) how many passengers used the railways in each year since 1997. [38458]

Derek Twigg: Information on the numbers of passengers that have used the railways in each year since 1997, is contained in the Office of Rail Regulation's publication, National Rail Trends, a copy of which has been placed in the House Library.

The Department for Transport's latest published projections for rail usage are set out in the paper "The Future of Transport: Modelling and Analysis" published on 21 March 2005. The central projection shows rail passenger kilometres increasing by 33 percent. between 2000 and 2010 implying growth of around 3.5 percent. a year for the rest of the decade.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new trains have been purchased in each year since 1997; and what the cost of each new train was. [38463]

Derek Twigg: The information is as follows:

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what models of break-glass hammers have been considered for approval for use on trains but have not been approved; and for what reasons in each case; [33691]

(2) what the assessment process is for the evaluation of break-glass hammers for trains to determine whether they are fit for purpose. [33717]

(3) what models of break-glass hammers are approved for use on trains. [33718]

Derek Twigg: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) is the independent health and safety regulator for rail. The emergency evacuation arrangements of rail carriages are approved by the HSE under the Railways and Transport Systems (Approval of Works, Plant and Equipment) Regulations 1964 (ROTS). These regulations require the train operator companies to ensure that break-glass hammers are fit for the purpose to which they are installed. HSE do not hold on record the types of hammers considered by train operators.

The Rail Safety and Standards Board is currently undertaking research to determine the appropriate requirements for break-glass hammers as part of wider research into train evacuation.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria are used for selecting models of break-glass hammers for approved use on trains. [36331]

Derek Twigg: It is the responsibility of the train operating company to ensure that the break-glass hammers they select and bring into service are fit for purpose. HSE do not themselves hold records on the types of hammers considered by train operating companies or the selection criteria used.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects his Department's assessment of break-glass hammers for trains to be completed. [36343]

Derek Twigg: The DfT is not conducting an assessment of break-glass hammers although the Rail Safety and Standards Board are currently undertaking research into passenger emergency evacuation procedures. This will include an assessment of the effectiveness of break-glass hammers.

RSSB anticipate the assessment of break-glass hammers to be complete by Quarter 2 (April—June) 2006 with the whole report planned for completion by Quarter 3 (July—September) 2006.

Rates

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was paid by his Department in rates to each local authority in the UK in 2004–05; and how much was paid in (a) each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK and (b) London. [35996]

Ms Buck: The information requested is as follows:

(a) The total paid in rates to each local authority in the UK in 2004–05 has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

(a) (i) The total paid in each nation is as follows:

Nation	Rates 2004–05
England	9,702,688
Northern Ireland	22,646
Scotland	648,252
Wales	1,156,602

(a) (ii) The total paid in each region of the UK is as follows:

Region	Rates 2004–05
East Midlands	471,148
East of England	449,072
London	4,320,470
North East	247,800

South East	953,330
South West	689,831
West Midlands	640,988

Owing to operational requirements The Maritime and Coastguard Agency's activities are organised across three regional boundaries: northern, western and eastern. These regional boundaries do not correspond to the Government office regional boundaries and the information requested can be provided only at disproportionate costs. The data in the table therefore does not include Maritime and Coastguard Agency sites.

(b) The total paid in rates in London was £4,320,470.

Rebated Diesel Fuel

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the demand for rebated diesel fuel (a) for each year since 1997 and (b) for each of the next five years; and if he will make a statement. [38884]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

Historic demand or clearances for rebated diesel fuel can be found on page 2 of the HM Revenue and Customs Hydrocarbon Oils Bulletin, a copy of which is available on the HMRC website at: http://www.uk tradeinfo.com/index.cfm?task = bullhydro.

The excise duty receipts forecast for hydrocarbon oils was published in the pre-Budget report 2005, table B14.

Ms Buck: Transport for London has provided the following information on traffic signal sites[1] in each London borough:

Road Traffic Accidents

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the cost to the public purse of road traffic accidents in each year since 1997, broken down by category of severity of accident. [38453]

Dr. Ladyman: The values used to estimate the benefits of the prevention of road accidents are set out in the "Highways Economic Note No. 1: 2004 Valuation of the Benefits of Prevention of Road Accidents and Casualties" which can be found on the DfT website at:

http://www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_rdsafety/documents/divisionhomepage/030763.hcsp.

Rolling Stock

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 325W, on rolling stock, (1) what assessment he has made of reasons for the difference in the number of orders placed in 1998 and 2003; [36905]

(2) what assessment he has made of the reasons for the difference in the numbers of new train vehicles ordered in 1996 and 2002; and what the value of each order of rolling stock was from (a) Bombardier, (b) Siemens, (c) Alstom and (d) CAF/Siemens in each year between 1996 and 2004; [36963]

(3) what assessment he has made of the reasons why there were no orders for train vehicles assembled in the United Kingdom in 2004; and what assessment he has made of reasons for fluctuations in numbers of orders of train vehicles assembled in the United Kingdom in the period from 1996 to 2004. [36965]

Derek Twigg: Rolling Stock is ordered by train operators and rolling stock leasing companies not by the Department. The Department has not made an assessment of fluctuation in rolling stock orders.

Large numbers of orders were placed between 1996 and 2002 as part of a major programme of rolling stock renewal. The majority of the new trains have now been delivered. There were no new orders in 2004 because orders had already been placed for the trains needed.

The information requested is set out in the following tables. I regret that an error occurred when the figures for rolling stock orders quoted in my earlier answers of 29 November 2005, Official Report, Columns 325–26W, were being compiled. The following four tables give corrected totals:

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many ships of over 1,000 gross register tons with registered owners in (a) Scotland, (b) Wales, (c) each of the English regions and (d) Northern Ireland are identified as (i) barge carriers, (ii) bulk carriers, (iii) cargo ships, (iv) chemical tankers, (v) colliers, (vi) combination bulk carriers, (vii) combination tankers, (viii) container ships, (ix) liquefied gas tankers, (x) livestock carriers, (xi) multi-functional large-load carriers, (xii) passenger ferries, (xiii) passenger and cargo ships, (xiv) petroleum tankers, (xv) rail car carriers, (xvi) refrigerated cargo carriers, (xvii) roll-on/roll-off ferries, (xviii) short-sea passenger ferries, (xix) specialized tankers, (xx) vehicle carriers and (xxi) others; [39206]

Sonic Passive Defence Systems

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what frequency sonic passive defence systems on cruise ships use. [38847]

Dr. Ladyman: These devices are capable of emitting an extremely irritating noise at a frequency of around 2kHz.

St. Helens Metropolitan Borough Council

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions have taken place between officials in his Department and the chief executive of St. Helens metropolitan borough council since June; what means of communication was used in each case; and if he will place in the Library (a) minutes and (b) submissions relating to such communications. [35192]

Derek Twigg: There have been no such discussions.

Station Platforms (Accidents)

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions his Department has had with train operating companies on reducing the number of accidents on railway station platforms during periods of inclement winter weather. [38267]

Derek Twigg: This is a matter for the Health and Safety Executive's Railways Inspectorate, whose inspectors visit local stations to ensure that station managers have arrangements in place to deal with hazardous weather conditions.

Taxis

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent by his Department on taxi travel in the 2005–06 financial year; and what proportion of such travel was undertaken in each nation and region of the UK, including London. [37458]

Ms Buck: In financial year 2005–06, the Department for Transport has spent £43,702.79 on taxi travel within the UK up to the end of November.

A regional breakdown of such travel within UK could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

This figure does not include the Department's agencies as they do not record taxi fares separately from other travel costs and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Trams

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the total cost to (a) his Department and (b) the promoting authorities was of the development of the tram proposals in (i) Leeds, (ii) Merseyside and (iii) South Hampshire. [38719]

Derek Twigg: I refer the hon. Member to the answer of 6 July 2005, Official Report, column 479W.

Transport Infrastructure (East Sussex)

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much money has been spent on improvements in transport infrastructure in East Sussex since 1997; and what proportion of this expenditure was spent in Battle, East Sussex. [39053]

Ms Buck: Since the introduction of Local Transport Plans in 2000, East Sussex has received around £58 million for local transport improvements and maintenance schemes. In addition the county has received almost £5 million for major local transport schemes. We do not have the data to identify a figure separately for local transport investment in Battle. Funding for trunk roads is neither allocated nor recorded on a county by county basis but we can say that around £22 million has been invested in the following schemes in East Sussex since 2000: A27 Polegate Bypass (£19.3 million); A27 Ashcombe Roundabout (£1.3 million) and A21 John's Cross Roundabout (£1.7 million). East Sussex has also benefited from the new trains and associated power supply and depot upgrades delivered as part of the Mark 1 "slam door" stock replacement programme, the total value of the investment being in the region of £2 billion.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what representations he has received regarding the Battle Local Area Transport Strategy; and whether he will be implementing the strategy's recommendations; [39054]

(2) what recent representations he has received regarding improvements in transport infrastructure in Battle, East Sussex. [39249]

Ms Buck: None specifically. East Sussex county council submitted their provisional Local Transport Plan to Government in July this year. It includes the intention to take forward a number of Local Area Transport Strategies, including one for Battle. It will be for East Sussex county council to submit a final plan in March 2006 and to implement the strategies set-out within that plan.

UK Airspace (Access Denial)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions in each of the last 10 years permission has been withheld to aircraft requesting access to UK airspace. [28866]

Ms Buck: International civil aviation is governed by the Chicago Convention. Under the convention, the International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO) is responsible for establishing minimum safety standards which contracting states are required to implement. States are required to recognise the certificates issued by other contracting states unless they have reason to believe that they have not been issued in accordance with ICAO standards.

Any airline from outside the EU, Iceland, Norway or Switzerland which wishes to pick up or put down passengers or cargo in the UK requires a permit from the Secretary of State for Transport. It is a condition of the permit that the airline should be operated in accordance with international safety standards established by ICAO.

If we have doubts about whether an aircraft or airline complies with international safety standards we will arrange for the aircraft to be inspected by the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA). Permits may be refused, and existing permits suspended or revoked by the Secretary of State. This may occur where there is a breach of a permit condition, which would include non-compliance with international safety standards; however action can also be taken for reasons other than safety. Permit decisions will be reviewed in the light of new information or changed circumstances. An up to date list of airlines which have been refused permits is maintained on the Department's website.

UK Fishing Fleet (Light Dues)

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the effect on the UK fishing fleet of applying to it the exemptions to light dues made available for the Republic of Ireland. [38438]

Dr. Ladyman: UK fishing vessels of 10 m and over registered length pay light dues and make use of the full range of aids provided by the General Lighthouse Authorities. Light dues paid by UK fishing vessels represent only a small contribution, £471,000 in 2004–05, towards the total light dues income of around £71.5 million.

Ultra-light Rail Systems

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will remove the regulations which prevent ultra-light rail systems from benefiting from road transport assistance schemes with particular reference to the (a) Low Carbon Vehicle Partnership and (b) New Technology Development Fund; [34002]

(2) what representations his Department has received on the designation of ultra- light rail as rail transport as opposed to road transport. [34003]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Transport provides financial assistance to incentivise the development and uptake of clean, low carbon road vehicles in the form of grants. These grants, previously known as the transport energy grants (which included the new vehicle technology fund), were suspended in March 2005 and revised, technology-neutral grants have been notified to the European Commission for State Aid clearance.

The grants aim to stimulate market transformation in the road vehicles sector and therefore focus on clean, low carbon alternatives to mainstream vehicles. The scope of the grants is not set in legislation, and is kept under review.

A National Audit Office report published in April 2004 recommended that the Department discuss with DTI the case for including light rail technologies in energy saving grants. These discussions took place and it was concluded that DTI funding and development programmes adequately addressed the recommendation

The Department has received representations on a number of occasions from two companies on the issue of ultra light rail designation.

United States-registered Aircraft

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many non-commercial aircraft registered in the United States used airports in the United Kingdom in each of the last 18 months; and which airports they used. [38718]

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport does not issue operating permits to foreign aircraft operating on a non-commercial basis and consequently does not hold information of this nature. Private flights (ie. where payment for carriage is not asked for) are not required to seek the prior permission of a State to overfly, land or make non-traffic stops (eg. to refuel). Commercial flights making non-traffic stops also do not need prior permission, as set out in Article 5 of the Chicago convention.

Lorries/Commercial Vans

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the total value of (a) new and (b) secondhand (i) lorries and (ii) commercial vans bought each year since 1997 was. [38764]

Alun Michael: I have been asked to reply.

The following table sets out answers to these questions to the extent that data is available.

For the UK auto industry, employment data is not separately available for car manufacturing, as the total for vehicles also includes commercial vehicles and engines. For completeness, the table also includes employment at component suppliers, although this understates the true size of the UK auto industry as many suppliers to the industry are classified in the statistics according to what they make (e.g. steel, glass). The ONS Annual Business Inquiry does not have employment data for 1997.

From this data, it can be deduced that UK auto industry productivity is improving, both in terms of cars made per worker per annum, and GVA per employee. These are important measures that indicate continuing improvements in UK's auto manufacturing competitiveness on the global stage.

As regards registrations data, new registrations are in the public domain and are quoted here. Used vehicle transaction data is normally a chargeable service from DVLA, but SMMT provides used car sales data on request, and this is quoted here.

Data on the value of vehicle sales, new or used, is commercially sensitive within the industry and not published. However, data is available from ONS on the value added generated by the motor trade and this is quoted here. Again, the value added generated per employee is on a rising trend, indicating continually improving efficiency and competitiveness.
